The guards around the Royal palace and the university were increased today, and reserves were in readiness in case of disorder.

The minister of the interior said that Lieut. Other police chiefs may also be removed from their posts for the same reason.

SPANISH CABINET WILL SUPPORT KING ALFONSO

MADRID, Feb. 28.—(AP)—The Spanish cabinet, after a three-hour session devoted to discussion of the present political situation and of current propaganda against the monarchy, tonight declared it would unwaveringly support King Alfonso in every move he took and was determined to protect him from attack by his enemies.

The cabinet council declared the government would not permit any attack against the normal political life of Spain. It officially and severely condemned the attitude taken by former Premier Sanchez Guerra in a speech last night in which he said he could no longer support King Alfonso.

The ministers stated that they were surprised at this declaration, and that it would mean that in the future the government will not allow political meetings directed against the monarchy.

A crowd of a thousand or more of her screen followers stood silently outside.

The body lay in a casket of silver and bronze, covered with lilies of the valley and maiden hair. Suspended behind the bier was a green cloth, showered with white roses. Bank upon bank of flowers, sweet peas and pink roses predominating, hid the chapel walls.

The Rev. Michael J. Mullins, pastor of the Roman Catholic Church of the Good Shepherd, said the last rites for the actress, who died last Sunday after a long illness from tuberculosis.

Mrs. Mary Normand, her mother, and Gladys Normand, her sister, arrived two hours before the services from their home at Staten Island, New York. They were accompanied to the grave by the actress' husband, Lew Cody.

Some of those who gathered to pay their final respects to the star of countless motion picture comedies were Marion Davies, Mary Pickford, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Lloyd, Mr. and Mrs. Ben Turpin, Marie Dressler, Norman Kerry, Creighton Hale, Constance Talmadge, Jean Hersholt, Leatrice Joy, Jack Mulhall, Mae Marsh and Marshall Neilan.

CLAIM OF $19,000,000 FORTUNE OF MRS. HELEN S. BLAKE

NEW YORK, Feb. 28.—(AP)— Three Massachusetts women will sail on the liner Aquitania tomorrow to carry into the British court of chancery their claim to the $19,000,000 fortune of Mrs. Helen Sheridan Blake, widow of General Robert Dudley Blake, who amassed his money in India. Mrs. Blake died intestate in England in 1876.

The three women, who claim they are the nearest living relatives of Mrs. Blake, are Mrs. Annie Minihan and Miss Ella Leoyard, both of Charlestown, Mass., and Mrs. Mary Flynn of Winthrop, Mass. With them as their representative will go Charles W. F. Scott of New York, who said that his wife also has a claim upon the estate.

Scott said the immediate cause of the trip was a royal fiat issued in England, granting the American claimants the right to sue for the estate. He said the estate was paid into the British treasury by the courts of chancery some time after Mrs. Blake's death.

He added that the three Massachusetts women have spent $30,000 in the past five years preparing their claims. The money was spent chiefly in genealogical investigation, he said.

Murderous Maniac Barricaded In Home

Eight Sticks of Dynamite Were Used to Blow Him Out of Closet—Had Slain His Wife.

DEFIANCE, Ohio, Feb. 28.—(AP)—Eight sticks of dynamite thrown at the head of the stairway, blew Henry Floehr, 60, escaped inmate from the Toledo state hospital for the insane, out of an upstairs closet of his home here tonight, where he had battled police and National guardsmen for three hours.

The man was found dead when the authorities entered the house.

The man had slain his wife and wounded Chief of Police Karl Weaner and two spectators.

The dynamite was set at the door of the upstairs closet while members of the Defiance Howitzer company of the Ohio National guard hammered 21-pound shots through the upper windows from a station about a half block away, and bullets from a machine gun peppered the house. While the concerted attack was going on he confined himself to a closet but with windows shattered the tear gas failed to bring him out.

Floehr when carried out was found to have been wounded in the abdomen and about the mouth. Part of the roof of the house was blown off.

The man had quarreled with his wife and in a rage shot her, according to William, a son. While the son attempted to carry the woman outside, the enraged man turned on him and the son dropped the body and fled for aid.

Police and deputies were summoned but when they attempted to enter, Floehr, with a pistol and shot gun fired at them from upstairs windows through the glass.

Chief Weaner, braving the gun fire, led a squad through the front door and threw a tear gas bomb to the head of the stairs. As he started to mount the stairs, Floehr shot him, inflicting a minor wound in the cheek, below the eye.

From his point of vantage the man man would take pot shots at anyone who approached.

One shot struck William Chappel, a spectator, in the hip. Another spectator, Newell Littlefield, of Newport, Maine, a senior in Defiance college, was shot through the chest and his condition tonight was critical.

The tear gas, failing to take effect, the police retreated and summoned a fire truck. The police decided, however, that a stream of water from a fire hose would be ineffective and the National guard company was called out.

The company planted a one-pound gun about a half block away from the house and sent shots through the upper windows. A machine gun also was stationed beside it to send a supplemental barrage. While the barrage was forcing Floehr to lie low, the dynamite was planted.

The battle, with the patter of rifle fire and the roar of the one pounder, attracted pedestrians and motorists for miles around.

Floehr is said to have escaped from the state hospital for the insane last April. He was a retired builder and contractor. The couple is survived by two sons and four daughters.

PLANE FLYING LOW OVER AUBURN PRISON FIRED UPON

AUBURN, N. Y., Feb. 28.—(AP)—State troopers on the walls of Auburn prison tonight fired upon and drove off an airplane that circled low over Auburn prison several times.

It was feared the plane was trying to drop arms into the yard or signal to some prisoner.

The sixty troopers on duty manned the walls and the machine guns were planted.

Officers reported they were ready for the plane should it return. It flew toward the west when fired upon. The yard had not yet been searched for anything it might have dropped.

Robbers Posed As Musica[illegible] Students

Attemp[illegible] Get Away With Pa[illegible] of More Than [illegible] At Bank Door [illegible]ewark.

[illegible]ARK, N. J., Feb. 28.—(AP)—Three handsome young robbers, posing as musical students, today unlimbered a sawed-off shot gun from a violin case and attempted to get away with a payroll of more than $25,000 at the doors of the Port Newark National bank.

They were outwitted by a Negro messenger, Ossie W. Danneman, who threw the bag of money into the bank and followed it with a rush, and Patrolman James Bennett, who protected that maneuver with a barrage of bullets. Bennett received a slug in the leg in an exchange of shots.

The robbers had considerable difficulty in escaping. Residents of the neighborhood believed a fourth man waited nearby at the wheel of an automobile but he apparently fled without his companions when things began to look bad.

Rushing around a corner into the yard of a varnish company, a seven-foot fence blocked escape. Instead of trying to scale the wall, the three kicked boards loose and pushed through.

They panted into Anthony Trotto's store at 195 Parkhurst street, kidnaped Trotto's 20-year-old son, John, and in a machine used for grocery deliveries, forced him to drive them to safety.

Advertising Is Cure for Slumps

To the man in business there is probably nothing of greater interest than a cure for "slumps." It is to the expert that he naturally turns so that there will be food for serious reflection in the statement concerning retail business which was made in a lecture on advertising at Boston university by Henry Yozell, general manager and advertising director of Scott Furrier's New England stores, who said:

"Only by advertsing through the entire 12 months can we avoid seasonal changes in business. Our appropriation is being increased each year and when business is a little off, due to weather conditions or other elements which might retard sales, we even increase our advertising. And we also advertise strongly when the demand is already there."

In the $500,000 spent in advertising in the past two years the greater part was placed by Mr. Yozell in newspapers.

A word to the wise is sufficient. The Bulletin's advertising columns are always at your service.

DR. SNOOK EXECUTED FOR THE MURDER OF THEOBA HIX

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Feb. 28.—(AP)—Displaying the same iron nerve that carried him through six months of residence in the deathouse at Ohio State penitentiary, Dr. James Howard Snook, university professor, went to his death in the electric chair tonight for the murder of his co-ed companion, Theora Hix. The current was turned on at 7:04 and he was pronounced dead at 7:09:30 p. m.

He received three contacts of 2,000 volts each.

Dr. Snook appeared to be the calmest man in the execution chamber. He entered accompanied by three guards. His eyes were red—as if he had cried after his last meeting with his wife. He walked with firm step and head erect. As the two chair guards took him by the arm, the doctor stepped forward briskly and sat down in the death chair.

He was accompanied into the room by two ministers, Rev. Isaac Miller of the King Avenue M. E. church, his pastor, and Rev. K. E. Wall, prison chaplain. The death house was crowded.

Two guards took the doctor by the arms and strapped him in the death chair. Another adjusted the mask, and a second before the current was turned on, Rev. Mr. Miller intoned in solemn voice, "The Lord be with you."

TO HAVE FRENCH CABINET COMPLETED NEXT THURSDAY

PARIS, Feb. 28.—(AP)—Andre Tardieu today informed President Doumergue that he was certain to have his new cabinet before parliament at 3 p. m., next Thursday.

He made that statement after a laborious day in which he encountered stubborn opposition from the left groups, but he hopes to have his ministry completed for Sunday and then to get it into shape for the parliamentary appearance.

The conviction is growing in chamber circles that should Tardieu meet defeat on his initial appearance before the deputies, as was the fate of Camille Chautemps, President Doumergue is resolved to call upon a joint meeting of the senate and chamber for a vote on dissolution.

Thus far the only portfolio Tardieu is willing to say is definitely arranged is that of foreign affairs, of which Aristide Briand is chief.

DRIVE FOR A TARIFF ON OIL DENOUNCED IN THE SENATE

Senator Blaine, Republican, Maine, a Member of the Senate Lobby Committee, Asserted That Every Method Known to Lobbying Had Been Practiced By the American Independent Petroleum Producers' Association—Charge Made In Opposing Proposed Duty of $1 a Barrel On Crude Oil.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28—(AP)—A charge that the American Independent Petroleum Producers association in carrying on a drive for an oil tariff, was "even willing to trade the president of the United States in on this deal," was made in the senate tonight by Senator Blaine, Republican, Wisconsin.

Blaine, a member of the senate lobby committee which today questioned Wirt Franklin, president of the oil association, concerning its campaign for an oil duty, attacked the association, as the senate neared a vote on an amendment by Senator Thomas, democrat, Oklahoma, to place a duty of $1 a barrel on crude oil. He said "the senate and the country are entitled to know the devious means and methods used by the association in an attempt to influence the senate to vote for a tariff on oil."

Blaine charged that "every method known to lobbying was practiced by this lobby," adding that "most nefarious and damnable methods intended to bring into public disrepute members of this body were used."

As he made this statement he pointed to Senator Dale, republican, Vermont, who was mentioned in testimony as having discussed "trading in legislation with one of the oil representatives." Dale later issued a statement denying the testimony.

Blaine asserted the organization had "established a new industry—a trade in senators," and called Franklin the "chief of the lobbyists."

"I doubt if there has been another lobby before the committee," he shouted, "which has been so active, so aggressive and so ruthless in their approach to senators."

Blaine said the association officers planned to carry to President Hoover a "rumor that was prevalent in the Continental Oil region that he (the president) was a large stockholder in South American oil and extract from hi mg denial and then use that denial to advance their cause."

"They would trade senators," shouted the Wisconsin senator as the senate neared a vote on the proposed oil tariff, "they would trade the president, they would trade anybody if it were to advance their cause."

Blaine, a member of the senate lobby committee, which earlier in the day heard Wirt Franklin, president of the Independents' association, say that $50,000 had been raised by these producers to work for an oil duty, described the activities of this association as the "most nefarious and damnable" of all lobbies.

"They had a subtle, slimy method," he asserted, "designed to extract some information from the president and from the chairman of the committee on foreign relations so that they might use it to advance their cause."

Blaine read a telegram from F. E. Tucker of Ardmore, Oklahoma, secretary of the Independent Producers 'association to Franklin in which Tucker was quoted as having said:

"Would it be impertinent or impolite for me to write a courteous letter to President Hoover that he answer charges being circulated in the Continental oil fields that he is heavily interested in South American oil."

The association, he added, had "peddled about untrue statements and charged them to members of the senate as they did in the case of the junior senator from Vermont (Senator Dale.")

SENATE REJECTS TARIFF ON OIL AND GASOLINE

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28—(AP)—Climaxing one of the most dramatic scenes in the long tariff controversy, the senate tonight rejected by a dozen votes the Thomas proposal for a tariff on oil and gasoline.

The roll call which came shortly after ten o'clock showed 39 against a tariff and 27 for it.

The amendment voted upon, as introduced by Senator Thomas, democrat, Oklahoma, would have placed a tax on foreign crude oil of $1 a barrel and on gasoline and other by-products of petroleum of 50 per cent ad valorem based on American valuation.

Just prior to the final vote, the senate rejected 57 to 8 a rider by Senator Pittman, democrat, Nevada, which would have terminated the tariff on Jan. 1, 1934, and made it inoperative meanwhile if the price of crude oil at the point of production in either Oklahoma or Texas exceeded $1.75 a barrel. Pittman proposed this as a guard against over-production which he said he feared would result from a tariff.

Another rider by the Nevada senator to make the proposed duty on by-products ineffective during the four-year period if the retail price of gasoline went above 18 cents a gallon at New York city, exclusive of purchasers' tax, was rejected without a record vote.

FAMILY AWAITS THE DEATH OF WILLIAM HOWARD TAFT

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28.—(AP)—Weakness gradually encroached on William Howard Taft's resistance tonight and increased the uncertainty over how much longer he could live.

During one of his conscious moments he looked helplessly up from his sick bed into the face of his son. A gleam in his eyes showed that he recognized Robert A. Taft, who had arrived earlier from Cincinnati and was being followed from there by his brother, Charles P. Taft.

So weak was the former president and chief justice that he was unable to say a word. Previously the dying man also had recognized Dr. Francis R. Hagner and his sunken cheeks had rippled slightly into a smile. The smile was gone and the eyes closed almost at once, for then, too, Mr. Taft could not speak.

The physician afterward described Mr. Taft as "slightly weaker," and said he had not been able to take much nourishment.

"There is no decided change since yesterday," the bulletin added.

From time to time through the day persons called at the Taft residence to express their sympathy to Mrs. Taft because of her husband's critical condition. Ambassador Claudel of France was one. Mrs. Edward Everett Gann, sister of Vice-President Curtis, was another.

Various justices of the supreme court also conveyed their solicitude.

Mrs. Taft was being comforted by their daughter, Mrs. Helen Taft Manning, and other relatives.

NEWS FROM PARIS PLEASING TO NAVAL CONFERENCE

LONDON, Feb. 28.—(AP)—The news from Paris this afternoon that Andre Tardieu had definitely informed President Doumergue he would form a cabinet, gave naval conference circles encouragement that the present dragging phase of disarmament negotiations may be ended a day or two earlier than expected.

The supposition is that the French delegation may be able to return to London by the middle of next week.

Meanwhile, the Americans and Japanese will continue their efforts, as they did yesterday and today, to reach a compromise agreement on cruisers, submarines and other disputed points. The only meeting today was when Ambassador Matsudaira called upon Senator Reed to clear up points of yesterday's discussion.

KILLED BY TRAIN WHILE WALKING ON DRAWBRIDGE

NORWALK, Feb. 28.—(AP)—Michael Sullivan, 70, was struck and killed by a Boston to New York train of the New Haven railroad, today, while walking across the drawbridge over the Norwalk harbor. The victim, police said, was deaf.

Sullivan had finished his day's work at a garage where he was employed and was taking a short cut to his home over the bridge. The train, police said was traveling slowly, preparatory to stopping at the South Norwalk station, located a short distance from the bridge.

The aged man was walking with his back toward the approaching train. He suffered a fractured skull and a broken leg.

SENATE DISSATISFIED WITH LONDON NAVAL CONFERENCE

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28.—(AP)—Another note of dissatisfaction over the trend of the London naval arms conference, was sounded in the senate today with a suggestion by Senator McKellar, democrat, Tennessee, that the American delegates be recalled because of the attitude of the other four powers.

Senator McKellar insisted that the positions taken by the other participating countries precludes reduction or even limitation of navies, but Senator Vandenberg, republican, Michigan, cautioned against "premature pronouncements" and urged that the conferees be allowed a free hand.

There have been several outbursts in the senate against the course of the conference.

Senators Hale, republican, Maine, the chairman of the naval committee, and Borah, republican, Idaho, chairman of the foreign relations committee, both have spoken adversely of some proposals in the London parley. Both will have leading parts in the senate debate on any treaties emanating from the conference. Senator Borah will talk over the radio tomorrow night and may touch on the conference.

Senator McKellar argued that Great Britain, Japan, France and Italy, "instead of seeking a reduction of all armaments, are each laboriously and diligently seeking to increase their armaments, or to retain naval superiority over us."

FREED ON CHARGES OF MURDERING W. P. PARKER

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Feb. 28.—(AP)—A circuit court jury in three hours, 35 minutes today freed Harvey Jackson on charges that he murdered W. P. (Billy) Parker, former editor of the Menace.

The verdict climaxed a ten days' trial. Jackson was too overcome by the verdict to speak as he eagerly grasped the hands of the jurors.

The jury decided Jackson had acted in self-defense when he shot and killed Parker in the editorial office of the Blue Shirt, a labor paper, last September.

The state contended Jackson plotted the editor's death as a result of resentment at derogatory articles printed by Parker, but Jackson claimed he was forced to kill Parker when the latter advanced on him with a carpenter's square.

Parker came to the Blue Shirt from his editorialship of the Menace, an anti-Catholic paper.

GROWTH IN THE MOVEMENT FOR A REPUBLIC IN SPAIN

Government Is Giving Serious Consideration to Demonstrations In Madrid and Barcelona—Former Premier Guerra Has Declared That He Could No Longer Support King Alfonso—Guards Around the Palace Were Increased Yesterday—Ban Has Been Placed On Political Speeches.

MADRID, Feb. 28—(AP)—The Spanish government today gave serious consideration to the demonstrations for a republic and against the monarchy in Spain that flared up in Madrid and Barcelona after the speech of former Premier Sanchez last night.

King Alfonso is believed to have discussed the political situation at his regular conference with Premier Damasco Berenguer. He also received the visits of several army leaders, who presumably came to see him on the same errand.

Meanwhile the government announced that it would have to "take whatever energetic measures are necessary" and appealed to the citizens to maintain order. General Marzo, minister of the interior, declared "the government could not have been more tolerant than it has been. I am most pained that tolerance is being abused by the elements causing the disturbance."

Premier Berenguer, who has already brought back the firm domestic censorship on the press established the De Rivera dictatorship, is believed to be ready to proclaim martial law if the situation should warrant it.

It remains to be seen, however, whether the republican movement yet contains the germs of serious developments. Some well informed observers think it does not, and this is the expressed view of Premier Berenguer himself.

He told newspapermen that the disorders that took place were "lacking in importance," but that they "served to demonstrate that the government cannot permit, all of a sudden, the spread of political propaganda.

"We must on the contrary, put on the brakes, because certain elements which have nothing whatever to do with politics take advantage of these opportunities to further their own ends."

Former Premier Sanchez Guerra, who in a public speech last night admitted that there was a movement for a republic in Spain stronger than before and declared he could no longer support King Alfonso, was a center of interest today for all other political leaders.

His speech met with a varied reception. Premier Berenguer said he deeply regretted the former liberal premier's attitude toward the king, but felt he could not yet "pass an opinion on this matter."

Alejandro Lerroux, socialist leader and chief of the republicans, flatly declared that he was not satisfied with it. In radical quarters it was recognized that though Sanchez Guerra had apparently broken with the king he had not yet declared openly for a republic.

Antonio Sbert, one of the most prominent student leaders, who was exiled by Primo De Rivera to the Balearic islands during the university disorders preceding the downfall of the dictatorship, said he agreed "in principle," with Sanchez Guerra, but thought the former premier had been "too moderate in his statements."

The minor student disorders following Sanchez Guerra's speech last night who had an echo today in a demonstration by medical students. Groups appeared on the balconies of the university shouting "down with the monarchy! Hurrah for the republic!"

The government announced that a ban would be placed on political speeches in future believing that freedom of speech was unwise under present conditions.

The guards around the Royal palace and the university were increased today, and reserves were in readiness in case of disorder.

The minister of the interior said that Lieut. Col Jose Panguas and Captain Ramon Albarran of the department of public order, had been removed from the force for failing to give proper orders to the guards under their command to prevent the disorders last night. Other police chiefs may also be removed from their posts for the same reason.

SPANISH CABINET WILL SUPPORT KING ALFONSO

MADRID, Feb. 28.—(AP)—The Spanish cabinet, after a three-hour session devoted to discussion of the present political situation and of current propaganda against the monarchy, tonight declared it would unwaveringly support King Alfonso in every move he took and was determined to protect him from attack by his enemies.

The cabinet council declared the government would not permit any attack against the normal political life of Spain. It officially and severely condemned the attitude taken by former Premier Sanchez Guerra in a speech last night in which he said he could no longer support King Alfonso.

The ministers stated that they were surprised at this declaration, and that it would mean that in the future the government will not allow political meetings directed against the monarchy.

DINING HALL ON NORTH SIDE OF CHICAGO BOMBED

CHICAGO, Feb. 28—(AP)—Diners at the Club Algiers, a bright spot of Chicago's near North Side, were endangered early tonight and one musician is reported to have been injured by a bomb which was exploded under the orchestra platform at the club.

The explosion was set off during a slack period of patronage. Only one musician was near the stand at the time of the explosion.

The explosive was placed against a wall behind the orchestra stand. The wall was shattered and a piano overturned by the force of the blast.

Club Algiers is said to be owned by David "Cock-Eyed Mulligan" Ablin, whose pretentious club Epicure was boarded up several months ago following a raid. Club Algiers also was preparing to close because of a prohibition padlock secured recently by government authorities.

Authorities professed to see a liquor argument behind the bombing.

The blast shattered windows in the building, the lower floor of which is a postal sub-station, and in other buildings in the vicinity and routed guests of nearby hotels from their rooms.

PROVISIONAL PRESIDENT FOR DOMINICAN REPUBLIC

SANTO DOMINGO, Feb. 28.—(AP)—The governmental forces of President Horacio Vasquez, and the insurgent leaders of the movement against him, with the apparent approval of the American minister, today agreed on a provisional president for the Dominican republic. He is General Rafael Estrella Urena, one of the insurgent leaders.

At noon President Vasquez, against whose continuation in office during the presidential elections the insurgent movement started, signed a decree appointing General Estrella Urena, secretary of state for the interior. According to the constitution, this member of the cabinet acts as president in the absence of the president and of the vice-president.

At the same time President Vasquez asked the national assembly to permit him to leave the republic and to stay in a foreign country. He gave ill health as his reason for making such a request before his term of office was over.

Prior to departure, the agriculture secretary attended a meeting of the cabinet at which conditions of both the wheat and cotton markets were discussed fully with the president. Mr. Hoover was represented to be optimistic for general improvement as a result of the upturn in the market.

While he did not confirm a report that he would carry a personal message from the president to the wheat advisory committee, the secretary said that Mr. Hoover was "keenly interested" in its deliberations.

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 28.—(AP)—Filmdom's great and a large following of faithful movie fans paid their last respects here today to Mabel Normand at brief funeral services.

A crowd of a thousand or more of her screen followers stood silently outside.

The body lay in a casket of silver and bronze, covered with lilies of the valley and maiden hair. Suspended behind the bier was a green cloth, showered with white roses. Bank upon bank of flowers, sweet peas and pink roses predominating, hid the chapel walls.

The Rev. Michael J. Mullins, pastor of the Roman Catholic Church of the Good Shepherd, said the last rites for the actress, who died last Sunday after a long illness from tuberculosis.

Mrs. Mary Normand, her mother, and Gladys Normand, her sister, arrived two hours before the services from their home at Staten Island, New York. They were accompanied to the grave by the actress' husband, Lew Cody.

CLAIM OF $19,000,000 FORTUNE OF MRS. HELEN S. BLAKE

NEW YORK, Feb. 28.—(AP)—Three Massachusetts women will sail on the liner Aquitania tomorrow to carry into the British court of chancery their claim to the $19,000,000 fortune of Mrs. Helen Sheridan Blake, widow of General Robert Dudley Blake, who amassed his money in India. Mrs. Blake died intestate in England in 1876.

The three women, who claim they are the nearest living relatives of Mrs. Blake, are Mrs. Annie Minihan and Miss Ella Leoyard, both of Charlestown, Mass., and Mrs. Mary Flynn of Winthrop, Mass. With them as their representative will go Charles W. F. Scott of New York, who said that his wife also has a claim upon the estate.

Scott said the immediate cause of the trip was a royal fiat issued in England, granting the American claimants the right to sue for the estate. He said the estate was paid into the British treasury by the courts of chancery some time after Mrs. Blake's death.

He added that the three Massachusetts women have spent $30,000 in the past five years preparing their claims. The money was spent chiefly in genealogical investigation, he said.

Murderous Maniac Barricaded In Home

Eight Sticks of Dynamite Were Used to Blow Him Out of Closet—Had Slain His Wife.

DEFIANCE, Ohio, Feb. 28.—(AP)—Eight sticks of dynamite thrown at the head of the stairway, blew Henry Floehr, 60, escaped inmate from the Toledo state hospital for the insane, out of an upstairs closet of his home here tonight, where he had battled police and National guardsmen for three hours.

The man was found dead when the authorities entered the house.

The man had slain his wife and wounded Chief of Police Karl Weaner and two spectators.

The dynamite was set at the door of the upstairs closet while members of the Defiance Howitzer company of the Ohio National guard hammered 21-pound shots through the upper windows from a station about a half block away, and bullets from a machine gun peppered the house. While the concerted attack was going on he confined himself to a closet but with windows shattered the tear gas failed to bring him out.

Floehr when carried out was found to have been wounded in the abdomen and about the mouth. Part of the roof of the house was blown off.

The man had quarreled with his wife and in a rage shot her, according to William, a son. While the son attempted to carry the woman outside, the enraged man turned on him and the son dropped the body and fled for aid.

Police and deputies were summoned but when they attempted to enter, Floehr, with a pistol and shot gun fired at them from upstairs windows through the glass.

Chief Weaner, braving the gun fire, led a squad through the front door and threw a tear gas bomb to the head of the stairs. As he started to mount the stairs, Floehr shot him, inflicting a minor wound in the cheek, below the eye.

From his point of vantage the man man would take pot shots at anyone who approached.

One shot struck William Chappel, a spectator, in the hip. Another spectator, Newell Littlefield, of Newport, Maine, a senior in Defiance college, was shot through the chest and his condition tonight was critical.

The tear gas, failing to take effect, the police retreated and summoned a fire truck. The police decided, however, that a stream of water from a fire hose would be ineffective and the National guard company was called out.

The company planted a one-pound gun about a half block away from the house and sent shots through the upper windows. A machine gun also was stationed beside it to send a supplemental barrage. While the barrage was forcing Floehr to lie low, the dynamite was planted.

The battle, with the patter of rifle fire and the roar of the one pounder, attracted pedestrians and motorists for miles around.

Floehr is said to have escaped from the state hospital for the insane last April. He was a retired builder and contractor. The couple is survived by two sons and four daughters.

AUBURN, N. Y., Feb. 28.—(AP)—State troopers on the walls of Auburn prison tonight fired upon and drove off an airplane that circled low over Auburn prison several times.

The sixty troopers on duty manned the walls and the machine guns were planted.

Officers reported they were ready for the plane should it return. It flew toward the west when fired upon. The yard had not yet been searched for anything it might have dropped

TWO OR THREE PERSONS BURNED TO DEATH IN WRECK

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Feb. 28.—(AP)—The chief train dispatcher of the Missouri Pacific railroad reported tonight that "two or three persons" were thought to have been burned to death near Alicia, Ark., 150 miles north of here, when fire broke out after a wreck of a freight train.

Robbers Posed As Musica[illegible] Students

Attemp[illegible] Get Away With Pa[illegible] of More Than [illegible]0 At Bank Door [illegible]ewark.

They were outwitted by a Negro messenger, Ossie W. Danneman, who threw the bag of money into the bank and followed it with a rush, and Patrolman James Bennett, who protected that maneuver with a barrage of bullets. Bennett received a slug in the leg in an exchange of shots.

The robbers had considerable difficulty in escaping. Residents of the neighborhood believed a fourth man waited nearby at the wheel of an automobile but he apparently fled without his companions when things began to look bad.

Rushing around a corner into the yard of a varnish company, a seven-foot fence blocked escape. Instead of trying to scale the wall, the three kicked boards loose and pushed through.

They panted into Anthony Trotto's store at 195 Parkhurst street, kidnaped Trotto's 20-year-old son, John, and in a machine used for grocery deliveries, forced him to drive them to safety.

Advertising Is Cure for Slumps

To the man in business there is probably nothing of greater interest than a cure for "slumps." It is to the expert that he naturally turns so that there will be food for serious reflection in the statement concerning retail business which was made in a lecture on advertising at Boston university by Henry Yozell, general manager and advertising director of Scott Furrier's New England stores, who said:

"Only by advertsing through the entire 12 months can we avoid seasonal changes in business. Our appropriation is being increased each year and when business is a little off, due to weather conditions or other elements which might retard sales, we even increase our advertising. And we also advertise strongly when the demand is already there."

In the $500,000 spent in advertising in the past two years the greater part was placed by Mr. Yozell in newspapers.

A word to the wise is sufficient. The Bulletin's advertising columns are always at your service.

DR. SNOOK EXECUTED FOR THE MURDER OF THEORA HIX

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Feb. 28.—(AP)—Displaying the same iron nerve that carried him through six months of residence in the deathouse at Ohio State penitentiary, Dr. James Howard Snook, university professor, went to his death in the electric chair tonight for the murder of his co-ed companion, Theora Hix. The current was turned on at 7:04 and he was pronounced dead at 7:09:30 p. m.

He received three contacts of 2,000 volts each.

Dr. Snook appeared to be the calmest man in the execution chamber. He entered accompanied by three guards. His eyes were red—as if he had cried after his last meeting with his wife. He walked with firm step and head erect. As the two chair guards took him by the arm, the doctor stepped forward briskly and sat down in the death chair.

He was accompanied into the room by two ministers, Rev. Isaac Miller of the King Avenue M. E. church, his pastor, and Rev. K. E. Wall, prison chaplain. The death house was crowded.

Two guards took the doctor by the arms and strapped him in the death chair. Another adjusted the mask, and a second before the current was turned on, Rev. Mr. Miller intoned in solemn voice, "The Lord be with you."

TO HAVE FRENCH CABINET COMPLETED NEXT THURSDAY

PARIS, Feb. 28.—(AP)—Andre Tardieu today informed President Doumergue that he was certain to have his new cabinet before parliament at 3 p. m., next Thursday.

He made that statement after a laborious day in which he encountered stubborn opposition from the left groups, but he hopes to have his ministry completed for Sunday and then to get it into shape for the parliamentary appearance.

The conviction is growing in chamber circles that should Tardieu meet defeat on his initial appearance before the deputies, as was the fate of Camille Chautemps, President Doumergue is resolved to call upon a joint meeting of the senate and chamber for a vote on dissolution.

Thus far the only portfolio Tardieu is willing to say is definitely arranged is that of foreign affairs, of which Aristide Briand is chief.

They were: Mrs. Anna Robbin, mother of a 2-year-old child; Nicola Sopcliff, 34; Ed. Wong, 37; Archie Brown, 19, and Carl Trippel, 36. Police said all were members of the radical group among the unemployed. It was Mrs. Robbin's second arrest on such a charge this week. She obtained liberty on bail only last night.

DRIVE FOR A TARIFF ON OIL DENOUNCED IN THE SENATE

Senator Blaine, Republican, Maine, a Member of the Senate Lobby Committee, Asserted That Every Method Known to Lobbying Had Been Practiced By the American Independent Petroleum Producers' Association—Charge Made In Opposing Proposed Duty of $1 a Barrel On Crude Oil.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28—(AP)—A charge that the American Independent Petroleum Producers association in carrying on a drive for an oil tariff, was "even willing to trade the president of the United States in on this deal," was made in the senate tonight by Senator Blaine, Republican, Wisconsin.

Blaine, a member of the senate lobby committee which today questioned Wirt Franklin, president of the oil association, concerning its campaign for an oil duty, attacked the association, as the senate neared a vote on an amendment by Senator Thomas, democrat, Oklahoma, to place a duty of $1 a barrel on crude oil. He said "the senate and the country are entitled to know the devious means and methods used by the association in an attempt to influence the senate to vote for a tariff on oil."

Blaine charged that "every method known to lobbying was practiced by this lobby," adding that "most nefarious and damnable methods intended to bring into public disrepute members of this body were used."

As he made this statement he pointed to Senator Dale, republican, Vermont, who was mentioned in testimony as having discussed "trading in legislation with one of the oil representatives." Dale later issued a statement denying the testimony.

Blaine asserted the organization had "established a new industry—a trade in senators," and called Franklin the "chief of the lobbyists."

"I doubt if there has been another lobby before the committee," he shouted, "which has been so active, so aggressive and so ruthless in their approach to senators."

Blaine said the association officers planned to carry to President Hoover a "rumor that was prevalent in the Continental Oil region that he (the president) was a large stockholder in South American oil and extract from him a denial and then use that denial to advance their cause."

"They would trade senators," shouted the Wisconsin senator as the senate neared a vote on the proposed oil tariff, "they would trade the president, they would trade anybody if it were to advance their cause."

Blaine, a member of the senate lobby committee, which earlier in the day heard Wirt Franklin, president of the Independents' asscociation, say that $50,000 had been raised by these producers to work for an oil duty, described the activities of this association as the "most nefarious and damnable" of all lobbies.

"They had a subtle, slimy method," he asserted, "designed to extract some information from the president and from the chairman of the committee on foreign relations so that they might use it to advance their cause."

Blaine read a telegram from F. E. Tucker of Ardmore, Oklahoma secretary of the Independent Producers association to Franklin in which Tucker was quoted as having said:

"Would it be impertinent or impolite for me to write a courteous letter to President Hoover that he answer charges being circulated in the Continental oil fields that he is heavily interested in South American oil."

The association, he added, had "peddled about untrue statements and charged them to members of the senate as they did in the case of the junior senator from Vermont (Senator Dale.")

SENATE REJECTS TARIFF ON OIL AND GASOLINE

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28—(AP)—Climaxing one of the most dramatic scenes in the long tariff controversy, the senate tonight rejected by a dozen votes the Thomas proposal for a tariff on oil and gasoline.

The roll call which came shortly after ten o'clock showed 39 against a tariff and 27 for it.

The amendment voted upon, as introduced by Senator Thomas, democrat, Oklahoma, would have placed a tax on foreign crude oil of $1 a barrel and on gasoline and other by-products of petroleum of 50 per cent ad valorem based on American valuation.

Just prior to the final vote, the senate rejected 57 to 8 a rider by Senator Pittman, democrat, Nevada, which would have terminated the tariff on Jan. 1, 1934, and made it inoperative meanwhile if the price of crude oil at the point of production in either Oklahoma or Texas exceeded $1.75 a barrel. Pittman proposed this as a guard against over-production which he said he feared would result from a tariff.

Another rider by the Nevada senator to make the proposed duty on by-products ineffective during the four-year period if the retail price of gasoline went above 18 cents a gallon at New York city, exclusive of purchasers' tax, was rejected without a record vote.

FAMILY AWAITS THE DEATH OF WILLIAM HOWARD TAFT

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28.—(AP)—Weakness gradually encroached on William Howard Taft's resistance tonight and increased the uncertainty over how much longer he could live.

During one of his conscious moments he looked helplessly up from his sick bed into the face of his son. A gleam in his eyes showed that he recognized Robert A. Taft, who had arrived earlier from Cincinnati and was being followed from there by his brother, Charles P. Taft.

So weak was the former president and chief justice that he was unable to say a word. Previously the dying man also had recognized Dr. Francis R. Hagner and his sunken cheeks had rippled slightly into a smile. The smile was gone and the eyes closed almost at once, for then, too, Mr. Taft could not speak.

The physician afterward described Mr. Taft as "slightly weaker," and said he had not been able to take much nourishment.

"There is no decided change since yesterday," the bulletin added.

From time to time through the day persons called at the Taft residence to express their sympathy to Mrs. Taft because of her husband's critical condition. Ambassador Claudel of France was one. Mrs. Edward Everett Gann, sister of Vice-President Curtis, was another.

Various justices of the supreme court also conveyed their solicitude.

Mrs. Taft was being comforted by their daughter, Mrs. Helen Taft Manning, and other relatives.

NEWS FROM PARIS PLEASING TO NAVAL CONFERENCE

LONDON, Feb. 28.—(AP)—The news from Paris this afternoon that Andre Tardieu had definitely informed President Doumergue he would form a cabinet, gave naval conference circles encouragement that the present dragging phase of disarmament negotiations may be ended a day or two earlier than expected.

The supposition is that the French delegation may be able to return to London by the middle of next week.

Meanwhile, the Americans and Japanese will continue their efforts, as they did yesterday and today, to reach a compromise agreement on cruisers, submarines and other disputed points. The only meeting today was when Ambassador Matsudaira called upon Senator Reed to clear up points of yesterday's discussion.

KILLED BY TRAIN WHILE WALKING ON DRAWBRIDGE

NORWALK, Feb. 28.—(AP)—Michael Sullivan, 70, was struck and killed by a Boston to New York train of the New Haven railroad, today, while walking across the drawbridge over the Norwalk harbor. The victim, police said, was deaf.

Sullivan had finished his day's work at a garage where he was employed and was taking a short cut to his home over the bridge. The train, police said was traveling slowly, preparatory to stopping at the South Norwalk station, located a short distance from the bridge.

The aged man was walking with his back toward the approaching train. He suffered a fractured skull and a broken leg.

SENATE DISSATISFIED WITH LONDON NAVAL CONFERENCE

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28.—(AP)—Another note of dissatisfaction over the trend of the London naval arms conference, was sounded in the senate today with a suggestion by Senator McKellar, democrat, Tennessee, that the American delegates be recalled because of the attitude of the other four powers.

Senator McKellar insisted that the positions taken by the other participating countries precludes reduction or even limitation of navies, but Senator Vandenberg, republican, Michigan, cautioned against "premature pronouncements" and urged that the conferees be allowed a free hand.

There have been several outbursts in the senate against the course of the conference.

Senators Hale, republican, Maine, the chairman of the naval committee, and Borah, republican, Idaho, chairman of the foreign relations committee, both have spoken adversely of some proposals in the London parley. Both will have leading parts in the senate debate on any treaties emanating from the conference. Senator Borah will talk over the radio tomorrow night and may touch on the conference.

Senator McKellar argued that Great Britain, Japan, France and Italy, "instead of seeking a reduction of all armaments, are each laboriously and diligently seeking to increase their armaments, or to retain naval superiority over us."

FREED ON CHARGES OF MURDERING W. P. PARKER

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Feb. 28.—(AP)—A circuit court jury in three hours, 35 minutes today freed Harvey Jackson on charges that he murdered W. P. (Billy) Parker, former editor of the Menace.

The verdict climaxed a ten days' trial. Jackson was too overcome by the verdict to speak as he eagerly grasped the hands of the jurors.

The jury decided Jackson had acted in self-defense when he shot and killed Parker in the editorial office of the Blue Shirt, a labor paper, last September.

The state contended Jackson plotted the editor's death as a result of resentment at derogatory articles printed by Parker, but Jackson claimed he was forced to kill Parker when the latter advanced on him with a carpenter's square.

Parker came to the Blue Shirt from his editorialship of the Menace, an anti-Catholic paper.

TOWN TAX WILL PROBABLY REMAIN AT 14 MILLS

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Feb. 28.—The call for a special meeting of the town of Windham to be held at the town hall Monday evening, to levy a tax on the grand list of 1929, was issued today by Selectmen William A. Buck, Jeremiah C. Healy and C. Arthur Keeney. Although the revaluation work just completed in the town has brought about a notable increase in the total of the grand list, there has been an increase in the budget with the result that the present tax rate of 14 mills will probably be asked for. The grand list as corrected by the board of relief is $22,244,510 and the budget for 1929-'30 amounts to $402,700, an increase of nearly $65,000 over the year previous. The income to the town in addition to the amount secured through taxation includes revenue from high school tuition from outside towns, personal taxes, state school grant, dog licenses, etc.

Scores of property owners, who were led to believe that the property revaluation would not inflict "punishment" on their individual pocketbooks because the increased grand list would permit a reduction of the tax rate, are said to be awaiting the coming meeting with considerable eagerness. Many claim that they understood that the tax rate would drop to eight or nine mills. These rates would not meet the present budget, however, as the increase of $64,700 alone will require some three mills of the taxation.

The expression of some bitterness is now expected on the floor of the special meeting and several property owners who felt that their holdings were valued much too highly indicated today that they did not expect to mince words in setting forth their opinion.

A Taxpayers' Protective association now stands out as the next immediate result of resenting property owners who feel that injustice was worked upon them in the past and in the more recent revaluations of town property by a service company. A preliminary meeting of a group of 15 owners of property now listed to over three-quarters of a million dollars, brought out interesting discussions of the financial matters of the town. One strong objection is the fact that liberal appropriations in the past have frequently been proposed by persons having very little or no property investments in the town. The association, regular organization of which is tentative, plans to call for a mass meeting of taxpayers at the town hall to discuss the situation and if possible to organize before the coming special town meeting.

Kennedy, representative of a New York mercantile firm, was charged with not having an operator's license nor car registration. Kennedy was arrested this morning after a slight collision with a car operated by Royal Rose of South Coventry in front of Clinton Lewis' store. In some places, daffodils have broken through the surface of the earth, and peep frogs were heard Tuesday, something very unusual for February. The country roads resemble thick soup, and the rural carrier is finding it hard traveling. He is obliged to use a horse and wagon for most of his route, and finishes his work several hours late, returning Monday night at 6:30. The state road to Willimantic, about a mile from the Green, has broken through in several places, and is in a very bad condition.

"POOR" FARMERS PREFER CARS TO HOME COMFORTS

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (AP)—Farm families in Virginia classified as "poor" would rather have automobiles than modern home comforts.

That is revealed in a survey by the University of Virginia institute for research in the social sciences.

The report shows that 43 per cent of farm families classed as "poor" operate automobiles. In only five per cent of the homes, however, is there running water. None has baths or modern heat, with modern lighting in less than two per cent.

IN NORWICH FIFTY YEARS AGO

In Norwich fifty years ago a hair seal was shot in the Shetucket river, the first to have been seen in the river for five years. The same week Norwich was experiencing a warm spell, with the mercury hovering around 50 and 70. Farmers were out in the fields plowing, young grasshoppers were caught, rosebushes were sprouting leaves and even trouters were out whipping the brooks.

Other newsy items taken from The Bulletin beginning with the week of Feb. 20, 1880, are as follows:

Monday, Feb. 23, 1880—A Norwich fisherman tells this story and vouches for its truth: "Once I was out at Avery's pond fishing for pickerel. I saw the tilt go down and I ran for the line. I pulled it in and to my utter astonishment had caught three pickerel on one hook. The first fish was small; it was no sooner caught than a second fish larger in size raveneously swallowed the first; then a third pickerel still larger greedily gulped down the second, and in that manner I landed them all. I tell you that was the tallest pulling I ever put my muscle to."

The Universalist fair netted that society $667, which is $77 better than the receipts of their fair in 1879.

MINERAL SOIL EXPOSED TO AID SEEDLING GROWTH

EAST LANSING, Mich. (AP)—Artificial methods may come to Michigan's aid in closing gaps in its northern forests.

A one-year experiment by Michigan state college foresters indicates a possibility that nature can be aided by artificial methods.

Deep, irregular furrows were plowed six feet apart over sodded and brushy areas. By exposing mineral soil, natural reproduction of seedlings was increased more than 12 times.

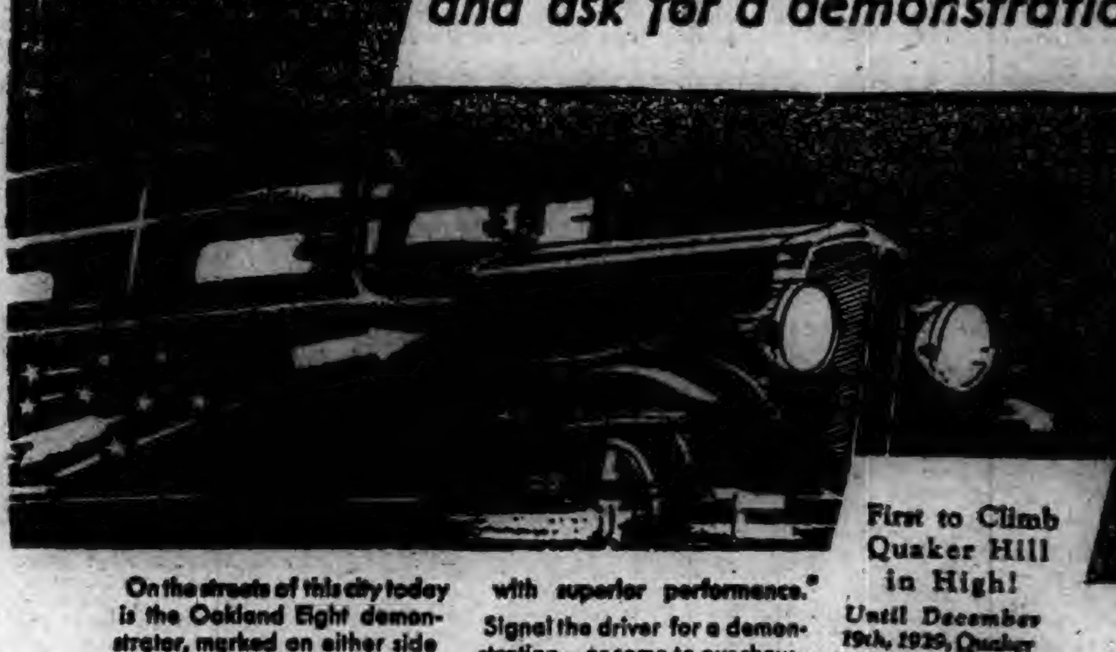
WATCH for the car with the GOLDEN ROCKET and ask for a demonstration



On the streets of this city today is the Oakland Eight demonstrator, marked on either side by a large GOLDEN ROCKET. The driver is ready to stop and give you a demonstration.

The GOLDEN ROCKET is a symbol of tremendous speed and power. And these are also characteristics of the New Oakland Eight. Its 85-horsepower eight-cylinder engine develops one horsepower to every 37 pounds of car weight. That is why few cars can equal its remarkable speed, pass it on the hills, or match its pick-up in traffic. Watch it for a few minutes, and you will know why it is called "the car with superior performance."

Signal the driver for a demonstration—or come to our showroom. Learn that the New Oakland Eight is not only fast and powerful, but unusually smooth. See its new, smartly styled Fisher bodies. Then you'll know that General Motors' new eight offers a high degree of owner satisfaction at an extremely moderate price!

The New Oakland Eight, $1045 and up, f. o. b. Pontiac, Michigan, plus delivery charges. Lovejoy Hydraulic Shock Absorbers included in list prices. Bumpers, rear fender guards and spring covers extra. General Motors Time Payment Plan available at minimum rate.

Consider the delivered price as well as the list (f. o. b.) price when comparing automobile values ... Oakland-Pontiac delivered prices include only authorized charges for freight and delivery and the charge for any additional accessories or financing desired.

First to Climb Quaker Hill in High!

Until December 19th, 1929, Quaker Hill near Baltimore had never been climbed in high gear by any closed car carrying five passengers, according to all available records. FIREMAN'S BALL IS BRILLIANT SOCIAL AFFAIR

(Special to The Bulletin)

DNIELSON, Feb. 28—A brilliant and colorful affair was the joint military-firemen's ball at the state armory this evening. The handsomely decorated drill shed supplied a pretty setting for the scores of daintily gowned women and for the nattily uniformed military officers and enlisted men, and members of the fire department, not forgetting the men who were in evening clothes.

Not in many a day have the decorations at the armory been so tastily selected and charmingly arranged as was the case for this major social event of the pre-Lenten season. Dark green, light green, old rose and blush pink were the shades so harmoniously and judiciously used to bring out the striking effect achieved by Ralph M. Shoales, who conceived the decorative idea.

Old-time firemen's hats, axes and other implements of the smoke-eaters' trade were used effectively in the decorations. Lights throughout the drill shed were hooded in old rose to get the soft lighting effect desired.

From 8 until 9 o'clock there was a concert by the 192d Field Artillery band of New London, which is a part of the Service battery of the regiment stationed at the Danielson armory. Under the leadership of Warrant Officer George J. Perry the band presented the following concert program: March, On the Square (Panella); overture, Hungarian Comedy, (Kela Bela); selection, The Merry Widow (Franz Lehar); trombone novelties, Boss Trombone (He's The Head Man) and Lasuss Trombone (The Colored Valet to Miss Trombone); suite from Atlantis, Nocturne and Morning Hymn of Praise, (2) A court Function, (3) I Love Thee (The Prince and Anna), (4) The Destruction of Atlantis; march, Stars and Stripes Forever (Sousa); Star Spangled Banner.

Following the concert there was dancing until one o'clock. A joint committee representing the military organizations at the state armory and the fire department was in charge of the arrangements.

MISIASZEK GIRL IS LOCATED IN NEW YORK

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Feb. 28—Jennie Misiaszek, 19, missing from her home here since Jan. 3, and getting considerable attention in the Danielson news this week because of various unusual things in connection with her case, was on her way back to Danielson from New York this evening in charge of her father, John Misiaszek, of Water street.

During last night the girl was picked up in New York. Descriptions of her furnished the police of that city by state officers at the local barracks led to her apprehension, but the details of how the New York officers traced her out were unknown here this evening. It is known, however, that she has been living under an assumed name.

Jennie was being held during last night on a vagrancy charge in the woman's detention department at the 121st Street station, and was to be presented in court this morning to answer to the charge of vagrancy.

Her father, with a taxi, left here during the early hours of this morning to bring her back to Danielson as soon as court proceedings were completed.

It appeared this afternoon that the prompt locating of the girl following a proposal made by Peter Giammetto and Pieto Imondi of Thronton, R. I., that they could arrange her return on payment of $500, was due largely to the fact that these two men were placed under arrest by the state police early yesterday morning when they came here to take the girl's father to New York.

They wilted under the questioning of the state officers and are believed to have furnished sufficient information to least indicate the general section of New York in which Jennie might be found.

Having been nominated for grand exalted ruler of Putnam lodge of Elks, Frank M. Bedard of the West Side is in line to be the first Danielson man to hold that office in the Putnam organization. Since this lodge was organized, upwards of a quarter of a century ago, there have many members from this town in its ranks, some of the mbeing charter members. Mr. Bedard has been filling official chairs in the lodge for several years past and has been very active in its interests.

Significant of how the human race balks against regulation, even when for its own good, is the manner in which a considerable number of school children ignore the services of Chief John McFarland in getting them safely across Main street in the center of the business section at the noon hour as they coming trooping down through Center street on their way to lunch. Rather than cross the busy street in safety, as he halts traffic for them, they will dash farther up the street, generally to a point near the town hall building, and then dart across, unprotected, through the maze of cars traveling up and down the thoroughfare at that hour. They appear to enjoy risking their necks than have the chief halt traffic for their benefit.

Miss Helen Gilligan, who as a child went to grammar school and played about with her little companions in Danielson about a dozen years ago, has risen to stardom in the musical comedy field and among the bright lights of Broadway. The theatrical page of one of New York's evening papers carried her picture yesterday, with the announcement that she has entered the cast of one of the current great successes of the metropolitan stage, Strike Up The Band, as prima donna. Miss Gilligan is a daughter Mr. and Mrs. Christopher Gilligan, now of Stafford Springs, but for a number of years resident here. Miss Gilligan has advanced rapidly in her chosen profession and has received many highly complimentary press notices within the past two years. PUTNAM

TRUDEAU MURDER CASE MAY BE TRIED IN CONN.

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Feb. 28—The Trudeau murder case which developed in Webster Sunday morning with the finding of the body of Mrs. Cecile Manski Trudeau, on the Putnam-Thompson road, strangled and brutally beaten, in all probability will become a matter that will come under the jurisdiction of Connecticut courts.

This was forecast late this afternoon when State's Attorney Howard C. Bradford of this city replied to a question concerning Connecticut's interest in the case. "I suppose Massachusetts authorities will turn Trudeau over to me when they get around to it. It appears that they would like to keep him, but turning him over to Connecticut is the only thing they can do." Mr. Bradford refused to comment further on the situation.

The first inkling of the possibility of Trudeau standing trial in this state was given late yesterday when Massachusetts state detectives appeared to be convinced that the crime had been committed on the deserted Wieczek farm in Wilsonville, two miles from the Connecticut state line. The opinion was further strengthened this morning when it was reported that Attorney Bradford made plans to confer with District Attorney Norman of Worcester in charge of the investigation for Massachusetts. Mr. Bradford asserted this afternoon that he did not meet the Worcester attorney today and would not act until arrangements were made for the turning over to this state of the alleged murderer now held in Webster.

The growing possibilities of Connecticut taking jurisdiction in the pressing of the charge of murder against Trudeau is the major development of the week in the case.

Anonymous Letter Received

Another interesting development in the case which came to light this morning was an anonymous letter received by a Worcester newspaper and later turned over to Webster police, the writer styling himself as a "third party" in the murder. He told of witnessing the struggle in the Trudeau car Saturday evening, the pitching of a revolver through a window of the car, which is now in his possession, and of seeing Mrs. Trudeau jump from the vehicle and disappear in the darkness. The mysterious penman claimed that Trudeau did not kill his wife and that before the case went to trial, he (the writer) would put in an appearance and substantiate Trudeau's story. Deputy Chief Templeman of the Webster police department in summing up the statement contained in the letter said that he places little confidence in their being any truth to them, adding that in his opinion the letter was written as a joke. The envelope bore a Worcester postmark and an effort is being made to trace the identity of the sender.

Before leaving for Chelsea, Mass., this morning State Detective John C. Stokes and John Ferrara, both of Boston, intimated that in their opinion the young woman was slain in Wilsonville on the deserted farm owned by the father of Miss Lena Wieczek, Worcester girl now under arrest on a charge of being an accessory after the fact.

While Connecticut is taking an interest in the investigation of the murder case it is not definitely known where Trudeau and his sweetheart Miss Wieczek will stand trial. While the supposition that Mrs. Trudeau was murdered in this state is gradually strengthened by the finding of parcels about the Wilsonville farm which have been identified as belonging to the murdered woman, the fact that she met her fate there will have to be established before Connecticut can ask for custody of the principals involved.

District Attorney Norman, said at noon today that the state in which the murder was committed has jurisdiction in the murder trial and if the fact that the murder was committed in Connecticut is definitely established, he will not stand in the way if Connecticut authorities insist that Trudeau and Miss Wieczek be tried here, inasmuch as Massachusetts will be spared the expense of the trial. While the attorney spoke freely concerning the growing possibility of Connecticut assuming jurisdiction, it appears at the present that Massachusetts will have to go ahead with the trial since both states are in darkness as to where the murder occurred, even though all evidence was gathered within the confines of Windham county.

Despite the fact that an anonymous writer claims to be in possession of the pistol mentioned by Trudeau in his confession, Webster police are continuing their search for the weapon which is said by the alleged murderer to be somewhere on the Wilsonville farm. At a late hour this afternoon the revolver had not been found.

The strongest contribution to the theory that Mrs. Trudeau was murdered in Wilsonville, Conn., is a purse found yesterday on the isolated farm which has been identified as belonging to the murdered woman. The pocketbook was found forty-seven feet from the spot where tiremarks and footprints were found. It came to light today that Mrs. Trudeau had $17 in her purse Saturday evening when she left her home. When found the handbag contained only $7.70.

Police said this morning that they learned from Z. Peepas, Worcester clothier that Trudeau paid for clothes he purchased Saturday evening from the merchant with a ten dollar bill. This, the police, say, upholds their theory that Trudeau robed his wife after murdering her and threw the pocketbook across the road, it landing in a clump of bushes.

Webster police this morning told of Trudeau's efforts to absolve his sweetheart of blame in connection with the slaying of his wife. According to the police, Trudeau is alleged to have said that it was he who called the Worcester police station Sunday afternoon and a neighbor of Mrs. Trudeau's from a public telephone station in Union station in Worcester in order to learn what was transpiring in Webster at the time. Police said that this statement was disproved for after her arrest Wednesday Miss Wieczek was taken to the station telephone booth and identified as the person who put in the call. After her arrest, the 17 year old accessory is said to have told police that he made the call, being so instructed by Trudeau. When told of his sweetheart's admissions Trudeau, police say, maintained that it was he who made the call, placing a handkerchief over his mouth in order to disguise his voice.

A point in the case which is still a puzzle to the police, is Trudeau's purchase of new clothing and the burning of his discarded wearing apparel. He made the purchase at 10:20 at night and made a change in the Worcester clothing store. The merchant when questioned said that he observed Trudeau's extremely nervous condition, but other than that did not notice anything else out of the way. He said that the trousers of Trudeau appeared to be somewhat mussed. Trudeau had admitted the act in the Worcester clothing store but refuses to explain his reason for the purchase of additional clothing or for the burning of his other clothes in the furnace at his home on 20 Pearl street, Webster.

Lieut. Ross V. Urquhart commanding officer of the state police barracks at Danielson is heading whatever interest this state is taking in the murder case. When interviewed this afternoon the police official stated that he would not be prepared to take any definite action in the case until Saturday noon time at the earliest. He promised a statement at that hour.

Mayor Richard Has Relapse

Mayor Charles A. Richard who has been ill at his home on Main street for the past two weeks suffered a slight relapse this morning which forced him to retire to his bed. The reaction was not regarded as serious however. It was learned this morning that the chief executive of the city is making as speedy a recovery as is possible and should he recover today from the unexpected setback in his condition this morning, he would be allowed to leave his house where he has been confined since February 4, for a few hours in the out of doors. Until this morning Mayor Richard has been sitting up in his sick room and seemed to have regained much of his lost strength. He has been permitted to entertain a few close friends and takes particular delight in their visits.

The board of county commissioners which is composed of Urgele LaFrance, Moosup, Arthur C. Keith, this city and Bert J. Johnson, Woodstock, is making preparations to receive a committee representing the Exchange club of Willimantic to inspect the county home in the Sawyer district which has been the subject of much criticism voiced by Kenneth L. Messenger, state commissioner of child welfare, in addresses before the club.

Commissioner Keith of this city who feels that many of Mr. Messenger's remarks were unwarranted is especially delighted over the action of the Willimantic organization who on more than one occasion have entertained Mr. Messenger's comment. Mr. Keith has said that the board of commissioners of which the Moosup man is chairman, feels it has done everything in its power to safeguard the child inmates of the institution. Conditions there Mr. Keith has stated are sanitary and wholesome. While the building is not of fireproof construction Mr. Keith said that an assistant matron is on duty at night to watch over the sleeping children. The structure is equipped with fire escapes and fire-fighting equipment is placed in convenient spots throughout the entire building.

Since the home was constructed some years ago, it is not possible to convert it into a fireproof building. To accomplish this it would be necessary to tear the present building down and erect a new one on its site. This Mr Keith said, would be costly and in his opinion is not warranted. It would be a great expense to citizens of the county, who undoubtedly are in accord with the views of the commission.

Another practice attacked by the Hartford commissioner of welfare was the manner in which children are kept at the home until they are of age. Mr. Keith said that every effort is made to place the county wards in reputable homes, but this is in no way an easy task, and under the circumstances the commission must exercise the best policy in regards to the upbringing, health and education of those committed to their care.

A death in this city today was that of John H. Gilbert, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Gilbert of Livery street, who died this morning. The child was ten days of age having been born in this city on February 18. A burial service will be held Saturday morning in St. Mary's cemetery.

The Knights of Columbus and the Israel Putnam lodge of Odd Fellows played to a draw Thursday evening in the weekly round of their winter indoor sports tournament. The score of the evening was 3-all. The summary of games is as follows: (Kaceys names appear first:) T. Hannifan and Bourgeois won from the Strombells brothers: A. Giraca and Benoit lost to H. Morrarty and Campbell; J. Charron and L. Giraca won from J. Gifford and C. Shaw; McGarry and Igoe lost to F. Morrarty and G. Gifford; J. Rice and Bissonett lost to K. Andrews and Reynolds; Martin and Montville won from Johnson and Dextraze. The season standing of the clubs is 25-22 with the Kaceys on the long end of the score.

A bundle of letters received at the local post office this morning was from a New York weekly publication which is engaged in seeking a nation-wide opinion on the continued enforcement, modification or repeal of the 18th amendment of the constitution. The envelopes contained cards which are styled as a secret ballot.

EXPRESS TRUCK AND LOAD BURNED WITH LOSS OF $7,000

(Special to The Bulletin)

JEWETT CITY, Feb. 28.—A big G. M. C. truck, valued at over $5,000, belonging to Gauthier's Express service, with its cargo from local points, was destroyed by fire Friday morning at 8:30, on the Farrell hill in Tadpole. The loss, around $7,000, is covered by insurance. A hurry call to the engine house by telephone, brought the chemical truck out for a mile run The firemen were unable to give much aid on account of the big advance the flames had gained. The Gauthier express is owned locally and with a full load the truck was just leaving for Providence and Boston. Frank Bush, the driver, said the rear end of the big truck was all ablaze in a minute. The cause is given as a backfire into the carburetor.

BIG 120-FOOT TRESTLE FOR TEMPORARY SERVICE

The railroad's bridge gang has completed the 120-foot trestle, which will be in use until the Quinebaug viaduct is completed. This temporary construction was necessary, because the excavations for the two piers are to be made close up to the right of way. Two cars of the steel trusses are here with several more held in the Norwich freight yards. These are designed for the spans between the small land piers. They will be set a few feet apart, with cement between, and are unlike the five big 75-foot girders that will be used over the river. The form for the big abutment in the rear of the Leonard property is to be poured at once by means of 48 hours steady work, without a hold up. Within its construction will go a train load of stone, sand and cement.

Duplicate In California

According to statements made by the engineers Friday, there is only one bridge in America of similar plan and construction as the Quinebaug viaduct, its duplicate being in southern California. The great form to be poured within a few days is for an abutment, not a pier. This is the last of four abutments to be included in the structure. The fact that a fill is to be made at the bridge end of the South Main street cut-off makes these two big cement supports, as abutments and not piers. Highway Commissioner John McDonald told First Selectman Daniel F. Finn earlier in the week that if provisions were not completed during construction for lighting this 2,550-foot bridge, that such arrangements could not be made later. At a recent meeting of the borough of Jewett City, it was unanimously voted to subscribe $1,000 toward the lighting project, provisionary upon favorable action by the town. Mr. Finn believes the town of Griswold will vote $3,000 as its apportionment, at a meeting to be warned probably next week. So far, there has been no action taken by the voters of the town of Lisbon in reference to their share of $2,400. It was said here Friday that First Selectman James Graham will warn a special meeting in response to a petition being circulated. At the borough meeting the opinions were as a single voice, that it would be a serious error to allow this construction to go on without lighting provisions. Thomas McBroome, a member of the town selectmen of Griswold, also a burgess of the borough of Jewett City, said it would be a calamity to allow anything to stand in the way of the proposed lighting system, the plans for which are being shown by Mr. Finn.

Cat Catches Adder

Mrs. G. H. Prior's pet cat Jeremiah, named for the weeping prophet, caught a 14-inch adder Friday afternoon in the lot in the rear of his home. Jerry brought his quarry proudly up to the house to receive the praise which was certainly due him from his mistress. Last year, Midget, a fine cat belonging to Thomas Gray, who lives in the other part of the house, caught several suckers during the summer, the first one being captured March 22. Ordinarily, these feline hunters are able to handle their wiggling prey without assistance, but in case a captive happens to be too long and lively, the "K. O" is delivered by some one of the male members of the family, with a good sized hickory club, which is kept standing handy in the corner for this especial purpose.

Held Benefit Whist

Mrs. W. A. Richardson, chairman of the disaster relief committee of Jewett City chapter, American Red Cross, gave a bridge party at her home this week. She has volunteered to replace the sum which was paid to secure an inhalator outfit, and has already raised $107.20 at a whist and bridge given in Rioux hall last October. Twenty dollars will be added as a result of the party this week. The first prizes went to Mildred Olson and Andrew McNicol, the second to Mrs. Andrew McNicol and Charles Harris, and the consolations to Ruth Ballou and W. H. Payne.

GASES MAY AID FARMERS IN RIDANCE OF INSECTS

AMES, Ia. (AP)—Poison gases, similar to those used in warfare, are being tested to ascertain if they will aid the farmer against damaging bugs.

Scientists at Iowa state college here are investigating the feasibility of using gases instead of sprays, smudges and powders with which crops have been protected heretofore.

Bugs are placed in glass vials and submitted to contact with different gases to learn which gas is most effective against each type of insect.

CONSIDERING THE PEDESTRIAN

Where the automatic signal is in use for the controlling of traffic it has long since been recognized that the pedestrian gets little or no show. If he is so fortunate as to be on a street where traffic in one direction is stopped, it is going on the other side of the street, and in cities where turning to the right on the red is permitted there is always much confusion for the pedestrian. The idea is to keep traffic moving as much as possible, but little provision is made for the person afoot. He must take mighty good care of himself and while hustling to get out of the way from one stream of machines he is almost certain to rush into another.

There are those who undertake to point out that the pedestrian has opportunity to proceed while signal lights are on the yellow, but while that might sound well in theory it doesn't work out in practice. Cars begin to move when the yellow shows or else they fail to come to a stop while the caution period is displayed.

The situation is all the worse in the big cities where there are so many automobiles and so many pedestrians. In the belief that it has hit upon the sensible method of dealing with this situation the police department of New York city is making changes in its signal system so that instead of having the lights alternate for traffic at intersections there will be periods when red lights will show against all traffic. That will be the cue for the pedestrian to move. Traffic that has been halted by the red light will remain halted. That which would be going ordinarily will fail to get the green light and will therefore be obliged to yield to the persons who are walking.

This arrangement will be no better than those signals which are operated by traffic officials stationed at or near the signal, since they do the same thing for the walkers, but it will be an improvement over the electrically operated signals which start and stop traffic by the clock regardless of whether there is anyone responding to it or not. This plan will not be of any advantage to the street traffic. It will operate to retard that a bit, but it will give the pedestrians a chance and greater safety.

UNDERPASSES

Massachusetts has come to a realization that its gasoline tax is a decided benefit in the matter of road improvement. That state was among the last to resort to that form of taxation, it being fought at every turn by the motorists and their organizations. But now that they have had an opportunity to witness the advantages from it they are already contemplating the improvements that will come from the $12,000,000 tax money this year.

Last year it was working on the new road over the Mohawk trail. This year attention is being centered on the new construction planned between Worcester and Framingham where, among the other improvements, there will be the elimination of several railroad crossings by means of underpasses.

Where new construction is undertaken it is to be expected that bad conditions of all kinds will be removed, whether they are grades, crossings, curves or something else. And in view of the fact that it is to be new work it is to be anticipated that the improvements will be adequate.

The building of underpasses does not of itself always mean that greater safety is going to be provided. There are many underpasses in this state, not of recent construction, which create conditions which are quite as serious as any crossing could be. That is disclosed too often by the crashes which occur thus or the narrow escapes which are experienced. The old underpasses were built so narrow or at such angles as to create a hazard for the driver who is not careful, the very person for whom so many crossings have to be eliminated.

But the experience with the old-fashioned underpass has been sufficient to give assurance that in the Massachusetts construction there will be no such grave mistakes made. In keeping with modern highways, where speed is expected and really encouraged, the angle of approach and the width of the roadway under the tracks should be such as to give consideration to highway users. It is a necessary provision if the effort to avoid crossings is going to be successful.

CATERING TO TRAVELERS

As an echo of the airplane show in St. Louis it is indicated that the time is coming in the not distant future when flying machines will be cheaper. This may not be of interest to you just at present, but it is through such steps that greater attention is centered upon participation in modern inventions.

It was so with the bicycle, the automobile and the radio. When it was made clear that they were available for all, that prices had been brought within reach of those of all classes, there was greater interest in them.

For most people the airplane today is out of the question. The price is too high, the danger too great and the interest insufficiently developed. One of the direct ways of overcoming much of this is by the lowering of the price, and with so much competition in the manufacture and the steady progress in the perfection of aircraft the reduction in price is bound to come.

It will not only have its effect upon individual participation in flying, but it will stimulate the business of carrying passengers through the air. Cheaper planes will make for cheaper transportation, and when that is provided a larger volume of business can be expected.

Within the week the announcement was made by one of the railroad systems that it was prepared to offer soon a service that would provide bus travel during the day and train travel with Pullman sleepers for night travel, so that there would be no interruption of transportation for those going by bus. This was in the nature of an afterthought, in view of the fact that the travel by day in planes and the resort to Pullmans at night for rest had some time ago been advocated for transcontinental travelers.

It may be some time before such a service is inaugurated on a large scale, inasmuch as big planes, or airships with sleeping accommodations may be only around the corner, but it indicates the recognition of those engaged in transportation of the changing sentiment among the traveling public and a consequent desire to meet the requirements. Public service means giving the people what they want when they want it.

STATE SCHOOL FOR BOYS

Just at present the Connecticut School for Boys at Meriden is under fire of criticism. This is a state institution where boys who have gotten into trouble at home are sent in an effort to correct wrong ideas and start them on the right road to good citizenship.

The inference is that when charges are made against the conduct of such an institution, or against the treatment that is accorded the inmates, there is some ground for them. That being so, it should be possible to bring them to attention in such a manner as to determine where the fault is and to apply the necessary remedy.

It is to be expected that the investigation which is underway will determine what the facts are and whether there is justification for the complaints against the administration of the institution.

It cannot be expected that the school will be a summer camp or a bed of roses. As a correctional institution it must be expected that there will be discipline and from the very character of the boys sent there it is to be anticipated that proper measures of meeting the requirements as they arise must be applied. That doesn't, however, call for brutality. It doesn't mean that the boys should be undernourished and it doesn't mean that they should not be properly protected against dangers of one character or another. Institutions of such a character are expected to accomplish their purpose and much depends upon the behavior of the boys as to the treatment they receive.

From the study of the facts as presented the investigation should reveal whether cruelty, and incompetence in the management, as set forth in certain of the complaints, are justified. It is a matter which concerns the whole state.

REGISTERING ALIENS

In dealing with the immigration problems in this country it has long since become apparent that many are yearly evading the barriers established to keep aliens out of the country unless they comply with the immigration laws.

How to stop them has taxed the efforts of the immigration authorities at the ports and along the borders. Certain ones are stopped, those who try to enter in a legal way but cannot meet the requirements and those who happen to get caught as they undertake to avoid the law, but there are the uncounted thousands who get in unlawfully and remain until their illegal presence is learned or they get into trouble and are unable to show when they made legal entrance.

A certain amount of deportation is going on all the time, but the number would be much larger if the aliens coming in illegally were known. In order to locate these people, Congressman Cable of Ohio has introduced a bill calling for the registration of all aliens. This is to put a stop to evasion of the immigration law and to help the labor and unemployment situation. It is action which has been repeatedly recommended by Secretary Davis of the department of labor.

Through such legislation it would be possible to locate more easily the aliens who have come in illegally and thus to take the necessary steps for deportation. It should result in greater respect for the immigration laws and decrease the interest in crossing the borders surreptitiously, while certain modifications of the naturalization law would be of particular interest to those entitled to and desirous of taking that step. Proposing such a law and getting it enacted are entirely different things.

THE MAN WHO TALKS

Much is written nowadays about "public welfare," and it certainly is a topic that we ought not to ignore. But is it not well to bring more and more into the light the "public illfare" that is such a menace to public welfare? An article has recently appeared in print entitled, "Wellfare and Illfare" in Illinois. The statement is made that the present day criminal is young, and that most of them come "from broken homes." The home-taken as a whole-is not doing its duty in teaching morals. The church does this, but less than one half of the people have any affiliation with the church or Sunday school. But the public school claims them all. Why not then have a statute law making the teaching of morals just as much a part of the regular curriculum as that of arithmetic or geography? No one but a fanatic could object to this.

The present day crimes that are reported of young gangsters of Chicago, are tangible evidence of this. We refuse to believe that these boys are sinners above all others, and if their environment had not been tainted with moral rottenness their lives would have had a different trend. It is just as true to day as it was in the days of King Solomon that "as the twig is bent the tree inclines." The church would be a mighty offset to such conditions if it could only get hold of the boys. But these young people-so the investigation shows-are the offspring of those who have no affiliation whatever with any branch of the Church of God, and are allowed to grow up like weeds. Can we reasonably expect much of boys who have had no training whatever along the line of right living? The state is morally bound to see that such boys have a decent show. Therefore our public schools are confronted with a situation they cannot afford to ignore.

Once again the great career of "The Father of His Country" has been presented from all viewpoints for the consideration, and for the most part, the admiration of the American public. You will notice that I have qualified the word "admiration" to point out the change of trend to the myths that have gathered round his great name. For years his exalted name was belittled by mushy religiosity which was not in line with his temperament. But of late these myths accuse him of living the double life; that he was unfaithful to his wife; that he supported at school an illegitimate boy. I am careful to brand such stuff as myths, because not one of them is backed up by credible evidence. They have floated in from foreign sources, and are not home made.

Whatever weather conditions may be prevailing when these words appear in print, the evidence appears on every hand that spring is not a thousand miles away. It may be that early March will display wind and snow in true blizzard fashion. Dame Nature, who is a fickle as many old men, may take it into her erratic old head to send the mercury down far below zero, but it will bob up again serenely in a short time. If the month of March runs true to form it may not be strange if we are favored with a thunder shower not only to give spice to her love of variety, but just to see what she can do. There may be spots so calm and balmy, that the youngsters will take their first bath (I mean the first one out of doors) since the cold weather began. We shall hear the birds peal forth with their anthems of joy, and some men will even be so reckless as to shed their underclothing.

However, these forerunners of spring are not quite so scientific as the manifest increase of the length of the day. When the light begins to get dim between three and four in the afternoon because the sun is lolling on the verranda of a fashionable hotel at the Tropic of Capricorn, one feels that a real man's job hasn't been done because the light wouldn't let him get at it before 7.30 in the morning, and if cloudy not until 8 o'clock. But as we see Old Sol shake himself, take manly strides in the direction of the equator and seems to dominate a larger sphere of good old Mother Earth, our bosoms swell with manly pride, when we think how big we are, and makes us feel like slapping old Bill Shakespeare on the back for uttering that immortal sentence that is as true as Scripture that "man is the paragon of animals."

If the public press is giving us the correct statement of the doings of some phases of our modern society, it will lead us to question our wonderful degree of civilization. I refer to the horrible things said to be resorted to in our penal institutions as a means of forcing supposed criminals to confess. If this is true we are several thousand miles away from Paradise. If these things are allowed to be done in so-called Christian America in the 20th century, let us stop our ranting about the Spanish inquisition of the middle ages. It is a disgrace to any nation to bring back old Torquemada with his inhuman cruelties. The public press has told us that this condition of things is the cause of recent prison outbreaks. If this is true let us hope and pray that the whole matter will be most thoroughly investigated.

Within a few days the major part of Christendom will begin the annual custom of giving adequate expression to the Lenton season. In this regard there has been a radical change of sentiment in relation to this season since many now living were children. Not so many years ago the observance of Easter was confined altogether to the liturgical churches. But this change of sentiment, or rather, this improvement of sentiment represents an enlarged and more intelligent view of the meaning and application of the Easter spirit. No intelligent person today denies that the closing weeks of our Saviour's life was the most impressive and far-reaching-as judged by its influence on humanity-period in the world's history. Union services embracing all the denominations put emphasis on our common belief in its supreme importance. Everything now points to a larger cooperative work than ever.

ORE BEDS AND SALTINESS OF SEA TRACED TO VOLCANOES

Where have the world's ore deposits come from—deposits that have given man tools and instruments and materials to make possible the complex civilization of to-day?

Why is the sea so salty—much saltier than it would be if only the rivers contributed salt-making materials?

Studies Made in "Valley of Ten Thousand Smokes"

These and other problems, interesting alike to the man in the street and the man in the laboratory, and never satisfactorily solved, have been brought much closer to solution by Dr. E. G. Zies of Washington as a result of his observations in the famous Alaskan volcanic area called the "Valley of Ten Thousand Smokes," discovered by a National Geographical society expedition in 1916.

Dr. Zies, chemist of the Geographical laboratory of the Carnegie institution of Washington, was a member of the staff of scientists who made up of The Society's expeditions to the Valley. His work has just been published in a technical paper of the National Geographical society.

The explosive eruption in the Valley of Ten Thousand Smokes took place in 1912 and preceded the eruption of near-by Mt. Katmai by only a short time. As a result of this activity, the Valley became a seething inferno of super-heated steam and chemical vapors bursting from countless cracks and seams. In no place in the world, during the relatively short life of modern science, says Dr. Zies, has there been an opportunity, on a such a large scale and on such an intensive basis both as to heat and chemical activity, to study the effects of volcanic action on rocks and minerals, and on the make-up of the atmosphere.

When Dr. Zies was in the Valley some of the fumaroles—the vents for the steam and other vapors—had cooled to a little less than the boiling temperature of water, while others were giving off gases at 1,200 degrees Fahrenheit. The steam from some of these vents was so hot that sticks held in the vapor for a moment would burst into flame when withdrawn.

Hot Gases Brought Metals to Surface

Mixed with the steam were found three very active chemicals in the form of hot gases; hydrochloric acid, hydrofluoric acid, and hydrogen sulphide. The heat which melted rocks far below the earth's surface, at the same time turned into gases the minute amounts of various metallic constituents in the rocks. These gases were swept upward by the escaping steam and acid vapors. In addition, the hot, metal-hungry acid gases attached tiny bits of metal-forming substances scattered in the rocks through which they passed nearer to the surface. As a result, these metals were gasified and swept along with the other gases toward the earth's surface. These acid and metal-laden vapors also materially altered the rocks through which they passed, especially the porous pumice.

While the escaping gases were still very hot they gave up their metallic burdens upon striking the lower temperatures and lessened pressures of the open air. These transported metals were deposited within the cracks and fissures through which the gases rushed. One of the most abundant deposits from the gases consised of magnetite, a black oxide of iron. This substance was deposited in the form of crystals growing one upon another. In some of the larger vents, the deposits reached a foot in thickness.

Other metallic substances were deposited with the magnetite. It could be shown that zinc and manganese were actually inside the mugetite molecules while lead and copper were deposited in combination with sulphur on the surfaces of the magnetite crystals.

Thus the hot, acid steam given off by volcanoes and by lava flows and intrusions plays an important part in the collection, tranfer, initial concentration, and deposition of metallic ores.

Cooling of Area Altered Ores

The deposition of this type of mineral compounds accumulated at the mouths of the fumaroles so long as as the temperature of the vapors remained above the boiling point of water. But as soon as the escaping vapors fell below this point, so that the steam condensed into water, a second step in ore-formation took place. The acid waters immediately attached the gas-formed deposits, and dissolved them. From these solutions sulphides were formed by action of hydrogen sulphide gas. It is significant that many of the world's economic ore deposits are in the form of sulphides.

No ore deposit of economic importance is likely to be formed at the surface from the slowly cooling lava that is believed to lie under the Valley of Ten Thousand Smokes, owing to the fact that erosion of the swift streams in the Valley can carry off the reaction products. The Valley deposits are, however, significant because Nature has there actually provided her students with a laboratory in which the various steps of ore deposition can be studied. It is Dr. Zies' opinion that the hearth or feeder channels of an inactive volcano, well below the earth's surface, where solutions will not be washed away by surface drainage, are the locations where economic ore deposits are much more likely to be laid down.

The saltiness of the sea is, in part, directly related to volcanic action, according to data based by Dr. Zies on his observations in the Valley. It has been known for some time, as a result of analyses of river waters, that streams flowing into the sea do not carry enough chlorine to combine with all the sodium carried. (The combination of chlorine and sodium is ordinary table salt). On the other hand sea water contains more than enough chlorine to combine with the sodium present. The sea is therefore saltier than it would be if only the rivers contributed the salt-making ingredients.

Millions of Tons of Chlorine Washed into Sea

Dr. Zies found that the fumaroles of the Valley of Ten Thousand Smokes were emitting into air vast amounts of hydrochloric acid. He estimated that in one year a million and a quarter tons of the acid were given out in gaseous form from this single volcanic area, and became diffused in the higher atmosphere. Eventually the acid is washed from the air by raindrops, and so approximately three-fourths of the earth's rain falls directly into the sea, large amounts of chlorine thus enter the sea independently of that contributed by river water. The Valley of Ten Thousand Smokes, which is only one of the many volcanic areas of the earth, itself supplies one per cent of the chlorine needed each year to combine with the sodium of the river waters, Dr. Zies estimates. He believes, therefore, that the average annual amount of chlorine given off by all volcanic areas is easily sufficient to keep the saltiness of the sea up to its present level.

Less striking, but of great importance to chemists and geologists, are Dr. Zies' findings in regard to hydrofluoric acid, which is also given off in considerable quantities by the valley fumaroles. This is the acid which etches glass. According to his estimates about 150,000 tons of the hydrofluoric acid emitted by the Valley fumaroles are washed by rain directly into the sea each year. It is shown that in turn great amounts of fluorine are removed from the sea through its utilization by sea creatures, and that additional fluorine, is precipitated with sedimentary rocks. Thus a large part of the fluorine contributed to the sea by volcanoes is ultimately "locked up" in rocky deposits.

Spectroscope Ferreted Out Secrets

One interesting aspect of Dr. Zies' work was the analysis of samples of lava that were ejected during the explosive eruption of Mt. Katmai and the Valley of Ten Thousand Smokes in June 1912. This rock represents the material far below the surface from which the fumarolic gases come. It was analyzed so as to further check the source of the metallic substances deposited on the walls of the fumaroles.

The metals were definitely shown to be present in the rocks but the amounts were so small that they were not detectable by ordinary means, and a special analytical procedure had to be developed. Dr. Zies first concentrated the metallic substances with chemicals, and then successfully analysed the concentrates by means of the spectroscope. many romances of science; the same magical instrument which has successfully reached millions of miles into the heavens and disclosed the make-up of stars, was used to ferret out by its tell-tale lines and shadows the secrets locked up by Nature in the bowels of the earth.

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28 — When Senor Don Manuel C. Tellez, ambassador from Mexico, takes over deanship of the Washington diplomatic corps, as he will presently unless transferred to an even higher sphere of political usefulness by his government, it will mark for him a day of personal triumph.

He has been more than a decade in Washington diplomatic life. For only half that time has he been ambassador.

Yet during all of it, excepting the last year or two since Mexican-American relations were "Morrowized" into tranquility, Tellez has been faced with situations both here and at home more critical and filled with more disturbing possibilities than any of his diplomatic colleagues have known.

Not only have there been months when relations between the two countries seemed strained, but 10 or more separate revolutionary outbreaks in Mexico have occurred within his 11 years in Washington.

Practical Diplomacy

Each of them involved difficult tasks for Mexico's representative in Washington, requiring tact, understanding and a knowledge of all forces at play in both Mexican and American domestic politics.

Tellez was not a trained diplomat when he came to Washington. He is a newspaper man by profession, and a good one by all accounts. He must be.

No more difficult task could have been invented for a diplomat than that he undertook. He walked constantly between the devil and the deep sea.

To have survived and be within sight of the honor and prestige that goes with seniority among his fellow diplomats speaks for his personality and plain horse sense.

Played Safe

Look back only three years or so, and you will find Tellez the center of press speculation as to whether he had become persona non grata. The two governments were exchanging notes that were not the most friendly.

Just what it was all about never was fully revealed, but Tellez steered a conservative course, and talked very little for publication.

Dwight Morrow has been generously applauded for having brought about a Mexican-American rapprochement. He deserved it without doubt, but surely Tellez fits into the picture also. It is not surprising if, as reported, his government plans higher political honors for him.

Yet Tellez is now so much a part of Washington life that he might not yearn for new fields to conquer.

What Parents Should Know About Whooping Cough

By Henry L. K. Shaw, M. D., Albany
(From Gorgas Memorial Institute)

Whooping cough is a highly communicable and contagious disease and should be recognized as a very serious disease in young children. It causes more deaths under two years of age than any of the other so-called infections diseases of childhood. It is imposible to estimate the amount of sickness not terminating fatally that results from it, as many cases are not diagnosed correctly.

Whooping cough is spread by direct contact and by the dissemination of germs through the fine and almost invisible spray and tiny drops of sputum thrown out during the acts of coughing, sneezing or speaking. The infective distance is probably not more than five feet. It is not air borne in the sense that the infection travels through the air. Direct contact is the most common means of transmitting the germs. It is rarely if ever carried by a third person. Children receive the infection from other children at school, at moving picture shows and other indoor places where they congregate. It is essentially a disease of young children as over 80 per cent of the cases occur in children under five years of age. One attack almost protects a person against further infection throughout life.

The course of the disease covers a period of six to ten weeks or even longer and is divided into three distinct stages. The first or catarrhal stage cannot be distinguished from an ordinary head cold with a cough. This lasts one to two weeks before the cough becomes more severe and the second stage is reached. This is the spasmodic or paroxysmal stage when a series of ten to fifteen short explosive coughs come on in such rapid succession that the child cannot catch his breath between them. He is in great distress and gets blue in the face. Then a sudden rush of air through the narrow glottis produces the typical loud sound known as a "whoop". Vomiting very often occurs especially if food has been taken recently. The number of attacks may vary from five to fifty in twenty-four hours.

The third stage or the period of decline lasts from one to five weeks, when the paroxysm subsides and the cough resembles that of an ordinary bronchitis. The disease is rarely transmitted to others in this stage, although the cough may persist for months after the germs have disappeared.

There is no sure cure for whooping cough. Parents should observe the Golden Rule when their children contract it and so curtail the spread of this dread disease. This means that a child with whooping cough should be kept away from school, Sunday school, moving pictures shows or any place of public assemblage and from contact with children who have never had it.

SUNDAY MORNING TALK

Our Great Men

As the birthdays of our great and noble men have just passed, let us not forget that they were found true and legal to their country and their God. They were firm for the right, nor loyalty is one of the greatest needs of today in both church and state. Loyalty to the Christ means striving like Paul to be soul winner following in the steps of the master. Loyalty to our country means to ever be true, not like Arnold the traitor who would disgrace his country, we need men that shall ring true for the right on all occasions and all places, my country first, my God first, then we would not see so much fighting.

It is not difficult to place a correct estimate upon the character of Lincoln. He was the greatest man of his time, especially approved of God for the work he had to do. History proves his superiority as a leader, and established his reliance on a higher power for guidance and support. None have spoken more highly of Lincoln than those who knew him best.

Lincoln thought that no party or partisan can escape responsibility to the people; that no party advantage should ever swerve us from the plain path of duty which is ever the path of honor and distinction. He emphasized his words by his daily life and deeds. He showed to the world by his lofty example those high ideals by his steady, enduring confidence in God, and in his complete ultimate success of the cause of God which is the cause of humanity more than in any other way does he now speak to us, and to the nation he loved and served so well.

THE GARDEN

By REX REES

Annuals

In my travels through Moore's Utopia, I found that the residents of Amaurot, the chief city of that country, set great store by their gardens. "In them they have vinyards, all kinds of fruit herbs and flowers so attractive, so well arranged, and so finely kept that I never saw anything more fruitful or better trimmed. Their diligence in caring for these gardens comes not only from their pleasure in them, but also from a certain strife and contention that there is between street and street concerning the trimming, husbanding, and furnishing of their gardens. And verily there cannot easily be found in all the city anything that brings the citizens more profit and pleasure."

In my travels through southeastern Massachusetts 35 years ago I often passed up the western bank of the Taunton great river. In a spacious lawn surrounding a country doctor's home, a great bed of petunias lent a charm exquisitely beautiful and appealing, the white and pink, the garnet and purple so blended into a perfect whole that the picture one carried from the garden could never be forgotten.

Petunias lend themselves to landscapes when grown in masses as no other flower will, warm sunny days bring out the flowers in masses and fill the air with perfume. The petunia belongs to the night shade family and is a persistent and hardy plant. It responds kindly to the gardeners will and produces abundantly from May to November. There are some wonderful varieties offered by the great hybridizers of this plant. For a few years Rosy Morn has added greatly to the beauty of the garden. Such varieties as Theodosia, Balcony Blue, the small double flowered Rosy Morn, the Diener Monsters and Shepherd strains afford one any number of choices. If you sow your seed early you can take cuttings from the double flowering plants. There is scarcely a flower grower anywhere who does not depend very largely on petunias for window box decoration. You can not go wrong to plant a lot of Petunias. Grow in a sunny place for best results.

Then, too, you will want to grow a bed or border of Calendula. You can start your plants inside for early May flowering or plant them in the place where you desire to grow them and they will bloom in a few weeks and make a splendid addition to your garden. Among the latest and best varieties Sensation is a long stemmed, very double, brilliant orange flower. Orange King, with a dark center, the outer petals imbricated or overlapped like shingles while the center petals are curved like those of the peony. You will want to plant a few Radio. This is an English introduction with beautifully quilled petals which give the flower an unusual appearance, very much to be desired.

Then, too, you will want to grow zinnas. They are among the most popular annuals on the market today because their blooming time extends over a long period from summer until late in the fall. Zinnias stand much higher in the estimation of florists and the public in general than they did a few years ago. The dahlia flowered sort carry flowers of immense size, and there is such a range of colors as will satisfy the mot fastidious of color schemes. As a cut flower the zinnia is stiff and formal but its lasting qualities are unsurpassed. Some of the most beautiful of the dahlia flowered variety are the following: Meteor, a rich glowing scarlet of fine form and very large; Old Rose, describes itself; Oriole, an immense orange and gold bicolor; Polar Bear, a large pure white, the best white yet produced in zinnias; Scarlet Flame, well that's just it. This is not a seed catalogue so I must stop as to names, and tell you that no bed in my garden so caught the eyes of the hundreds of visitors as a bed of zinnia Mexicana. Those little fellows that looked like clover blossoms, like French Marigolds, like almost anything but zinnias. They were exquisite and gave such character to their part of the garden that there they will be permitted to bloom this year.

Of course you will want to grow asters. They have been favorites for so many years that every one has his or her favorite. The white, the pink, the purple, the lavender, the red, all combine to make a perfect garden. There is one, however, which makes a great appeal to me, The Heart of France. This is the best red aster yet introduced to the American public. It opens a pure ruby red and retains its color throughout the entire season and every flower is of the highest quality. It is especially beautiful under artificial light.

And now let me call attention to the fact that for the past few years it has been almost unpossible to grow asters because of the "aster blight." The plants reach maturity in fine luxurient leaf and bud, then begin to wilt, whiten and soon die. It has been found that the leaf hopper is the cause of the disease and that if the plants are grown in a greenhouse or a cold frame the plants are immune, practically from the disease.

You will be wanting bedding stock when May arrives, an not in all the catalogues can you find anything better than the geranium. It always commands attention, and if you have not space or accommodations to grow it yourself, you had better speak to the florist now, and see to it that what you buy is a real stocky plant. Then plant it in good rich loam if you want good geraniums. No matter how highly advertised a variety may be, and there will be some time a better geranium than Radio, Poitevine, Ricard or Nutt, it has not yet been developed. Solid colors are best and these great heads of continuous flowers, like a great flaming cloak of scarlet supported by a cushion of green velvet, all through the flowering season from May till frost cuts them down in October.

If property was acquired by gift after December 31, 1920, the basis of determing taxable gain or deductible loss is the same as it would be in the hands of the honor, or last preceding owner by whom it was not received by gift. For example, a man in 1925 bought stock in a corporation at $100 a share, kept it until January, 1927, when it was worth $120, and then gave it to his son, who, in 1928, gave it to his wife, the stock then being worth $150 a share. If in 1929 the wife sold the stock of $200 a share, the taxable gain is not $50 a share but $100 a share, the gain over the cost to the preceding owner, who did not acquire the property by gift. If the wife sold the stock at $80 a share, the deductible loss would be $20 a share.

In computing the gain or loss from the sale or other disposition of property acquired by gift or transfer in trust on or before December 31, 1920, or by bequest, devise, or inheritance, the basis is the fair market value of such property at the time of acquisition. For example, a taxpayer received in 1919 a gift of real estate having a fair market value of $10,000 which he sold in 1929 for $15,000. The original cost to the donor was $12,000. The taxable gain, however, is $5,000. If sold for $8,000 the deductible loss would be $2,000.

The Corticelli Silk Company, New London

The Corticelli Silk company of New London, had its beginning at Florence, Mass., in 1838. As early as 1853, however, plain and figured satine had been woven which had been taken to Washington and presented to Henry Clay. That great statesman expressed himself as much gratified at these specimens of home manufacture.

The early silk mill was at one time the property of the "Florence Community." Upon the failure of that communistic movement, the mill was taken over in 1846 by Samuel L. Hill. Under his able guidance, the company prospered and grew rapidly. The company was named the Nonotuck Silk company after the early Indians who had inhabited the valley.

About 1855 the name "Corticelli" was adopted for some of the silk products. This name was taken from the Italian since Italy at that time was the center of the silk industry.

About 1901 the well-known kittenhead was adopted as a trademark and this together with the name "Corticelli" has been extensively advertised ever since. In 1922 the name of the company was changed from the Nonotuck Silk company to The Corticelli Silk company.

In 1924 the Corticelli Silk company and the Brainerd and Armstrong Company of New London and Norwich, manufacturers of thread silks and silk fabrics, were merged, completing an association of many years standing, and forming one of America's largest silk companies.

The products of the company include dress fabrics, both silk and rayon, clothier's linings, automobile curtain fabrics, silk threads of every type and women's silk hosiery.

Mills are located in Florence, Leeds and Haydenville, Mass., New London and Norwich, Conn. Sales offices are located in all important cities of the United States. Through the export department, business is carried on with every quarter of the globe.

The present officers are: F. W. Eaton, chairman of board; J. P. T. Armstrong, president and treasurer; R. L. Smith, vice president and plant manager; H. G. Stine, vice president; H. D. Lee, secretary.

RUBBER WIDELY USED IN NEW CAR DESIGNS

DETROIT, (AP)—When a motorist speaks of "good rubber" today he may mean more than tires.

Rubber for deadening shocks and vibration has found a new part in the design of automobiles. Motor impulses are softened by rubber engine mountings, pads and strips eliminate squeaks and rattles, while rubber spring mountings protect the car from road shocks.

It is estimated that nearly 500 pieces of rubber, besides the tires, find use in the modern automobile as noise or shock insulators.

NEW CAMP PREPARED FOR LAND AND AIR TOURISTS

AKRON (AP)—Looking ahead several years, Akron is preparing camping grounds for both land and air tourists.

The camp is projected by B. E. Fulton, manager of an air field which contains the new Zeppelin dock. The plan is to have the camp fitted to accommodate any kind of passengers, whether they come by airplane, dirigible, automobile or train.

On one boundary will run a 100-foot scenic highway. There will be an open air stadium, a theatre in a natural bowl, tennis courts, and a roof garden, enclosed in glass, for dancing. To the east of the port are wooded hills where tourists may pitch their tents.

INDUSTRY ROUTS SALMON FROM NORTHWEST STREAMS

WASHINGTON (AP)—Despite efforts to put the salmon fishing industry on a sound basis, the department of commerce reports that many salmon streams in Pacific coast states are showing depletion.

Increased industrial activities, power development and pollution of water are cited as factors causing the decrease.

The salmon industry in Alaska, Washington, Oregon and California, where 207 canneries are located, produced 8,926,808 cases of canned salmon in 1928. Alaska produced 88 per cent of the stock.

STEEL SHIP CONSTRUCTED WITHOUT BOLTS OR RIVETS

CHARLESTON, S. S. (AP)—Built with a torch, a steel oil tanker 120 feet long will be launched here soon without a rivet from stem to stern.

First of its kind, the ship was planned by Richard F. Smith, a young marine engineer.

An interlocking system of welding was used. Only nine workmen, on the average, were employed in its building since the keel was laid. The equipment consisted of one acetylene cutting torch and one electric welding machine.

Only 8,000 pounds of electric welding wire were needed, as compared with 85,000 pounds of rivets necessary for the usual ship of similar size.

Smith estimates that mode of construction meant a saving of 20 per cent in weight and 25 per cent in construction costs. Due to absence of bolts, rivets and angles, the ship will have an abnormally large capacity.

PLANT'S BILL OF FARE NEEDS ITS VITAMINS TOO

He grew a certain sort of duckweed under a measured diet, and found that as little as two parts in ten million of an organic fertilizer stimulated growth enormously.

SUPERIOR COURT JUDGE GRANTS SIX DIVORCES

Six uncontested divorces were granted Friday by Judge Christopher L. Avery at a short calendar session of the superior court in New London.

The refusal of Mrs. Julia Smith Hunt, of Shaw street and Denison avenue, New London, to live under an assumed name as demanded by her husband in order that he might dodge creditors resulted in Mrs. Hunt being given a divorce on grounds of desertion.

Mrs. Hunt, who was represented by Attorney G. Curtis Morgan, said her husband took her to Louisville, Ky., in the summer of 1926, when she said he sought to avoid payment of bills he owed. She said her husband left her a few days after they arrived in Louisville, because she would not assume a ficticious name and that she was forced to go to work there to support herself, finally returning to New London since when she has not seen or heard of her husband. She was also given the custody of one minor child.

Anna Coleredo Demarco, of New London, was divorced from Guy Demarco of parts unknown on grounds of desertion. They were married Aug. 27, 1917, and she testified that he left her June 30, 1925, and that she has not seen or heard from him since. She was also given permission to change her name to Coleredo.

After testifying that his wife left him three weeks after their marriage in San Francisco, and that he has not seen or heard from her since, James L. Sanford, sailor stationed at the submarine base, was given his freedom from Lillie Skele Sanford of parts unknown, on grounds of desertion. They were married Jan. 16, 1925.

Ella Campbell DeWolf, of Old Lyme was given her freedom from Roger W. DeWolf, post office clerk at Stonington, on grounds of cruelty. She was also given the custody of three minor children and the court further ordered that DeWolf pay $16 a week toward the support of the three children, effective Friday.

The couple were married June 3, 1912, and cruelty was alleged since Jan. 1, 1922. Mrs. DeWolf testified that she and her husband have been separated for some time and that he has been paying only $2.50 a week for the support of the children since. DeWolf was formerly a rural free delivery mail man in Old Lyme.

Yetta Gilbert of Norwich was given her freedom from Philip Gilbert of parts unknown on grounds of cruelty and was given the custody of one minor child. The couple were married Oct. 26, 1924.

SILVER PRICE HITS LOW AFTER YEAR OF DECREASE

NEW YORK (AP)—Except for a slight recovery in September, the price of silver has decreased since January, 1929, to the lowest point on record February 4, both in the United States and London.

The quotation here was 43 1-8 and in London 19 15-16 pence.

The previous low mark for silver in the United States was 46 1-4 in September, 1915, an effect of the war. Four years later the price reached a high mark of 1.37½ which has not been approached since.

According to Handy and Harman, bullion brokers, the continued low value of silver is due to steady production and lack of demand.

MORE JOY THAN SORROW LIVES IN MEMORY TEST

ST. LOUIS (AP)—The average man is not Freudian about forgetting his unpleasant experiences, says a report to the American Association for the Advancement of Science by Dr. H. Meltzer of Washington university.

Psycho-analysis, he says, hold that the more unpleasant an experience is, the more likely it is to be forgotten. But a count of 2,231 actual human experiences shows results not in accord with Freudian expectations, but more in accord with common sense."

In short, says Dr. Meltzer, the more vivid the experience the longer it remained in memory, no matter how unpleasant. The counts were made on memories of experiences reported by 132 college students the first day after Christmas vacation.

Dr. Meltzer found there were considerably more pleasant than unpleasant things recalled, and concluded that pleasant things tend to predominate in memory. The collegians forgot 60 per cent of their unpleasant experiences and 43 per cent of the pleasant, but vividness was the main reason for remembering either kind.

RADIO DEMAND SPURS TIME SERVICE IN U. S.

WASHINGTON (AP)—Precise radio-frequency standards with demands for highly accurate time determination keep Uncle Sam on his toes these days.

For it is the time signal transmitted by telegraph from the United States naval observatory and retransmitted by radio from Arlington and other radio stations that provides the time for the country.

R. E. Gould, chief of the time section of the bureau of standards, says if these signals are received directly and automatically, the error is seldom as much as .20 second, with the average error generally less than .03 second.

In an underground vault at the naval observatory in Washington there are three high precision clocks which are maintained at constant temperature and pressure.

These clocks record sidereal, or star time, and are compared at frequent intervals with the passage of certain stars over the meridian. They keep such precise time that they never have to be reset unless an accident happens to them.

Since the length of the sidereal day does not agree with that of the solar day which is used in every day life, another clock operating on mean solar time is maintained at the observatory for transmitting time signals. It is compared daily with the sidereal clocks and corrected to agree with mean solar time as computed from the time of the star passages. It has a special contact by which time signals may be transmitted, and it is these signals that are heard by radio.

EXPECTS 4,000,000 TO FILE TAX RETURNS BY MARCH 15

WASHINGTON —(AP)— About one person in 30 throughout the United States is expected to file income tax returns for 1929 before March 15

Uncle Sam looks for more than 4,000,000 reports from people in these classes: all single persons with a net income of $1,500 or more for the year or a gross income of $5,000 or more; all married couples who had net incomes of $3,500 or more or gross incomes of $5,000 or more

All these must fill out special forms with collectors of internal revenue for districts in which they live.

On the first $4,000 in excess of exemptions and credits there is a tax of one-half of one per cent normal tax. On the next $4,000 there is a two per cent normal tax, with four per cent normal tax on the balance of net income. For net incomes exceeding $10,000 there is a surtax.

All income from any source whatever, unless exempt from law, is classed as "gross income." "Net income" refers to gross income less deductions as specified by law

A single person who is "head of a family" is allowed the same personal exemptions granted a married person. Any taxpayer may claim $400 exemption for each person dependent on him for support if that person is under 18 years of age or incapable of self support.

When separate returns are made by husband and wife, living together, either may claim the $3,500 exemption or they may divide it between them.

Salaried persons, who are entitled to 25 per cent credit on net earned income, comprise the vast majority of taxpayers.

To ascertain his payable tax, a taxpayer first should figure the amount payable without the "earned income" credit. This amount less 25 per cent, then is the balance due.

"Earned income" includes "wages, salaries, professional fees and other amounts received as compensation for personal services actually rendered."

BURTON BOSWORTH, POMFRET, CHARGED WITH KIDNAPPING NEAR NEW LONDON

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Feb. 28.—The state police and the police of every city in the state this afternoon were requested to apprehend Burton Bosworth, Pomfret and East Woodstock, on a charge of kidnaping. The man, who has been estranged from his wife a short time, went to the residence of his wife in Waterford and seized their child, driving away in an automobile. Bosworth went to the home of his wife about 2 o'clock and while the child, aged 3, was at play, the father watched a favorable opportunity and taking the child to his automobile, speeded away. Bosworth's act was observed by a neighbor, who informed Mrs. Bosworth, also said that the car was a Pontiac, green in color and carrying Connecticut registration 69735. Inquiry of the state motor vehicle department brought the information that when Bosworth was given a license, he gave his address as East Woodstock. The child had been given into the mother's custody a short time ago by a court order.

Harry Williams, employed by the Hudson—Essex company, Main and Church streets, was the victim of a flim-flam young man last night. The crook entered the garage and purchased a bulb. He tendered a $20 bill in payment and after Williams had made change, the crook requested to be returned the bill for he produced a bill of smaller denomination with which to pay for the bulb. Williams granted the request and after the crook had departed, the former discovered that during the handling of the bills he had been victimized out of $5. Williams reported his loss at police headquarters.

Attempted Break

An employe of the A. & P. store, 819 Bank street, reported to Patrolman George McCaskey this morning that he believed an attempt was made last night by a thief to gain entrance to the store, for the employe declared that a window which he was positive was closed when the store suspended business yesterday afternoon was open this morning. Entrance to the store could not be obtained through the window, however, for it is protected by iron bars.

Announcement is made of the engagement of Miss Ignatia Jordan, daughter of Joseph Jordan, Squire street, to Selden Whitcomb, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Whitcomb, also of Squire street.

FEMALE SHARPERS' SCHEME TO BEAT THEATRE MEN

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Feb. 28.—The New London police today were requested by the New Haven police to be on the lookout for a couple of female imposters, who are working a fraudulent scheme among theatre managers in the state by which they obtain easy money. One of the women obtains an audience with the playhouse manager and offers to sell him certain articles for use in the theatre. The order obtained by the solicitor is invariably $15, and after it is given the O. K. by the manager the canvasser changes the order to one calling for delivery of merchandise of the value of $150. The solicitor does not deliver the goods, but a confederate does. In most cases the manager makes payment, for the order carries his authorization for the sale of the goods, in spite of the fact that he realizes it has been changed.

Patrolman George Perkins tonight discovered the entrance of the Mill Grain store, corner of Mill and Winthrop streets, unlocked. The officer was unable to secure the door, neither could the proprietor, B. W. Jones, be found.

DOG WARDEN RESIGNS— PAY IS TOO UNCERTAIN

Because of his compensation for services rendered as dog warden, Percy F. Martin today tendered his resignation to City Manager William A. Holt and requested that it become effective tomorrow. Martin gave his reason for resigning as "the prevailing unsatisfactory system" by which Martin receives remuneration for the post which does not carry with it a fixed salary, the compensation being entirely fees. Martin has held the office but a few months, he having succeeded the late John Sweezy. City Manager Holt has not acted upon the resignation of Martin, but probably will do so within a few days.

FARM WORKER IN JAIL TILL TIME TO START PLOWING

John Billings, Waterford farm hand, an old offender against the law, apparently does not appreciate leniency when extended to him by the police court, for Billings was before that tribunal yesterday and again today. Yesterday when Billings was presented on a charge of intoxication, Judge Daniel M. Cronin sentenced the farm worker to 30 days in jail, but suspended execution of the sentence. Last night Billings proceeded to get intoxicated again, so that when he went to police headquarters drunk and requested lodging, he was locked up. This morning the sentence of yesterday was revoked, so that Billings will be liberated about the time that farming duties will start, providing favorable weather prevails, for he will be in confinement about five weeks.

Another case of intoxication was disposed of by the man being fined $5 and costs. He was arrested last night on North Bank street.

Andrew Pedro, 19 1-2 Mitchell court, was charged with breach of the peace. His case was continued until March 31. Pedro was arrested on Jan. 22 when he went to his home and abused his wife.

Pedro is liable to be presented in court again and long before the continuance date named by Judge Cronin today, for this afternoon Pedro went to his home and threatened to beat up his wife again. Mrs. Pedro went to police headquarters and made another complaint against her husband. Officers could not find the man, but when they are successful Pedro will be re-arrested.

Joseph Sobczyk, 177 North Bank street, was charged with breach of the peace. The case was disposed of by the charge being nolled. Sobczyk was arrested Jan. 27 when he engaged in a row with his wife.

Committed to Norwich Hosp.

Michael Santori, 33 Winthrop street, who was arrested yesterday after he had threatened members of his family with bodily harm, was examined last night at police headquarters by two physicians, who decided that Santori was insane. He was committed to Norwich State hospital and was taken there by two officers. Santori had been acting strangely for several days and his family feared that they would be attacked by the man. Yesterday afternoon he seized a hammer and threatened to kill the entire household. Mrs. Santori sent her young son to police headquarters to enter a complaint against the man. Patrolman Dennis Murphy went to the Santori house and arrested the husband.

A section of glass in the sidewalk in front of the store 54 State street, became dislodged this afternoon, causing a small opening to exist. The defective walk was reported to Patrolman Henry Hick and then turned over to the highway department. Repairs will be made Saturday.

WILLIAM FRANKLIN'S LUCK CAME WITH FINDING 1829 COIN

William Franklin, a young man lucky in finding old coins, started out from his home on Elm street to go to the post office after his morning mail. Half way down to the village post office he found a coin and it was an old penny, the color of the dirt and he could not make out how old it was, although it seemed as big as the moon. But a little sand paper soon brought out the age of the cent, and it read 1829, over 100 years old. A smile came on William's face at this sign of good luck, for he is out of work and has been all over looking for a job, but finding none in sight.

He was almost to the post office when he looked down toward the ground and saw a caterpillar crawling along. He did not know if the animal with a thousand legs was after a letter, or giving Lucky Franklin a race. The caterpillar did not seem cold or have on any overcoat or overshoes. It might be that the backbone of winter has broken, where everybody is seeing robins, blue birds and black snakes, it means something, although Mr. Franklin does not think spring is around the corner yet. Seeing a brown caterpillar in February is the sign of a snow storm with hail stones large as marbles. And sure enough, before the sidewalks were taken in by Ex-Mayor Eugene Mallett at night, the ground was covered with snow.

One Noank weather prophet says: "About ten years ago I was working in Chicago, and the winter was mild, many warm days, not much snow. I was in a hurry to work trying to catch a street car around the middle of February. I looked and saw a brown caterpillar crawling along fast, as if he was ready to steal second base on Lefty Grove, of the Phillies. I at first thought he was going to ask me for the time, or a dime for a cup of coffee; but the brown crawler was soon out of sight. Believe me, we had some real winter, snow high as five feet, and ice with hail stones nearly as large as golf balls. The wind rose and did damage. If any one tells you of seeing a brown caterpillar in February means spring just round the corner, he is mistaken. Seeing all them things like birds and animals and pussy willows only means that the second part of winter has begun, until March is half gone and the lawn mower is in action, for I have traveled all over the world, by auto and train, also by the shoe leather express on the highway for the last six years and have seen a caterpillar and a robin, also heared peep frogs, but no warm weather—only bringing out snow shovels and sleds for the children—that is the sign. There might be something in it, but I am from Missouri, and have got to be shown."

Coming back to the old United States one cent piece, not many are seen around here a hundred years old; Franklin said, so "I will put that away and some day it will be worth something. I have many coins, picked up while out walking, but never ran across any one in this line. While I was showing it to several friends at the gas station on the corner of Elm street, a big Packard sedan came in for gas. A middle aged man, with a fur coat made from the largest raccoon shot in Canada or in the Maine woods, got out of the car and came into the station. He asked what was interesting this morning. "Oh, nothing but a one cent piece 100 years old!" "Well, it is a long time since I saw one of them! I remember when I was around 10 years old my mother used to give me that kind of pennies to buy a telephone pole stick of candy that would last a couple of days! That is 35 years ago, and up to today I have not seen one of them. I've been touring all over the world and across the pond, but not until today have I came across one of them. I am from Dayton, Ohio, my home town, after a visit with relatives in Boston. Well, young man, would you like to sell the old coin to me. I will give you $30 for it. While I've got to have my oil changed, you can think it over! I would like to take it back home with me."

In ten minutes the man came back and said, "Well, Noanker, What is it? Do I or don't I?" The blonde from Elm street said with a smile, "I will let you have it so you can put it away in your wooden box in Ohio!" The raccoon coat man took out of his pocket a roll of bills large enough to choke a circus elephant and passed Franklin a $50 bill, the smallest he had. "Well, I have no change for that! It is months since I have seen a $50 bill!" The stranger laughed as he fastened up the $300 coat. "You can have the change and go get yourself a brand new hair cut and your shoes shined and good luck to you! Any time you get out in Ohio near my home town look me up, and I will be glad to show you a good time. Here is my card! but don't let the name get in the paper! For you cannot tell who is around that can use a pencil or a typewriter!" Soon the stranger was over Prospect Hill and out of sight.

"Hey, Jake Smith! What is the date today? The 28th! That will go down in my book as my lucky day! I never thought any one wanted an old coin like that one—but you never can tell! Gee! I am happy as a flapper with bobbed hair."

So William Franklin went home to break the news to his mother over the lucky coin he picked up on his way down to the post office to get a letter from his sweetheart in Chicago. That came also, so he had to sit down and tell the story all over again, also about the caterpillar on parade.

"Well, mother, I am going to get you an Easter suit and an Easter hat with the greenback a fellow gave me for the old coin!" His mother said, "William, you ought to be called 'Lucky Willie,' for I remember the stone axe made by an Indian you found while plowing the garden one spring in your back yard and some day that, too, will be worth something."

And they both were happy.

MISSING WESTERN HORSE SOUGHT FROM NO. STONINGTON

Somewhere in the wilds of New London or Washington county there roams a horse. It all came about following the receipt at the Westerly freight yard Tuesday of twenty head of horses shipped to Westerly from Ralston, Nebraska, for Judge Ledyard S. Anthony, formerly of the North Stonington court, who now resides on the Bashaw stock farm, on the Ashaway-North Stonington road. Judge Anthony has notified the Hope Valley and Groton barracks of the R. I. and Conn. state police of the wanderings of a wild horse. The animal sought is a chestnut, weight 1400 lbs., value $200. The "Anthony missing mustang" is a draft horse gone now for three long days.

Judge Anthony, an expert on horses, declares that following the horse's long journey to New England from the western plain he may have contracted the emigration habit and before the search is ended the owner may have to comb Windham or Tolland counties in Connecticut or Kent and Bristol counties in Rhode Island—(out west, they talk in terms of counties.) It is easy to picture the consternation of a night motorist on state or country road when suddenly confronted by a riderless horse unfamiliar with the system or meaning of red or even green-lighted automobiles in motion or parked by the roadside. Judge Anthony is certain the horse was left secured or tied in the barn, where he later counted but nineteen of the shipment. Today (Saturday) he expects to receive another carload at the Westerly freight yard and has made careful plans to see that the drove of wild horses is not lessened in number. Late radio-listeners in Ashaway, night before last heard galloping hoofbeats in the village streets, also saw "shapes in the dark." Judge Anthony is seeking the addresses of Connecticut or Rhode Island pound keepers with stray horses in their pounds.

Scouts Hiking-Party

Scout Executive John Harvey Farnsworth of Westerly Friday headed a Boy Scout hiking party of over fifty which left Scout headquarters on Main street shortly after 10 a. m. for the Boy Scout camp on the Pawcatuck river near Meeting House bridge. The Scouts in heavy hiking order with knapsacks and grub marched in column of twos through Dixon square and by way of Wilcox park on their way to the camp. Due to this being vacation week and mild weather, the Scouts turned out in larger number than usual for the outing.

NEGLECTS HIS FAMILY— M'CALL IS SENT TO JAIL

Before Judge Oliver H. Williams Friday in Third District court, Alexander McCall was charged with neglect to provide for his wife, also for his children. The case was continued from a previous session to see if a reconciliation could not be effected. Attorney Dunn for the defendant told the court that the wife had not seen fit to return to her home. For the state Mr. Ferguson claimed that the children had not been provided for for four years by the husband and that the wife, who had worked for their support had been ordered by her physician to stop work. Representation was made to the court that Director of Public Aid Oliver P. Crandall had spent $12 of the town's money to procure the supplies needed for the family. In spite of the claim of defendant that the door to his home had been open for the return of the wife and children Judge Williams sentenced him to six months in Providence county jail and to pay costs.

The case of State, Thomas E. Brown, complainant, vs. Angelo Vitteritto for alleged revelling Saturday night at a dance at the Dixon street state armory, when he was taken into custody by Police Officer Paul McCarthy, was continued two weeks.

The case of Natale Farrago for alleged assault upon his wife was continued one week.

Alexander Taylor, charged Feb. 21st with assault upon his wife, Louise Taylor changed his previous plea of not guilty to nolo. Prosecutor Ferguson informed the court that the wife had come to Chief Brown and complained of a number of assaults but Thursday afternoon declared that she desired to withdraw the complaint. Judge Williams declared that the marital life of the couple was not all that it should have been, but for the sake of the mother he was going to give the accused a chance to be a better man and that it depended entirely upon him what the court eventually did in the case. The case was continued for further consideration.

Civil docket—Crown Piece Dye Works Inc., vs. J. Stanley Dow and Roland Dow. Judgement entered for plaintiff as per agreement of counsel. Stephen Borja vs. Peter C. Cleckowek. Week's continuance granted with definite date set for hearing. American Chain Link Co. vs. Giuseppe Bevacqa. Continued one week. Fred Griffin vs. Fred B. Savage. Continued one week.

R-101'S DESIGNER BUILT ONE TOO BIG

CARDINGTON, Eng. —(AP)— Lieut. Col. V. C. Richmond, who designed the new British dirigible R-101, once built an "airship" too big for its hangar.

When a lad he conceived the building of a box kite bigger than any in his neighborhood. All went well with the mighty craft, until it was ready to launch. Then it was discovered it was too big to go out any of the doors of the house in which it was built.

MYSTIC

Late in the afternoon Wednesday, Preston R. Hewitt, of Stonington, ran into the car of Dr. Thurman P. Maine, of North Stonington, as the latter was coming down Clift street, in Mystic. It is claimed that Hewitt was in the middle of the road, and although Dr. Maine got over into the ditch as far as possible, the hub caps hit. There was not much damage, but Hewitt started to speed away. Dr. Maine started after him and every time the doctor tried to pass him, Hewitt crowded him over, nearly into the ditch sometimes. The doctor finally succeeded in passing him near Camp Mystic on the River road and stopped, but Hewitt went by. Then the chase began again. The doctor got ahead of him again and by zigzagging in front of him every time he tried to pass, finally slowed down enough so that by the time he stopped by Cirioni's sand bank on the River road, Hewitt had slammed into the doctor's car again. As Dr. Maine reached Hewitt's car, the latter started to get out, ready to fight. With a few slaps administered by the doctor, Hewitt was quieted. About this time, Austin Sturgis and Panciera came along. One of them went to call the police. Johnson, of Mystic, refusing to come, the state cops were called. Hewitt was arrested and taken into Groton court. The charge of evading responsibility was thrown out, and Hewitt was fined $100 and costs, for driving while under the influence of liquor. Later, $50 of this fine was remitted.

SAYS ELECTRIC LIGHTS DON'T FOOL SETTING HENS

ST. PAUL, Minn. —(AP)— Add the hen to those who can't be fooled all the time, says Dr. F. B. Hutt, poultry specialist of Minnesota state college.

A few of them, he says, will continue to augment their day's work by laying another egg at night if electric lights are turned on after they have gone to roost, but most hens will strike when they discover their mistake and lay few eggs day or night.

Twelve hours on the roost and 12 hours in the scratching pen or nest is the ideal working schedule for the productive hen, Dr. Hutt says.

SOCIAL CORNER POETRY

Lines to a New England Housewife

When finally your busy hands are still,
When all your tasks are those of yesterday,
And, panting, you have climbed Death's cruel hill
In search of Him to whom you daily pray;
How can you tell Him of His lovely earth?
Of little lazy hopes that passed you by,
Of hours you felt Him near in pain of birth—
Or even what you think about the sky?

'Great Father of all households," you will say,
"I leave behind not one neglected care
I never wandered from the beaten way.
There is no dust upon my shining stair.
Life's moments all spelled duties done for me,
This space is terror, I beseech of you,
In all the vastness of Eternity
Is there no homely task that I may do?

The Weaver

Pakali sits before her blanket loom,
And softly sings of love, the while she weaves.
Her dark eyes, filled with dreams, can can scarce keep pace
With her tiny hands, as bronze as autumn leaves—
She weaves with crimson thread, and all may see—
Her lover comes today, the Cherokee.

Life swiftly moves. A wife and mother now,
She marks upon her loom the fleeting moons—
A gray-eyed papoose wakes with lusty cry,
She rocks him gently to and fro, and croons,
"Toni, Toni, Tuka Toni"—
The old, old Indian lullaby.

Moons wax and wane. A withered squaw, alone,
She weaves upon her loom with somber shade—
Life, Love and Death are woven all in one,
With colors true that ne'er shall dim or fade.
'Tis done! She breaks the thread with trembling hand—
Gray eyes are beckoning from the Spirit Land.

In Retrospect

The Fool I was at Twenty-one!
The little that I knew!
The silly things I'd think about
The sillier things I'd do!
Oh, when I look upon that youth
And all the dreams he spun,
I wonder how I could have been
That Fool at Twenty-one.

He thought he knew the world and all
The life that makes it go;
How bruised he was before he learned
How much he didn't know!
No wise folk could enlighten him!
He had his course to run
And so he went and ran it blind,
That Fool at Twenty-One.

The Fool I was at Twenty-One
Before I got my sense!
Before I learned the obvious things
By dour experience!
How time was lost in frantic waste
And thriftless, heedless "fun"!—
But how I'd love to be again
That Fool at Twenty-One!

Good Advice

Build for yourself a strong box,
Fashion each part with care
And when it's as strong as your hand can make it,
Put all your trouble there.
Put in all sense of your failure,
Each bitter cup that you quaff,
Lock all your heartaches within it,
Then sit on the lid and laugh.

Tell no one else its contents,
Never its secret share,
Drop in your cares and worries
And keep them forever there.
Hide them from sight so completely,
That the world will never guess half,
Fasten your strong box securely
Then sit on the lid and laugh.

CHATTY LETTER FROM PISCES

Dear Social Corner: I need a small space this week to answer a few questions so will strike while the iron is hot, in other words while I have the time and inclination to write.

We are all familiar with the freaks of nature and will have to stand the weather unless we have the luck to go to a more even climate. So many nice letters keep coming to the Corner every week find new names and new subjects to write about. The Trundle bed started up memories that had been forgotten. Anyone who likes to see old furniture go to Morgan's memorial in Hartford. There is everything that a lover of the old would wish to see.

Now about the old songs. There is a melody in them and they will always be sung. Even Hi Diddle Diddle, the Cat's in the Fiddle sounds better than You Are My Black and White Hoop La. Ain't Ye?

Jane of R. I.: Do I believe in astrology? Certainly, it is one of the oldest sciences and the most accurate. But I refer you to Aries. She is better posted.

Aries: That pen of yours is never idle and I read it all. But the list of books you gave is not so interesting as a story I am reading called Lurie and I, by William H. Thomes, an old time writer, published in Ballou's magazine of 1883. I have a stack of the books and find some difference in the language. But the girls and boys made love and capered around just the same as they do now-a-days. We can't be young but once.

Gertrude: I'll send in another soon. I mean not to shock the unbelievers or the believers. This is my belief:
It was for me that Jesus came to suffer.
It was for me He died up on the tree.
It was for me with God He interceded.
It was for me, oh yes, it was for me.

Artificial Flowers: I was made glad when I got the valentine you sent. Never had a pretty one before. Always one of the mean ones that hurt even when I laughed. Hope you can come to the next meeting to be held here if it don't snow or rain.

Yellow Daisy: I have been on the hunt for the minute pudding and am so glad you sent it in. It is just as my mother made it and I thank you.

I notice one of the writers signs her name Freelove. Now, how do you come by that name? I never heard it outside of my family. My grandmother, aunt and cousins had the name of Freelove.

Twice Twenty: Letter received. Glad you accepted. I have another stand cloth like the one I gave you, not as good but may be you would like it. I never knew Mr. was ill. Tell him to cheer up, summer will get here July the 1st and then he can get out in the sun. You did a wise thing when you came down stairs. Nothing like being good to yourself. Hope you won't be sick.

Quid Nunc: I won't be conspicuous by my absence any longer for you to miss my contributions. One thing I never went fishing or wanted to take life.

Segui il cerso e lascia dir le genti.

L. W. Hopkins: I have heard of Comical Brown but never heard him sing. But I knew Nason Leavitt and son Bert, who wrote the Frogs of Windham.

Have heard my husband speak of Uncle Cole who lived in Clayville. He was in some kind of business. He must be dead or a very old man. Can you tell me about Mr. Cole? I take it you must live in Scotland near L. T. H.

I would like to know who made that delicious lemon pie. It was served at the last meeting which was held in Danielson.

A few epitaphs:

Here lies the farm of Peter Smith. He lived by taking stitches. But now Mr. Peter is no more, his cruel wife his poor heart tore. She always wore the britches.

Here lies the body of Jane Smith wife of Thomas Smith, marble cutter. This monument was erected by her husband as a tribute to her memory and a specimen of his work. The same style two hundred dollars.

Who ever heard the song called The captain and his whiskers caught a sly glance at me, one of the Civil war songs? Also The Faded Coat of Blue and Wake Nicodemus?

Prayer, or greeting, were we present, would be felt, but half unsaid. We can write because our letters, not our faces, will be read.

Phila Need: Mrs. E. S. Phillips is at the Day Kimball hospital. She would like cards and letters to cheer the lonely hours, so brothers and sisters get busy.

ANSWERS AND INQUIRIES

MISS S. F. W.: Letter sent as requested.

HELP FOR EVELINE BURR

Dear Editor and Corner Sisters: I must write so as to get it to Norwich Wednesday so it will be on the Corner page Saturday. We did not get our paper last Saturday as we had no delivery or mail so I had to read the Corner page today. I missed it over Sunday.

I want to help Eveline Burr for the piece she speaks of interested me many years ago and I learned it. It was written by Charles Sprague, a native of Boston, born Oct. 25th, 1791. The American Indian was taken from a Fourth of July oration. I being the fifth generation from an Indian woman who married one of the early settlers of Gardner, Mass., felt interested in the piece. My brother, when he lived in Nebraska, was located close to the Sioux reservation land and was very friendly with the Indians and said he liked them better than the people who came after the land was thrown open to settlement. When I was at the World's fair in Chicago, I saw Sitting Bull, the chief of the Sioux Indians. Another piece I was interested in was "The Speech of Black Hawk," and now our vice president is part Indian. It shows what education will do.

HARBINGERS OF SPRING

Dear Social Cornerites: For nearly a week we have enjoyed the lovely springlike weather. If it could only last, wouldn't it be grand? With the arrival of chicks, flowers and seed catalogues, pussy willow insisting on coming out, and other harbingers such as an occasional blue bird, a faint "phebe," a flock of robins and last but not least the terrible, muddy roads in the rural districts, it seems as if spring was on its way. But we have yet a chance to have more disagreeable weather. I've been told the famous blizzard of 1888 came in March. I won't worry about bad weather though as someone said, "Worry is the interest we pay on trouble before it is due." We can appreciate each lovely day as they come and go.

Stranger-in-the-City: Your letter was very interesting. Such a lot of pinballs! It surely is a very fascinating past-time for you. If you know who I am please "don't spill the beans."

CLUB 5 TO CELEBRATE THE FIFTH

Dear Editor and Social Corner Members: At our next meeting to be held March 5th in the Buckingham Memorial we will celebrate the anniversary of the Social Corner. I hope that we will have a large attendance. Come all that can possibly get away from home on that day, and don't forget to bring something good to eat. I hope that it may be possible for those that have been unable to come on account of sickness to come this time.

Snow Flake: Have you got a nice program for us? Hope you have.

Hoot Owl: I trust that you will be able to come. We have missed you very much.

Whispering Pine: Where have you been all winter? Shall look for you March fifth. Now don't disappoint me.

Too Late: How about you? Will you come and bring Alfara and Tiny Alice?

Now all remember and come on Wednesday, March fifth, for I know we will have a good time. Aunty No. 1 is to be our hostess. With best wishes and sympathy to all the sick ones, also sympathy to those that have had to part with loved ones. Remember [illegible]

ROWLAND HAZARD'S CRADLE

Editor Social Corner: A Social Corner correspondent asks if I still have the cradle in which Rowland Hazard was rocked. Well, I still have the cradle to which she refers, but am sorry to say that I am not very familiar with the history or genealogy of the Hazard families, but have always understood that they were quite prominent people in Rhode Island. I was in a position in my younger days to learn about these families but neglected to do so and now my ignorance troubles me.

My brother, born in 1837, lived with the Thomas J. Hazard family on Escoheag Hill as boy and young man, and when he came to have a family of his own this cradle came to him from that family and several for his eight children. Of that family Thomas I. or Tom I., as he was familiarly known, was the only one I knew. He was a bachelor, lived alone and kept an old black horse named Mack, which he used to ride back and forth around the farm and out to the neighbors, mounting much easier than some young men could do. He was around 90 at that time and died nearly 50 years ago. I think he was the youngest of the family, so you see this cradle dates back at least 150 years and how much longer I can't say.

There used to be a Colonel Hazard cotton broker in Providence. I think a nephew of Tom I. Then there was a Willard Hazard who owned a farm and lived somewhere near Narragansett Pier, some 70 years ago and he had a son, George. According to my faint recollections the house was built of stone or part stone and had two chimneys and was said to have been at one time the headquarters of Gen. Washington. Willard Hazard, I think, was a brother of Tom I. My brother managed the farm all season and I spent a few weeks there in the fall. And now we come to the story of Rowland Hazard, who may or may not have been the Rowland Hazard referred to.

A great many years ago there lived a Rowland Hazard who was reputed to be a very strong man and like most strong, healthy men, was well disposed and peace loving; and as the story goes, one day he chanced to be walking on the road with a gang of men and one of these men was a trouble hunter and inclined to play the bully. He had pestered Rowland and tried to goad him into a fight, when finally Rowland picked up a large stone and carrying it across the road, threw it down. Then turning about he said, "There, the man who fights me will have to put that stone back where I took it from."

Sometime after the incident mentioned above some one cut the initials R. H. on this rock and for many years it was known as "Rowland's Rock." Perhaps some one else knows something of this rock.

Some time I may tell the story of another Rhode Island strong man.

WHO KNOWS HOW TO MAKE CHEESE?

Dear Social Corner Sisters: Some of the sisters were speaking of the beauties of Jack Frost. I couldn't help thinking about Sunday, when it was so cold, below zero in many places. I sat looking out of my bay window which has a lot of plants in it and some in bloom. Then just outside less than two feet away long icicles hung some 1¼ to 1½ yards long and so close together it looked like a crystal bead fringe hanging from the roof and trees, bushes and wires, glistened in the sunlight making it look like fairyland. I thought how beautiful it was to have summer within and to be able to see all the beauties of winter outdoors. So much for our modern homes, well heated and convenience of city homes, but an added pleasure is the freedom of the great outdoors. It won't be long now when we can look for the first paring glowers. I am always happy to find the first violets.

I wonder how many sisters have baby chicks to care for. I have some and expect more. It is a busy time but there is a great deal of pleasure derived from watching them grow.

Irva Lynn: I thank you for your answer to my inquiry.

Do any o fthe sisters know how to make cheese?

There was a poem in Social Corner a few years ago and I have so often wished I had saved it. I only remember a part of it. It goes like this: "More homelike seems the vast unknown, because our loved are there." If any one knows it will they kindly send it in.

Hello Calla Lily: You don't know who I am I'm sure. If you did I think you would come and see me some time when you are out for a ride. I'd love to have a chat with you just for old time's sake if no more. Think hard now.

Health and good luck to all.

CHEERFULNESS

Dear Social Corner Members: I have noticed lately there is much written of cheerfulness and to always have under all sorts of trying difficulties a cheerful countenance.

Of course we all know that cheerfulness is a great moral tonic. As sunshine brings out the flowers and ripens the fruit so does the cheerful spirit develop and bring out all the best in us. Cheerfulness is a duty we owe others. Men seldom break down as long as they keep cheerful. The presence of Florence Nightingale cured as much as her medicines.

One day I called on friends, and as I entered, the first thing I saw in a very conspicuous place was a card on which was printed in large letters, "Keep smiling." A very good motto, I think.

I believe that whatever you do or wherever you go you should keep smiling. The days may seem dark and you may feel blue but keep smiling; your friends may deceive you, your neighbors perplex you but never mind that, they'll soon come to meet you, so plod right along up that steep hill of Life. You'll get your reward at the end of the strife, so keep smiling and be cheerful.

A motto from my calendar:
Oh! Many a shaft at random sent Finds mark, the archers little meant;
And many a word at random spoken
May soothe or wound a heart that's broken.

ENJOYED ALL LETTERS

Dear Social Corner Sisters and Friends: This is Washington's birthday, a fine day too, so sunny, most of the day. There were many letters on the Corner page today and I enjoyed reading them, also fine tributes to Washington, our first president. Well may it be said, "In Solemn Trust, the Sword of Power Was Given to Glory's Unspoiled Son."

I hope we have a large gathering at our next meeting, March 5, and that it will be happy, as usual. Spring will soon be here and the birds will sing, hammers will swing, flowers spring up as emblems of hope and the days growing longer, all the while. Best wishes to all until we meet again

ROBIN MAKES EARLY APPEARANCE

To Social Corner of Bulletin: It is a long time since I have written to the Social Corner, but I read so many invitations from the old members who do write often "to send in something even if it is not lengthy" I am venturing once more to add my little to the Corner.

These nice warm days, after the very cold weather we had, make one think of the joys that are in store for us later on—buds, flowers and the bright and varied greens of the new foliage. I saw a robin a few days ago. He walked as tho rheumatism had settled in his feet. Thought spring had surely come when someone told me robins had been around all winter. You can imagine my disappointment.

Well, Roberta, I hear you are working. How do you like the country? Cannot see a thing out of my right eye. Am wondering what I am to do later on. Sorry not to be able to attend the Social Corner gatherings. Can't go out in very cold weather. See Primrose once in a while.

Aries: I just love to read your letters and poems.

Ann Tenna also gives me inspiration. Lots of things I want to write about but can't think of them now.

CLEEP WALKING

Dear Editor and Sisters: I am afraid I shall have to stop writing so many letters to the Social Corner. My son who works for a plumber has just installed a white sink and drain board in my kitchen and I shall have to live up to it. I expect I shall have to wash dishes three times a day instead of once and keep the floor swept and the dresser cleaned off so I can at least lay down a dime if I have one and my stove polished and the windows washed. Oh, dear, I guess I'll stop, I'm all discouraged now. If these things would only stay done when we get them done it would be one thing. I don't expect I should leave dishes to drain on that nice white drain board as I did in the wire drainer instead of wiping them. And by the way, my drainer I have had nearly 20 years and the woman who gave it to me had it I don't know how many years before that. Well, maybe I'll live up to that new sink but the doubt in my mind is over large right now. This minute the floor needs sweeping. It worries me terribly.

Last week Jennie wrote of sleep walking. There is a member of my family that used to, too, when she was eleven and twelve years old, she would get up and do lessons in arithmetic she couldn't do when she was awake. She would work on examples before going to bed and sometimes the ones she couldn't do would be done in the morning. Another thing she would do was hide articles of clothing. One morning her mother couldn't find anything to put on, even her good dresses were gone. They searched everywhere, after a while finding each piece in a neat roll under the parlor couch. They decided then that something must be done so they took her to a doctor who sent her to an occulist. She was very near sighted and after being properly fitted with glasses she never did it again. This reads like a fairy tale but it was an actual fact.

Last night we had a thunder storm after several days of warm weather, giving us an idea spring is around the corner and making me, for one, dissatisfied with the cold wind today. February will be over before this is printed and March means spring even if we have some cold. Last October, the winter stretched away to an unterminable distance but here it is practically gone and it hasn't been so terribly bad after all. The children haven't had near as many colds as usual and any way it always seems easier to look back on what has gone by than to look ahead, not knowing what is coming. I told my son who broke his ankle, it might have been a lot worse, I might have broke my jaw and couldn't talk. I don't think anything could be worse than that.

We are sorry to hear of the death of Chauffeur's husband. We have missed them at the meetings lately. And Commuter must be having her share of trouble this winter. I saw in the paper that her husband has pneumonia.

Pyrethrum: Did your daughters tell you I have some woolen carpet rags you could have?

Beers: Many happy returns.

Mrs. F. of Oak St.: Use either Star or Cormand water according to directions to bleach out the rose color. Another thrill?

Nothing (?): A. got a big kick out of the Martha episode.

Just-a-Nut: I guess Milky Way never will get around to write but I think she has a cactus for you. I hope you can come to the next meeting.

Nereid: You should see Joanna sitting in Kitty Lou's rocking chair reading(?) a Mother Goose book. She don't like the cat much.

Sympathy to Chauffeur and Commuter and others who are in distress.

SUMAC, (No. 6).

GREETINGS FROM E. L. M.

Dear Social Corner Members: What a nice lot of reading on the Social Corner pages last Saturday.

Sumac: Your letter was fine. I owed you one hug last month and it will be two this time.

Aunty No. 1: Have just been reading about your anniversary. Congratulations.

Chauffeur: Sorry to hear of your bereavement. We shall miss seeing him at our meetings.

I wonder if any of you have pussy willows growing in the house. When we had that very warm spell several weeks ago, Mr. E. L. M. brought in a few twigs. I put them in a vase with water and put them in the sun and now the "pussys" are over an inch long.

Topsy: Where were you on the 18th?

E. L. M.

THE RETURN OF SPRING.

Dear Editor and Friends: Spring. What a welcome sound and what a thrill of pleasure it gives to write the first spring month which is March. I have several remembrances of the month as a dinner guest at different homes in honor of the day and observance of my birthday.

Man who tills the soil will begin to think of seed time and the wife of house cleaning days. Mother Earth is about ready to discard the old brown winter dress, to don the new spring garb of green and soon the swelling buds upon the leafless tree, which are the opening door of the tiny leaf, will clothe the naked branches into a tree of beauty with its thick leafage of green. Winter's monotony at pleasure resorts and camping sections will be ov as the teeming life of summer begins. So the trend of the thought is with the awakening of spring.

Now turn to the home where death has entered and sadness lingers. We extend our sympathy to the one known in the Social Corner as Chauffeur, who is left to mourn the loss of a husband, and to the sister and others that are near. We shall miss the familiar face and friendly voice of Wm. H. Whitman in our social gatherings and at the noon hour the vacant chair will be the mute witness to the passing of another Civil war veteran. A musician of ability and many times I have watched the nimble fingers as he played the violin and followed his career in fiddling contests with interest. A devoted husband, a kind neighbor and an esteemed citizen, and when the summons came he crossed the bar to join the comrades that have gone before to enter his enternal life.

ANTICIPATING ANNIVERSARY

Dear Social Corner: Greetings this fine March 1st. Am wondering if we consider it a lamb or a lion.

I presume some member will be getting ready for a shamrock party this month but I am hoping to be able to meet with Club 5 and Club 2 at B. M. Club 5 on Ash Wednesday and Club 2 the 11th and Club 1 on the 12th. These are special events as they mark the birthday of the Social Corner. I forget if the other clubs celebrate also but no doubt others will be able to meet and enjoy a grand hand shake and pow-wow. Oh, how it will hum! like a swarm of bees. Wake up, Club 4, and send a large delegation to these meetings.

Here are a few Chinese proverbs:

An emperor may have the measles.

A disobedient son is a mad bull tied to his father's pigtail. The man who breaks an egg in the center is a fool. One bird's nest in the soup is worth 200 in the bush.

A wise man at court is like a mermaid in a ball oom.

Ambition is like hunting for fleas.

Shave with a file if you like, but don't blame the razor.

Looking into the future is like giving a blind man a pair of spectacles to see through a millstone.

Teaching a woman scandal is like teaching a kettle to boil.

A question:

Bathtubs abound in America but compared with cars they're one to three. The reason why is plain to a dub: where can you go in a porcelain tub?

Home definitions:

Tripes—One man top.

Scat—Foot corsets.

Macaroni—A long hole with some dough wrapped around it.

Grass Widow—A woman who has been given a legal permit to hunt a new meal ticket.

Alimony—A fine levied on a man guilty of matrimony.

Beauty Contest—A competion for women to see who can wear the least clothes.

Cockney—A London native who can't speak English.

That's as final as a period.

ANTIQUEING.

Dear Social Corner Readers: I want to express my thanks to those who answered my recent inquiries. Two replies were on our page Saturday and the third had already reached me in a personal letter.

Omaha Bee: Your letter on the delights of reading was fine. Your thoughts were so well expressed, I wish you would write oftener.

In her letter on Old Hampton Cretia spoke of a beautiful mahogany lowboy and other antiques. I wonder that more letters have not been sent in on this fascinating subject. There certainly is a lure about antiqueing. Collectors and dealers are so enthusiastic and nothing seems to daunt them in their search. No journey is too long, no road too rough, no stairway too rickety, no owner too difficult for them. I admire their pluck and never fail to help them a bit when I can. Many an empty purse has been filled from the sale of a few decrepit chairs and tables that were not used in the household. I think the lure is partly due to the fact that the most unlikely places now and then yield some of the choicest finds. At such a time I fancy the joy of achievement must blot from the memory of the fortunate one many a toilsome day of fruitless search. I often get a touch of antique fever by meeting enthusiastic devotees, but I have not yet learned what's what in antiques. Many public libraries have illustrated books that are very helpful but so far as I know the small library here has nothing to offer in that line. I wish some of our members would write on this subject. Do describe some quaint corner cupboard in your home, some prized set of china or graceful lowboy or tell us of interesting experiences you may have had at auctions when perhaps you secured for a trifling sum some treasure that somehow escaped the attention of other bidders. It would seem that the supply of these old pieces would have been exhausted ere this but every year the settlement of estates places more of them on the market and all too often the pinch of poverty forces a reluctant owner to sell. His treasured heirlooms and so the hills and valleys of old Connecticut continue to yield these precious treasures. With friendly greetings to you all.

A QUERY FROM SILENT PARTNER

Dear Social Corner Members: Here comes a slacker, but if I could write letters like some of you, I'd write every week. But as I'm not much of a writer I don't think my letters will be missed. I haven't felt like doing much of anything for the last year, so have been taking things easy. High blood pressure may be fashionable but it's not popular with me.

I have been interested in the letters about the trundle beds. I don't think I ever slept in one, but my brothers, younger, did. I suppose the old cradles, too, are a thing of the past. We have one in the family more than 65 years old and some of my children were rocked in it.

I took a ride a few weeks ago through the village of Newent, Lisbon, past the house where I lived for five years when a small child, saw the fine new schoolhouse and where the old one once stood, where I first went to school. Nearby, too, stands the church where the children played on the steps and the lawn surrounding it. Those were carefree, happy days.

Now, I have a question to ask, and I wonder if any one can answer it. Who owns Brewster's Neck chapel, and what is going to be done with it? It has had a hole cut in the side of it for some time, and I presume it is destined for a garage. It was built by subscription something like 50 years ago. I well remember the dedication services when the building was crowded. My sister played the organ and I think every one sang that could sing. The late Deacon John L. Dennison of the Central Baptist church preached there for a number of years, and a finer speaker I wouldn't ask to hear. If he could come back he, like myself, would mourn the passing of Brewster's Neck church.

N. O. T.: Thanks for Christmas card from you and partner. It brought back memories of other days.

Aunt Susie: Will try and write you a letter soon.

A happy year to all, what's left of it.

GREETINGS FROM WINDHAM BLUE

Dear Social Corner Sisters: I don't do much toward filling the Corner page that the editor has reserved for us. Am busy most all of the time with other things.

River View: My P. O. address is Norwich Town, R. F. D., No. 3. I am going to try to get up to town next meeting. I did not know your address or I should have dropped you a note giving you my address. I hope to meet the sister that had the pretty bed quilt block. I could not get it together.

Paleface: Have you been sick? I think you are the one who sent me the pretty table runner are you not? What beautiful weather it has been! I guess the weather man knew I was going to move. My phone number is 2896-3.

Hope to hear from the sisters.

Many of our sisters have passed away and I miss their presence as soon as I enter the hall. Hope all that are sick will soon be with us again.

WINDHAM BLUE BELL (Club 1)

SOFA PILLOWS

Dear Editor and Social Corner Sisters: I am a great lover of pretty sofa pillows. Thought I would tell you about the pillow that I made and gave to a sea captain once. I wanted to give him something for his home, as he had taken me on many fine trips in the pilot house of his ship with him and he let me blow the whistle and steer the big boat, and that was a joy and great thrill to me, you may believe.

I made him a large pillow covered with a piece of cloth that had a beautiful painting of a lady on it. The face was life size and the colors were as realistic as could be. The background was of a bright blue and her hair was black and she had beautiful blue eyes. This pillow I covered with a coarse black point desprit, something like a fine lace with little dots in it and made a ruffle of blue and black also of both the plain cloth and the lace. It was handsome and his wife was very proud of it. The pillow was filled with silk floss.

A group of small pillows make a nice present. A 10-inch square pillow can be used in many places. Cover with pretty cretonne in bright colors. I prefer a black background with orange and vivid colorings for this kind does not soil as quickly as a lighter pattern. Be sure the colors do not clash with their surroundings.

A good cretonne will wash very well. I paid as much as $1 a yard for mine, but I found that it paid to, as it washed beautifully. These pillows are so quickly made and are so handy in many ways.

Fleurdelis: Your poem was sweet. Love poems I always like. I wonder if you and others would be interested in something new and that is what we all want. Were you ever sick in bed? Most people have been.

You can use a card table to eat on. It is very convenient when serving meals to a person in bed. Two of the legs may rest on the floor and the other two legs folded under allow the table to rest on the bed over the patient's knees. My boy was in bed two weeks and I found it made a nice place for his toys and books. He had scarlet fever and by keeping him in one room and in bed, he had it light. Had doctor but once, and none of the rest of us took it, and we had never had it either. Children need so much care, and if given the proper care, will live and keep well, I believe.

My boys, the oldest is 13, have had everything, but a doctor only two or three times so far.

Thanks Aries for kind note and paper. I think you must be a jolly person and kind hearted. Am some better.

JANE OF R. I.

USE YOUR TALENT WHEN YOU CAN.

Dear Editor and Social Corner Friends: It is another glorious morning with the ground covered with snow but when "Old Sol" gets busy the whiteness will soon disappear.

Thank you Calla Lily and Lowthorpe for your words of appreciation. I am glad to do anything I can at any time. It was a pleasure to play the accompaniments for Meadowlark. God has given each of us some talent and why not use it to make a happier world? Which reminds me of a bit of verse I saw somewhere:

The clock of life is wound but once,
And no man has the power
To tell just when the hands will stop,
At late or early hour.
Now is the only time you own,
Give, love, toil with a will;
Place no faith in tomorrow
For the clock may then be still.

At this time of the year when it is too early to do outside work we enjoy refinishing our furniture. We had an old commode, one where the cover folded back disclosing a box like arrangement. With hammer and saw we took the front of the top section and both front and back of the bottom part. After sandpapering and filling the old nail holes with putty the inside of the top was painted ivory and the rest green to go with a green bedroom suite we have. It really makes a good looking table and well worth the labor spent on it.

Best wishes to all and sympathy to the shut-ins and those who are sorrowing.

MAWB.

THE MIDDLE AGED WOMAN

Dear Social Corner Members: Here I am again, neither lost, strayed or stolen.

Aren't we having glorious weather? If it only holds out, but it is too good to be true.

Didn't they do fine at the St. Joseph's hospital fire to move so many people, with the children first, and no one any the worse for it?

Was reading an article where they thought it a "blessing for the middle aged woman to re-enter the business world." It gave her something to do, also to take up her mind, so she wouldn't be minding other people's business. One of the trouble-makers is the middle aged woman, because she hasn't as much work to do. Her family (as a general rule) have grown up, gone away or gotten married. Her job is over, sometimes her husband has died. Her hands are empty. She has no interests, nothing to fill in the time, so she gets into mischief. Who are the peevish, fretful, discontented women, the women who are always talking about the ingratitude of children and how mothers sacrifice themselves for their children without ever getting any appreciation? The middle aged women who have nothing to do but pity themselves.

Who are the home-wreckers? The middle aged mothers-in-law, who go to live with their children and who undertake to run their in-laws and their children, and to tell them where to get on and where to get off.

Who are the reformers who want to stop everybody from doing everything they don't like to do themselves? Look 'em over at any meeting where they are passing resolutions against everything human, and you will see that nearly every face is that of a sister who will never see 45 again unless she looks over her shoulder.

Who starts most of the scandals? The middle aged woman. Boys and girls are not critical of each other. They don't keep tab on each other. They don't tell tales on each other. It is the middle aged women who loves to talk and roll gossip as a sweet morsel on their tongues, and who go about telling how scandalous it was that Josey and Bobby didn't get home until 3 a. m. and that they say the carrying-on of the younger set are just awful.

And all of this is perfectly natural and inevitable. Up to middle age, the average woman has been busy with useful, constructive work that filled her thoughts and kept her hands employed. She has worked hard rearing her children, keeping her home, making her family comfortable. Then, suddenly, it seems to her, her job is over. It would be God's own blessing if every middle-aged woman could go into some business that would keep her on the jump from morning until night, that would make her new contacts; open up fresh fields of interest to her, and that would keep her so occupied trying to devise ways of making a tea room attractive, or planning out a selling campaign that she wouldn't have leisure to observe when her daughter-in-law goes to a bridge party of an afternoon or to notice how many cigarettes her son-in-law smokes.

Women knock off work about 20 years too early. At 50, they are generally in better health and stronger than they have been all their lives and there are years and years of good work in them still.

There is no excuse for a woman to break up her home and going to live with her children, as so many women do, while they are still hale and hearty and as capable of doing things as they ever were.

There is nothing that keeps a woman young like being busy. It will save many steps to the beauty parlors. Also it is a recipe for happiness that never fails.

So anyone who has a chance to go back into the business world at middle age is lucky. Don't let anybody tell you that you are too old. You are not. It is much better to wear out than to rust out.

Don't get the impression I'm getting a dig in for middle aged people. That isn't what I wrote this for. Some of my dearest friends are middle aged and I wouldn't part with them for the world. Also my mother and mother-in-law are not classed in either.

DOCTORS OF AIR CORPS TEST FITNESS OF PILOTS

WASHINGTON —(AP)— Specialists in medical science travel hand in hand with aeronautics progress in efforts to minimize possibilities of accident.

Sixty "air-minded doctors," on duty with the air corps alone, administer aviation medicine to fliers and would-be fliers and supervise the fitness of pilots.

They are required to fly, regularly and often, to see at first hand the conditions under which their charges operate. Several are qualified air pilots.

Lieut. Col. L. M. Hathaway of the medical corps directs the division of aviation medicine which qualifies surgeons for this specialty and develops means of guarding against pilot failures.

"Flying subjects human beings to unusual stresses," he said. "The importance of aviation medicine to guard against failures of the human element cannot be overestimated."

Qualified as flight surgeons by a three months' course at Brooks field, San Antonio, Tex., the doctors give the special physical examinations, exercise general medical supervision, and perform the same professional duties as other medical officers.

NEW LIGHT WARNS PILOTS OF COMING ICE HAZARDS

WASHINGTON —(AP)— The hazard of ice to airplanes will be challenged by a new warning device developed by the bureau of standards.

The instrument includes a switch, actuated by temperature and located in the free air stream, and a dashboard indicator which flashes a red light.

The light appears only at temperatures between 26 and 32 degrees, which tests by the national advisory committee for aeronautics have shown to be the critical range of ice formation.

Though the signal will flash anywhere in the critical range, the ice danger is present only when a pilot is flying in a saturated atmosphere. It does not form in dry, cold air.

The warning was devised as a stopgap until methods have been developed to eliminate the ice hazard entirely. Research has been focused on the problem because of dangers of planes being brought to earth by sheer weight or the shape of wings altered by ice formations until lifting power is destroyed.

THIRTEEN A LUCKY NUMBER, DIXIE POULTRY FARM FINDS

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP)—Thirteen is a lucky number for John A. Reddoch of Montgomery county who, a year and a half out of college, is a successful poultry raiser.

Six years ago cotton growing wasn't paying so well. Reddoch and his mother decided to try poultry and started with 13 chickens.

The thirteen birds have increased to 2,000 with an average egg production of 198 last year. A ramshackle 12x12 chicken house in 1923 has given way to one 400-hen and four 500-hen laying houses, built on the latest henhouse architectural lines.

When the business was off to a fair start John went to Alabama Polytechnic institute at Auburn where he took poultry courses.

The flock has been built up entirely on a pay-as-you-go basis.

NEW RATING REQUIRED FOR PASSENGER PILOTS

WASHINGTON—(AP)—Another step has been taken by the department of commerce to safeguard lives of passengers and pilots.

Fliers with limited commercial and transport licenses must qualify for a new "pilot's rating authority" before they will be permitted to carry passengers for hire.

The authority, secured after tests before an aeronautical inspector of the department, is given as evidence that the holder is qualified to pilot passengers in a type or types of aircraft with which he may have had little experience.

Pilots may stand test on any number of 12 classes of planes, of open or closed types. Examinations include flight tests and demonstration of knowledge of fuel, ignition and starting systems.

Plans Guatemalan School.

PHOENIX, Ariz. — (AP)— Arthur L. Batres, son of a former Guatemalan war minister, is studying aviation here. He plans eventually to establish a flying school in Guatemala City.

HANOVER

Mrs. Irene Mann was discharged from the Backus hospital Saturday. Sunday afternoon her sister, Mrs. Harrison and husband took her to their home in New Haven for a rest of a few days.

Recent callers at the Parsonage-by-the-Pines were Mrs. Fittsroy Carrington and Misses Phyllis and Elizabeth Carrington of Stonington borough.

R. Beverly Usshor, a student at the South high school of Worcester, Mass., is spending a week's vacation at the home of his aunt, Mrs. Dwight C. Stone.

Masters Fenner and John Douglass of New London are making a visit to Mrs. Webster Standish.

The Woman's Council on Missions connected with the Congregational church held its February meeting at the Parish house Wednesday afternoon with the president, Mrs. Allison B. Ladd in charge. Miss Helen Eadie was the leader, and the hostesses were Miss Margaret Eadie and Mrs. Angus Park.

The occupants of the parsonage attended a meeting of the D. A. R. at Mystic Saturday, the 22d, and listened to an address upon Washington by Miss Bacon of Boston. Miss Florence Buck gave pleasure with three piano numbers.

Miss Gertrude Ladd of New York spent Washington's birthday and the week-end at Ash Lawn, and was privileged to welcome her father, Mr. Allison B. Ladd to his home Sunday afternoon, he being discharged from the Backus hospital on that day after having an operation nearly three weeks previous.

Rev. and Mrs. Dwight C. Stone attended the funeral of Charles Rosebrooks at Willimantic, Tuesday afternoon. Mrs. Stone, who was born in Constantinople, her parents being missionaries of the American Board in Turkey, came with them when quite young to Storrs to the home of her grandparents where they spent considerable time. It was in the same neighborhood in which Mr. Rosebrooks lived during his entire life. The families have remained steadfast friends ever since as is usually the case when people find themselves among good neighbors for a time and then move elsewhere.

PRICE TENDENCY IN STOCK MARKET DECIDEDLY UPWARD TO END OF SESSION

NEW YORK, Feb. 28—(AP)—The line of the least resistance proved to be decidedly upward in today's stock market. Efforts of the bear faction to unsettle the list during the morning met with scant success. Speculators for the rise took the market in hand during the afternoon and sent shorts rushing to cover.

The forward movement was somewhat selective, but more than a score of issues reached new high levels for 1930, many gains running from 2 to 6 points, with a few even wider. The index of 90 leading stocks rose 1 1-2 points to within less than a point of its high of the year, reached two weeks ago.

Despite rather unimpressive business and trade reports, the market's recent resistance to bear pressure has converted many traders, previously skeptical, to the bull side. Driving in of shorts, for public buying still fails to be attracted in any volume. Today's sales of 3,209,510 shares were a little lower than yesterday's. The fact that the public has been a negligible factor in the market of late has made bearish operations difficult, however, as stocks appear to be in the hands of traders not easily stampeded into selling.

The week-end business and trade reviews appearing today indicated that conditions still remain spotty, weakness of commodity markets having had a somewhat retarding influence. It was pointed out, however, that farm implement manufacturers are reporting large sales, which was interpreted as evidence that speculators rather than farmers have been principal losers in the gyrations of the grain markets. Bradstreet's weekly food price index was reported at the lowest level recorded since January, 1922.

Sears Roebuck's sales report for the second month of its 13 month calendar showed an increase of only 3 1-3 per cent over the like period of last year, despite the fact that some 80 new stores were opened during the year. At the annual meeting of Montgomery Ward, President Everitt described business conditions as "less favorable than he would like to see them" but expressed confidence in the organization's ability to increase profits during the year. The plan of acquisition of Kraft Phenix by National Dairy was announced, and contained the rather unusual feature of the partial exchange of debentures for Kraft stock, perhaps reflecting the changed public appetite for securities.

Utility and Electrical Equipment stocks were at the forefront of the advance. Westinghouse Electric mounted 6 points, North American 5, American Water Works 4, American Power & Light and American Telephone, more than 3, all to new highs for the year. Several low-priced specialties again reflected bullish operations. Crex Carpet jumped 6 points to a new 1930 peak above 22, and Associated Drygoods, Bendix Aviation, Borg Warner, Brunswick-Balke-Collender, Eureka Vacuum, and Marlin Rockwell all reached new high levels for the movements.

Amusement shares continued in demand, Radio, Paramount and Warner Brothers selling up a point or so further into new high territory for 1930. Coppers rallied after an early bear drive, American Smelting and Anaconda gaining nearly 2 points. United Aircraft was sent up 5 points to a new high. National Dairy and Kraft Phenix common stocks made scant response to the merger plan, although Kraft preferred jumped 7 points. Midland Steel products was a spectacular performer, rising more than 13 points to a new peak at 53. Nearly 10 points of the advance was made in a string of seven sales which came out on the tape just before the close, undoubtedly reflecting a flurry of shorts. Otis Elevator rose 14 points to a new top at 329.

U. S. Steel sold off 1 1-2 points, then rallied to close fractionally higher. Simmons was depressed to a new low at 62 1-8, but rallied to 63 1-2, off 1 1-2 points, net. American Tobacco B and Eastman Kodak lost about 2 and 2 points in profit taking.

Credit conditions remained easy, reflecting piling up of funds at the banks in preparation for March 1 disbursements estimated above $600,000,000. Call money renewed at 4 1-2 per cent, then declined to 4.

Commodity markets generally rallied further. Wheat futures closed about 2 1-2 cents higher, reflecting better export demand for flour, and reports of smaller Argentine estimates. Corn closed more than a center higher. Cotton was quiet, and closed a few cents a bale lower under realizing on its recent advance. Raw sugar steadied on reports from Cuba that the single selling agency would not be dissolved in the near future.

Foreign exchanges eased. The Spanish peseta touched a new low for the movement at 12.16 cents, off about 1-10 of a cent, reflecting political disturbances in Spain. Sterling cables ruled 1-8 cent lower at $4.85 15-16

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, Feb. 28—(AP)—Reports current late today tended to show that Europe finally is buying substantial amounts of wheat for March, April and May shipment from North America, meanwhile, active purchasing of Chicago future delivery wheat contracts gave an increasing upward tilt to wheat values here, with demand ascribed largely to government sponsored agencies. After wheat dealings had closed for the day, however, insurance rates on all grain transactions were greatly disturbed by rumors of possible injunction proceedings likely to interfere with workings of the marketing act under which the federal farm board and its allies are operating.

Chicago closing quotations on wheat were unsettled, ranging from the same as yesterday's finish to 2 7-8c a bushel higher. Corn closed 3-4 to 1 3-8c up, oats 1-4 to 1-2c advance, and provisions unchanged to a setback of 2c.

Helping to hoist wheat prices today was belief prevailing in many quarters that future delivery purchases for the federal farm board's allied organizations would continue until May wheat advanced to $1.18, equalying the farm board's basis for loans having wheat as collateral. Throughout the day the market was very active, and prices averaged about 3 1-2c higher for May as compared with yesterday's finish. At one stage, May reached within one cent of the government loan basis, but profit-taking sales led to subsequent reactions.

Contributing impetus at times today to the upward swing of wheat values here were advices that legislation would be enacted to enable Canadian provincial authorities to guarantee bank loans of the Canadian growers pool. Another stimulating factor was announcement that Argentine and Australian wheat shipments for the week were but half as much as was the case at this time last year. Considerable notice was also taken of an authoritative statement that British importers are behind in purchasing their overseas quota, and that a steady demand from Great Britain for wheat will develop shortly. Export clearances from this country and Canada for the week, however, were only 3,050,000 bushels, the smallest total for any week in many years.

Trade sentiment as to corn was in general much more friendly to the buying side of the market than has been the rule of late. Commission houses were inclined to stress statements that more natural action of prices may be looked for regarding corn than as to wheat. Corn values were also strengthened by reports of prospective enlarged demand from feeders of hogs. Oats went higher owing to sympathy with corn and wheat.

In provisions the effect of grain strength was counter-balanced by downturns of the hog market.

Arrangements have been made for the sale of a seat on the New York Stock exchange for $415,000 an increase of $5,000 over the previously recorded sale

THE CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, Feb. 28—(AP)—Prices on the New York Curb market made further progress on the upside today. Week end profit-taking and other selling was well absorbed but trading continued largely professional in character, with pools supplying most of the buying impetus. Net gains, as a rule, ranged from fractions to 2 points, with about a score issues lifted to new high levels for the year.

Public utilities again attracted the bulk of the buying power. Sierra Pacific was marked up more than 5 points to a new high above 66, closing at the top. Canadian Marconi was turned over in large volume, advancing a point to a new high at 6 7-8 or about double the year's low. American Gas & Electric, Central States Electric, Lone Star Gas, and a few others advanced a point or two. Electric Bond & Share closed fractionally higher at 100 after having moved within a range slightly more than 2 points. Cities Service crossed 33 to a new high for the year.

Cosden moved up 1 1-2 points but the action of the other oils was rather disappointing. General Petroleum held firm above 33, but Vacuum sold down 2 1-2 points to 91 1-2. Cosden plans to double the output of its refiners to 20,000 barrels daily, and has made arrangements with Magnolia Pipe Line to run oil from the pool in Ector county, Texas, to the refineries.

Newmont Mining advanced 3 points and Noranda nearly a point on buying influenced by reports of a better demand for copper. Revival of speculative activity in Fokker, which crossed 22 to a new 1930 peak, featured the airplane group. The Fokker company recently made arrangements to exhibit its planes in some of the large General Motors showrooms throughout the country.

Buying of the investment trust, holding and trading corporation shares was rather selective in character, with Electric Power Associates, Electric Shareholders, Interstate Equities and Goldman Sachs making the best showing. Marine Midland eased slightly on the official announcement of the acquisition of the Fidelity Trust company, Ford Motor crossed 16 to another new high in response to the recent dividend announcement. Noma Electric and Radio Products also reached new high ground.

Glen Alden Coal, American Bakeries A, and Walgreen were among the sprinkling of issues to sag to new low levels for the year.

BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, Feb. 28—(AP)—The bond market's slow progress continued today, bringing a scattering of new highs for the year in representative sections of the quotation table. Buying was of moderate proportions, but offerings were not so plentiful, particularly in the rails.

Securities establishing peak prices for 1930 included the Liberty 3 1-2s, Canadian National Railways 5s, American Telephone convertible 4 1-2s, Loew's 6s with warrants, Portland Railway 7 1-2s, American Writing Paper 6s, Rio Grande Do Sul 6s and the recently issued American Telephone debenture 5s and International Telephone 5s.

Although this was the last day of the month, money remained easy. Funds were plentifully supplied in the call money market at the renewal rate of 4 1-2 per cent and the official figure fell to 4, while the "outside" quotation dropped to 3 1-2. Time accommodations also eased.

Several bonds of miscellaneous descriptions gave evidence of considerable strength. Union Pacific First 4s rose one point. Baltimore & Ohio Gold 4s improved 7-8 and Atchison Adjustment 4s were marked up 1 3-4. The New Haven 3 1-2s repeated Thursday's performance, rising 1 1-2 to 2 1-2 points. Shell Union Oil 5s with warrants rose nearly half a point on active accumulation.

Following the shares to a new 1930 top, the American Telephone convertible touched 160 1-2, closing at 159 3-4 for a 3 1-2 point net gain on a volume of more than $2,600,000, par value. The Parmelee 6s was active and 3 points higher, likewise in sympathy with the strength of the shares.

National Dairy Products 5 1-4s turned heavy after the announcement of the company's plans to use $33,000,000 in the debentures in part payment for the assets of Kraft-Phenix Cheese Corp. These bonds are outstanding to the extent of about $50,000,000 and the news gave rise to reports that an additional issue might be forthcoming. In a large turnover, the debentures sold off nearly a point.

Marked resistance was shown by most of the investment rails, including Santa Fe General 4s, Southern Pacific Refunding 4s, Southern Railway General 4s, Nickel Plate 5 1-2s, Great Northern 7s, and Canadian Pacific debenture 4s. Wabash 5s sagged 3-4.

The Fourth Liberty Loan closed within an eighth of its year's high. Trading in the Treasuries was dull.

Belgian bonds changed hands freely, holding virtually unchanged. Interest in the French municipals dwindled but the Republic 7s closed at 115 3-4, or within 1-4 of their top for the year. Italy Public Utility 7s and Government 7s and Seine Department 7s were other trading centers in the foreign group.

The market heard today that a $50,000,000 issue of American & Foreign Power bonds, probably debentures with 5 1-4 or 5 1-2 per cent coupons, would be offered next week. The reported price is 96. Dow Chemical company, it is understood, is to sell a $3,500,000 note issue.

New offerings of the week declined about $1,000,000 from last week's total. The volume was $66,406,000 against $90,737,000 in the corresponding period of 1929.

NEW YORK, Feb. 28—(AP)—The record of business failures in the United States this week, which is for five business days only, owing to the Washington birthday holiday, showed a total of 526, R. G. Dun and Company reports. This figure compares with 585 for six days last week, and with 587 for the corresponding week of six business days a year ago.

More than half a billion dollars changed hands today in month-end settlements, interest payments and dividend disbursements, but the movement was barely noticeable in the money market. Payments of various kinds approximated $608,000,000, a new record for March 1. A year ago this time the disbursements totaled about $539,000,000. Payments made so far this year amount to around $894,000,000, about 33 per cent more than the total for the first quarter of 1929.

The RCA-Victor Company, Inc., a division of the Radio Corporation, of America, announced today that it is to erect a 50-story office building at Lexington avenue and East 51st street, adding another skyscraper to the growing number of such structures in the Grand Central terminal district of the city. The executive offices of the company will occupy about one half of the available space in the building.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORY

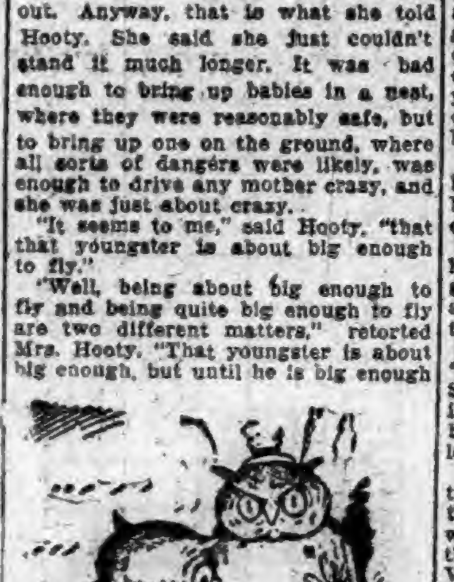
Mrs. Hooty's Great Relief

The greatest troubles you will find
In time are always left behind.
—Hooty the Owl.

Mrs. Hooty was getting all worn out. Anyway, that is what she told Hooty. She said she just couldn't stand it much longer. It was bad enough to bring up babies in a nest, where they were reasonably safe, but to bring up one on the ground, where all sorts of dangers were likely, was enough to drive any mother crazy, and she was just about crazy.

"It seems to me," said Hooty, "that that youngster is about big enough to fly."

"Well, being about big enough to fly and being quite big enough to fly are two different matters," retorted Mrs. Hooty. "That youngster is about big enough, but until he is big enough



"It seems to me," said Hooty, "that that youngster is about big enough to fly"

I have got to keep right on worrying. The bigger he is the more I worry. He won't keep still any more. One of these days he'll get to moving around while I'm away and some one with a big appetite will get him."

"Well, there's no use worrying," said Hooty. "Worrying isn't going to help you any. It isn't going to make him fly any sooner. He is a pretty healthy looking youngster and I wouldn't be a bit surprised to see him fly before this one in the nest flies."

"It's going to be easier for the one in the nest," declared Mrs. Hooty.

"Why?" demanded Hooty.

"Simply because that nest is high up and it is always easier to come down than it is to go up," replied Mrs. Hooty. "All we need do when we think the time has come is to crowd that youngster out of the nest. The minute she thinks she's falling she'll spread those big wings of hers and find out what they're for. But we can't do that with the one on the ground. So it probably will take some time for him to learn how to use those wings. What are you chuckling at?"

Hooty was chuckling. There was no doubt about it—he was chuckling. "Look down on that old stump," said he.

Mrs. Hooty looked down. There was a low stump on which she had often sat, after feeding her baby. The young Owl was sitting on that stump. Yes, sir, he was sitting on that stump and looking as if he felt very important. "Well, I never!" exclaimed Mrs. Hooty. Then, without another word, she flew down and alighted on the stump beside the youngster.

Now, of course, the youngster thought she was bringing him something to eat, and he immediately began to make a great fuss. When he discovered that she hadn't brought anything to eat, he made still more of a fuss. Mrs. Hooty flew back up in the tree where Hooty was. The young Owl down on the stump half spread his big wings and looked up as if he intended to follow her. Of course, he couldn't do that. Now, up in the nest was some food which the other young Owl had not eaten. Mrs. Hooty took some of this and flew back to the stump. The young Owl there reached for it eagerly. Mrs. Hooty snatched it away just as he was going to seize it. She flew with it to a low branch only a couple of feet above the young Owl's head. Then she held that food out in a most tantalizing way.

The young Owl made a great fuss about it. He cried and begged and flapped his wings. And then quite suddenly there he was on that limb beside his mother. She fed him, of course. After that it was an easy matter to get him up on another limb a little higher, and so on until he was halfway up to the nest. Mrs. Hooty felt as if half her worries were over. She gave a great sigh of relief. That young Owl would soon be flying and few would dare to meddle with him.

GAMBLING AND LOVE WALK HAND IN HAND THROUGH THIS ROMANCE OF OLD TIA JUANA

THERE is a tale they tell of Tia Juana, the old Tia Juana, before the border closed at sundown. A tale of a boy called Ricky, and of Dolores, who danced in the cabaret Casa de Manana—House of Tomorrow.

Ricky had come from no one knew just where. Carelessly yet well dressed, and with a fixed determination to go to the devil.

Certainly Tia Juana offered many opportunities. Like a voluptuous, intoxicating woman whose lips were sweet, yet left bitterness behind, was the little border town. Though so many times one was not conscious of that bitterness until it was too late.

So they watched him—this long-limbed boy with the faintly smiling mouth and cool, gray eyes, watched him stand night after night before the green felt-covered casino tables and lose a thousand dollars.

Always one thousand, never more nor never less. That was the queer thing about it. That and the short, half-exultant laugh that came from the boy's lips as the last was raked across the felt. It was almost as if he took a savage satisfaction in seeing the money go. Old-timers, used as they were to many expressions, could not quite understand it.

And just as regularly as he lost the thousand dollars, Ricky swung out into the cool darkness, when his play was done, and made his way down the boardwalks, past the beggars and the night crowds as though he did not see them, until he came at last to the tawdry cabaret Casa de Manana, near the end of a crooked calle.

ONE night Ricky looked across the rim of a tall, frost-beaded glass at the girl Dolores, a little cabaret dancer. Upon her ruffled brown hair was jauntily perched a man's silk hat. Absurdly grotesque, somehow.

"You're just fooling, aren't you, Ricky? You really aren't going to play any more—after losing so much!" the girl's voice blurred softly with a trace of the Southland's accent. Her brown eyes, candid and guileless as a child's, yet like a child's who has known deceit and fear, looked across into the boy's.

"Of course I'm going to play again!" he answered, quite as if it had been but a second before that she had asked, "Why be a quitter?"

His gray eyes grew very bright and his mouth a bit mutinous. His glance seemed to dare her to give him an interesting reason to the contrary.

Dolores flushed under his stare. "But, Ricky, you haven't a chance! Surely you know every gambling table in the casino is controlled?" The brown eyes were imploring as she leaned across the wooden table.

The boy looked away from her upturned face, heart-shaped and a trifle thin. Traveled down the smooth whiteness of her bare throat—across the skimpy pinkness of her bodice. Visualized again the grass skirt with its artificial flowers girdling the waist, the slim bare legs and ankles. A cabaret dancer in Tia Juana—yet she had made him uncomfortably conscious of confusing emotions that he did not like. There was pride in Ricky's blood and a little arrogance.

"Not always," he remarked coolly, his glance half amused, half angry. "Not always. There is a girl, a beautiful girl, who plays every night. I'll admit she loses sometimes, but more often she wins." He had wanted unreasonably to hurt this small cabaret dancer, who presumed to tell him about his affairs. With a savage little thrill he saw that he had succeeded.

A beautiful girl. His careless words brought a quick stab of pain to Dolores' heart. Unconsciously she looked across his shoulder into the beveled mirror on the wall behind him.

And she knew, with a sudden absurd tightness in her throat, that she was not beautiful. Not even very pretty, she thought bitterly, all unconscious of her warm, tender mouth and her great brown eyes that were wistful and unfathomable.

And her clothes; she looked down at them quickly. Tawdry clothes, stamped with the tinsel mark of Tia Juana's night life. She brought herself back with an effort to the present, and Ricky's voice that was trailing lazily along again.

He was saying: "This girl has offered to play my stakes for me tomorrow night, Dolores. Wouldn't it be funny if I won?" he added plaintively.

SUDDENLY the phrases assembled themselves into meaning, and Dolores laughed softly, bitterly as she pushed back her half-empty glass. The old, old game. Bait, used by the casino. Men were always susceptible, even Ricky. The last hurt rather, though Dolores knew she had no reason to care.

"Oh, Ricky, Ricky! Can't you see that your 'beautiful girl' is a lead-in? The casino has a payroll of girls like that. You'll lose everything you have!" The last was almost a wail.

"Quite likely," the boy admitted cheerfully, and turned to order another drink from a passing waiter.

"Why do you do it, then?" The question was past Dolores' lips before she could check herself. She flushed hotly, but her eyes met Ricky's unfalteringly. Her chin set bravely.

He smiled, amused at her mingled embarrassment and pride. A spirit of recklessness possessed him. Why not tell her? He wondered just how it would feel to probe the old wound open again. There would, he thought, be a kind of cruel pleasure in it.

"I'll tell you why I want to lose everything, Dolores," he said, looking up at her suddenly. "That is"—the one-sided smile was fainter now—"if you have time to listen?"

The girl knew that Jorge was watching her from where he lolled against one end of the bar. Jorge, who was the owner of Casa de Manana, boasted that he gave his customers good service. She knew, too, that it was time for her to do another number.

"Yes—oh, yes, Ricky! There is time if you will hurry!" She was unconscious of the breathlessness of the words, unconscious of everything save a little numbing fear—now that she was to know. Her fingers locked tightly together.

"Well," the boy sighed whimsically, "there was a girl, of course. A lovely little thing with hair of gold and big gray eyes, innocent as a kid's * * *" He paused and drank from the glass that stood at his elbow.

The girl's drink remained untouched as she sat motionless, waiting.

"We met at a mountain resort in Carolina, where I had gone with my uncle, who happened, unfortunately, to be not only a bachelor but rather wealthy, as they go." A slightly unpleasant smile curved Ricky's mouth.

"I was a Johnson, you see, of Asheville"—he caught himself up abruptly and Dolores knew that he had not meant to tell that. Then, shrugging, he looked across at her whimsically.

"My name happens to be Richard rather than Ricky, though I chose the latter from preference. And yours? For, of course, Dolores isn't your real name?"

A quick flush crept up into her cheeks, up past her candid brown eyes, until it touched the roots of her curly, rumpled hair. A shamed little flush that made him sorry for her.

"Joan," she answered simply. "Joan Shepard. But how did you know?"

Ricky—he would always be that to her—laughed. "Oh, just because," he answered unsatisfactorily. "But back to my private confession.

"THE Johnsons as a lot were pretty good assets. Money, you know, and position and easy going. So Eve fell in love with me. to have was a small estate that had belonged to my mother, that and $10,000. Ten thousand," he accented the words carefully, "which would just about buy her clothes for the year. I didn't come in on the direct line of inheritance, you see.

"I guess I was pretty hard hit and rushed things a bit. We were to be married in the fall. A church wedding, with loads of flowers, girls in rainbow dresses and tall candles. Eve was thrilled over it, but I"—Ricky looked at Dolores and smiled apologetically—"I was plain scared, and I wanted to climb in the little roadster some day and just drive until we came to a little sleepy quiet place and find a preacher to marry us. It seemed sweeter and more solemn that way, somehow."

Dolores nodded, something rose chokingly into her throat. She winked against the sudden absurd blurring of her eyes.

"Then one day," Ricky went on, "one day I decided I'd better show her where we would live—the old, white-shingled house that had been my mother's. Still beautiful, it was, Dolores, with those towering locust trees shutting it in. Every spring they fairly dripped with ivory buds. The lilacs grew wild about the summer house and the smell of the pines as sweet as any perfume ever made.

"But it was old-fashioned. There was no butler to answer the brass door-knocker, and no maid—only my old black mammy, who had been there ever since I could remember.

"I guess I should have known what was coming by the way Eve stiffened when she saw the place, but I was only thinking how beautiful she was. I told her about the money and laughed, because I never dreamed she'd care. Then, suddenly, I saw that her eyes were mutinous, cold like fog.

"'Why, you're poor, Dick!' She accented the word queerly, and one hand went up to her throat as though I were some strange person she had never seen before. When I would have taken her into my arms, she evaded them. It wasn't long until she asked me to take her home, pleading a headache.

"There was a note the next day—very polite and very pointed. We were not to be married, after all. She had made a mistake; she was really too young to be married, her mother thought, and she hoped that I would understand."

Ricky smiled twistedly. "I did—oh, yes, I understand. Then the newspaper announcement about a month later of Eve's engagement to my uncle. The Johnson with money, you know. So that's the reason I came down to Tia. I don't want money if it makes women do things like that." He stared somberly, bitterly, across the table at the silent girl.

She wanted to cry out at the foolishness, the utter senselessness of his actions. She wanted, more than anything she had ever wanted, to put her arms around him and tell him that she understood.

The orchestra had begun to play her number. The silly jazz song that she hated.

She must go—and Ricky—what could she say to him? What could she do to make him play true to his blood, to stop this madness? Her thoughts raced frantically as she rose, fingers groping for the absurd silk hat which she had removed.

"Ricky, are you trying to tell me that you are going to be a coward? Yellow? Why," she forced herself to laugh, "why, this is the kind of thing she would expect you to do!" It was a hard thing to say to him. A cruel thing, and Dolores wanted to cry out that she did not mean it. But something held her rigid. She knew that it was what he needed.

He stared at her, his face going white and his fingers gripping the table edge. Then he saw something that held in check the insolent, hot words that had tumbled against his lips.

There were tears in the girl's brown eyes, and something else. It was the same look that had been in his own eyes when he had loved Eve. It staggered him for the moment, sobered the anger that had risen within him.

She tried to laugh, a cynical, cold little laugh, but her mouth twisted suddenly, and the sound of it was more like a sob.

"Ricky! It's no use pretending. I'm sorry. I wanted to help you." Her eyes pleaded and her fingers were upon his arm.

He made no answer, but continued to look at her with an odd expression flickering in his gray eyes. The flush had died from his face, leaving it natural once more.

"Promise that you will wait for me! Promise Ricky!" she begged desperately pausing like a butterfly arrested in flight. A small, gaudy butterfly, a little bewildered, a little tired.

Her fingers relaxed her grip as he nodded, and without waiting for him to speak, she turned swiftly, as though anxious to have her turn over with, and ran past the half-angry owner of Casa de Manana onto the small dance floor.

A moment later her husky yet strangely sweet voice floated back to the boy where he sat motionless, just as she had left him, at the little table. Slowly, painstakingly, he began pushing his empty glass back and forth upon the wooden table. His brows were a bit drawn, making a faint line between his eyes.

Suddenly his eyes grew brighter and an odd smile flickered about his mouth. Something she had said kindled a spark that had remained unquenched by the tide of anger that had risen within him.

He glanced at his watch. There would be an hour or so of play yet at the casino. He was going back and let the pretty girl play his last stake!

She was lucky, very lucky! With careful playing he'd win enough to take him back to Carolina. Of a sudden he wanted desperately to go back. He had been a fool, a great, blind fool.

Hastily he scrawled a message on the back of a gaudy handbill, folded the words inside and dispatched it by a fiercely mustached waiter to the dance floor.

A moment more and the dark coolness of the night shut him from sight. He whistled softly as he swung along in the direction of the winking lights of the casino.

MINUTES later Dolores stood quite still behind the swaying draperies that shut her off from the dance floor. The storeroom was like a vast empty barn after the noise and confusion outside.

A sense of foreboding swooped down upon her like some giant bird of prey as she opened the creased bill. She read the few words through once—and then again, as though she thought they had deceived her.

> Dolores—You possess a vast amount of wisdom for one so young! I'm going back to the old white house where the locusts grow * * * but first I'm going to play my last stake. Pray that the "beautiful lady" will bring me success. Sorry I couldn't keep my promise and wait—but you understand, don't you? Good-by, and good luck!
> RICHARD JOHNSON.

Dolores stood very still and a little white of face when she had finished. A sickness swirled about her, a desperate, aching loneliness and fear.

He was gone. She knew that he would not return. He had broken his promise, which meant that he did not care—just as she should have known. He was going to the casino again to play the last stake. When he had lost, when the slate was wiped clean, what then?

The cold band of apprehension tightened about her throat.

Suddenly she began tugging at the fastenings of the grass skirt, slipped out of it and kicked it into a corner. With fingers that trembled she straightened the skimpy pink dress that had formed the bodice, and without a backward glance at the curtains through which she should even then be dancing for an encore number, she caught up a Spanish shawl and fled into the darkness of the alley.

Her heart pounded as she ran, but she was strangely calm and purposeful. She had decided that she had to save Ricky from himself—she had to! Some way, somehow, she'd make him listen, make him come away.

THE lights of the casino loomed up before her. Then she was inside, her breath coming in little ragged gasps. Few gave her a second glance.

Swiftly her eyes scanned the tables. The crowds were thinning. Then she saw him, standing tall and straight before the checkered table of the roulette wheel. Beside him, dark, shining head almost touching his shoulder, slender jeweled fingers lazily resting in an intimate touch upon his sleeve, was Ricky's "beautiful lady."

A little cry rose to Dolores' lips that she smothered with the tips of her fingers. Her brown eyes grew wide and startled as she stared at the pretty face lifted to Ricky's.

There could be no mistake, for the bright light above the table flooded down upon the girl, spilling across the blue lash-veiled eyes and pouting baby mouth until it threw into bold relief against the white skin a tiny, blackened mole beneath the rouged lips.

Dolores was positive that she had seen the mole. It could belong to no other mouth save Gloria's. The black marcelled hair had almost deceived her for a moment, for Gloria's hair had been the color of coppery gold. * * *

Both Ricky and the girl bent over the table, faces intent, watching the little ivory ball whirling, whirling, then clicked into place. Indifferently the croupier called a number and raked in several heaps of silver and crackling greenbacks.

Dolores knew by the sudden, taut expression that crept about Ricky's mouth, by the way his hands gripped the table's edge, that he had lost—lost the last stake!

Dolores pushed past those in the aisle ahead and stood just behind him. The girl was saying something to Ricky, to which he was shaking his head. With an inexpressibly weary gesture of empty hands he shrugged and turned away.

Dolores knew that she must act quickly.

"Don't run away, Ricky—I need you!" Dolores' voice was very soft, yet threaded with something unyielding as steel.

Ricky had never heard it so before. He stared curiously, half startled, into her face. He felt her fingers close about his arm.

There was a queer expression in Dolores' eyes, a mocking expression, as she looked the other girl over from dark head to satin-shod feet and then smiled faintly.

"Well * * * Gloria * * * Who would have thought we'd meet in Tia Juana? The world is small, isn't it?" The words were low, yet tinkled as ice in a thin glass.

All around them bets were being placed and the wheel began its eternal spinning once more.

The girl stared at Dolores with fascinated eyes. She had gone white and, as if conscious of it, she laughed shakily and bit into her lower lip.

Ricky watched, half fascinated, half angry. Yet he observed that they had created no attention; their words had been so low, their actions so restrained. He stood motionless, conscious that Dolores' fingers had tightened upon his arm.

"You have made a mistake," she returned coldly. "My name isn't Gloria, and I have never seen you before." Shrugging a bare white shoulder, she turned back toward the table.

"Oh, no, I haven't made a mistake, Gloria," Dolores said slowly. "There's that little mole, for instance, and I must admit that whoever dyed your hair did a splendid job." She looked again at the smooth black waves, eyes narrowed critically.

The other girl flushed hotly and Ricky saw that her jeweled fingers were trembling against the table's edge and heard the nervous, indrawn breath.

"Well—what do you intend to do about it?" she demanded after a moment.

"Do? Why, my dear," Dolores was speaking so low that it was with difficulty that Ricky understood the words, "I am going to send a little wire to Lew Holtz in New York. He would be very glad to know your new address, don't you think so? Unless," she paused thoughtfully, "unless you care to play another stake—of five hundred, two to one—and win."

The dark-haired girl stared unbelievingly at Dolores.

"Are you crazy?" she demanded hotly, forgetting for the moment that others might hear. "What has a silly bet to do with it? As if I could win just because you tell me to!"

Dolores shrugged. "You ought to know, my dear. I'll give you exactly three minutes to decide." She glanced at the small watch upon her wrist and forced a yawn. "They say the food is vile in jail now— and everything so inconvenient." Her brown eyes regarded the other girl innocently.

"Number 14 on red wins," droned the croupier. Some one laughed nervously.

"Two minutes, Gloria," she murmured as she looked at the hands of her cheap little watch.

The rouge began to stand out grotesquely on Gloria's smooth cheeks as the natural color seeped from her face. She ran the tip of her tongue over her dry lips, staring at the calm, inscrutable face of the girl before her.

It was a long moment, the longest that Dolores had ever watched go by. Suppose she should fail?

It was likewise a long moment to Gloria, a moment in which she must decide.

Suddenly, without a word, she turned to the table, fumbling with the clasps of an expensive beaded bag. Dolores saw that her hands were unsteady.

"Dolores," Ricky demanded beneath his breath, "what do you mean by this?" He was bewildered and shocked.

"Hush, Ricky, please!" she whispered tensely, trembling suddenly as she leaned against his arm. Her eyes never left the other girl standing at the edge of the checkered table. She had almost won.

The bet was placed.

The croupier started the wheel on its journey again.

A woman with dark, marcelled hair and a tiny mole beside her mouth glanced at the croupier tensely, smiled and casually placed two slender fingertips upon the table edge. Her face was a little strained.

The croupier chewed his gum expressionlessly, but the woman knew that he had seen. Knew, too, with a sickening sensation, that he was puzzled at her move. She had already won enough to make her conspicuous.

AROUND and around whirled the wheel; around and around sped the tiny ivory ball. Presently the wheel slackened and the ball dropped into place.

Silence. A rustle as the players moved closer, eyes upon the numbered wheel. A high-pitched laugh, conversation buzzing around them again.

"Number 24 on black wins!" the croupier announced, and without change of expression he pushed a little pile of bills toward the woman with the small, black mole.

She had won.

Dolores felt suddenly weak. Desperately she clung to Ricky's arm, steadying herself.

Gloria turned to her, avoiding Ricky's eyes. "Here," she said unevenly, thrusting out the sheaf of bills. "I guess you won the game. Are we going to call it quits now?"

Dolores' fingers closed about the bills, Ricky's last stake, and she nodded. "Yes, we'll call it quits."

A heavy-featured man shouldered against her. The last stragglers were gathering around the roulette table. She felt herself being pushed away. Over a woman's broad shoulder she looked back at Gloria. A Gloria that looked older, somehow, and half frightened.

"Good-by, Gloria, and good luck!" she added and, turning swiftly, she went with Ricky out into the star-dusted night.

Otuside was a peculiar stillness that seemed to shut them in. A constraint fell upon Dolores, a strange weakness and fear. She had been unafraid before, but now she could only remember that it was over—that Ricky was going home.

The ache that was in her throat choked her. Silently she held out the bills and looked up at him, thankful for the darkness which hid her trembling lips.

"Dolores," Ricky's voice sounded strange out there in the black, starry night.

"Oh, I know!" she cut him short, the words tumbling against her lips. "You want to know about what happened in there. I happened to be in the same show with Gloria in New York. She stole an expensive diamond bracelet belonging to the star of the company. But poor/old Lew—whose heart is as big as the Woolworth building—believed the sob story Gloria told him and put up her bail. She disappeared one day, leaving Lew to pay the piper. That and the debts of a failing show broke him.

"I couldn't get work. No use telling you how I searched day after day, watching my clothes grow shabby. I was hungry when they offered me a place in a night club in Tia. A night club"—her laugh had a pathetic sound—"that turned out to be Casa de Manana!"

SHE looked away from him, out to where the moon was slipping behind a bare, shadowy mountain.

"Why don't you send word to your folks—go back home?" Ricky asked curiously.

"I haven't any folks, but I'm saving, so I can go back some day. But railroad fare is awfully high."

Rickey stared hard through the velvet darkness. Vague sounds came from within the casino, but he did not notice them. He saw a pair of wistful brown eyes with wet lashes; a thin, heartshaped little face with a mouth that was like a frightened child's. The wan light from a sleepy moon was clear enough for that.

"Why, Joan," he whispered, calling her for the first time by the name her mother had given her, "we've got a thousand dollars. Won't you let me be your—folks—take you back to the old house, mammy and the locust trees? Won't you, Joan, honey?" Groping through the dusky, shadowed moonlight, his hands sought hers.

"Ricky, oh, Ricky!" she whispered back, her voice awed and trembling. "Are you really telling me that you love me?"

The boy felt a lump rise in his throat. "Love you?" he echoed. "Why, I've been loving you all the time, but I just found it out!" He laughed huskily, exultantly, and his arms went tighter about her.

Half shyly his lips touched hers.

The sleepy moon peered curiously through the lacy leaves of the old pepper tree and then crept behind the highest jagged peak.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Broadway Theatre

Dealing in frank and amazingly dramatic fashion with a most unusual subject, "Her Unborn Child" has its eastern Connecticut premiere, opening a four day engagement at the Broadway theater today at 1.30. It is a faithful and vivid talking picturization of the sensationally successful stage play which toured the length and breadth of this country for several years, arousing favorable comment from press, pulpit and public. The pitiless, revealing story of "a boy and girl in love, forgetting all else," has been woven into a powerfully dramatic discussion of a most unusual subject. The various reactions of the principal characters in this talking picture to this question furnish one of the most diverting and interesting screen entertainments ever presented. A definite and finely-handled leavening of comedy relief affords a pleasing contrast to the gripping dramatic scenes which are the highlights of "Her Unborn Child." The picture has been adapted from the stage play by Frederic and Fanny Hatton, who have provided some of the most outspoken and arresting dialogue yet featured in talking film; and the producers have assembled a superb cast of Broadway stage players, included among whom are Paul Clare, Adele Ronson, Doris Rankin, Harry Davenport, Frances Underwood, Elisha Cook, Jr., Pauline Drake and Elizabeth Wragge. "Her Unborn Child," in point of subject matter, dialogue, situations and dramatic intensity, is a completely "different" talking picture.

In direct contrast to the tense drama of the feature, the management is showing one of Octavus Ray Cohen's side-splitting comedies of Darktown life, "Brown Gravy," together with the latest Paramount Sound news, a "bouncing ball" screen song, "Smiles," and a distinct novelty of featurette length, "The Song Writers' Revue," with the inimitable Jack Benny introducing ten of the most famous composers of popular songs, with each one demonstrating his best known numbers.

The Covered Wagon Picture At Y. M. C. A. Sunday

Ever desirous of bringing to Norwich that type of moving pictures that inspire and uplift, the management of the local Young Men's Christian association has arranged to show on the coming Sunday at 4 o'clock, the splendid eight reel picture titled, "The Covered Wagon." The principal characters are J. Warren Kerrigan, Lois Wilson, Ernest Torrence, Tully Marshall and Alan Hale.

This picture is adapted to the screen by James Cruze from Emerson Hough's thrilling story.

A historic and vivid picturization of the hardy pioneers who wrested gold from the earth and sacrifice made by these home seekers who braved the hardships and perils of the prairie, mountain and river to gain the western promised land.

From the standpoint of realism, truthful scenic and character detail this is considered one of the finest pictures yet produced.

To this picture service the adult public of both sexes is invited, and boys and girls from eleven will be admitted on the condition that they are accompanied by their parents.

The doors of the hall will be opened at 3.15.

A free will offering will be taken.

Red Arrow Dance.

The public enthusiasm manifested by the patrons at the first Red Arrow dance held at the Norwich armory encouraged the Red Arrow club to arrange for a pre-Lenten Red Arrow dance to be held at the armory on Tuesday evening, March 4.

Thumm's famous orchestra will furnish a full team of eight musicians who look forth to give the public a gala evening of enjoyment. A feature of the dance is that no money will be accepted for admission. Entry to the armory will be gained by the payment of Red Arrow money only.

For the benefit of the Red Arrow boosters, who are securing new business for the members of the Red Arrow club, the dance committee have made arrangements to have on display on the dance floor the six Red Arrow booster prizes, amounting to $1,825, which will be awarded at the May auction to the boosters depositing the largest number of arrows in the Red Arrow treasure chest at the lobby of the Palace theatre.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Palace Theatre

Opening today at the Palace theatre is a drama which has been sweeping the country off its feet, a new film starring Richard Barthelmess in his greatest role—Barthelmess as "Son of the Gods," supported by beautiful Constance Bennett. It is a breath-taking role, a role which thousands have already enjoyed in each of the other cities where the film has played or is now playing.

The structure of the story is founded upon the idea of an American boy raised by a Chinese family in the belief that he himself is of Chinese origin. As Sam Lee, Richard Bathelmess, believing himself a Chinaman, is confronted with racial differences and he finds himself reacting accordingly to his environment.

The production opens with a thrilling polo game between two college teams. Barthelmess is the star of the team and is called upon to make several spectacular plays. Having received his training as a boy at Hudson Military Academy, Barthelmess is an excellent horseman. Adopted as an infant by a devout Chinese patriarch, Sam Lee is brought up in a high-caste Chinese atmosphere, surrounded by the evidences of wealth and luxury and nursed on the ancient wisdom of Confucius.

Sam Lee is black-haired and dark-eyed. He is Oriental enough in coloring so that his school and college mates readily believe that he is really Chinese. In fact that is one of the reasons why he believes it himself. The love of his father and the interchange of philosophy between them convince him more strongly of his Chinese origin and bind him more tightly to the race which he firmly believes to be his own people.

At college, Sam Lee is accepted as a good fellow, but he is not elected to any fraternity. Other men spend his money freely and like him for his generosity, but he has one or two heart-breaking experiences where girls shunned him after learning of his supposed Chinese origin. This drives him to leave college and seek a new life abroad, but there again trouble haunts his steps, and as he himself so bitterly says, he might have been white and have been a swindler and a cheat and got away with it but that being a Chinaman was sufficient to queer him.

St. Mary's Players

After the favorable impression made last year by this organization it was stated at that time that perhaps that play would be their best. We thought that it might be so too. But it can be truthfully said that this year's play is as good as that of last year, and the cast just as capable. This is saying a good deal. But it is the truth nevertheless. So much is expected now of what St. Mary's presents that great pains are taken not to disappoint the public. This year's show will be fittingly produced, so do not miss it.

"UNTRUE" FRUIT IS BORNE BY "TRANSITIONAL" TREES

SOUTH HAVEN, Mich.—(AP)—After 10 years' investigation, Roy E. Gibson, bud "sleuth," offers an explanation for the appearance of different kinds and qualities of fruit on the same tree.

It is due to the "transitional" tree, he says. Such a tree is one in which the cell structure is mixed. It is capable of innumerable combinations of mixed tissue factors or of developing bud mutations from them, depending on the tissue formation at the point of origin of each bud.

Thus buds cut from "transitional" trees for propagation purposes develop trees on which, red, green or striped apples, half-red and half-green apples or large and small may be found on the same branch.

For the past few weeks Manager Leffingwell and Coach Demarest of the crack local five have been preparing for the annual Married Men-Single Men series, the first game of the series to be played Monday evening. Demarest has gathered quite an array of talent and will produce a team that will make the Bachelors step.

The Benedicts will have in their lineup, Coach Demarest, Captain Harris, Eccleston, Emory Davis, Leo Normandin, Joe Belair, Herb Neilson, Art Nevins, and it is rumored around that Mr. Hill may don the old togs once more.

Manager Leffingwell, of the Bachelors, has about two-thirds of the "Y" team to pick from and has signed Jim Kelley, former Y player, to take the old suit out of mothballs, and he will play one of the guard positions.

These two teams battled on even terms last year and if predictions hold true, it will be another renewed battle for blood.

As an added attraction the "Y" Girls will meet the Williams Memorial Institute team. The New London girls are reported to have one of the best combinations in Connecticut, and the local lassies will have to play basketball all the time if they want to keep up their long winning streak, having suffered only one defeat all year.

Watch for Monday's paper for the ancuns of these two attractions.

CHUMPS COME FROM BEHIND TO WIN OUT

In an exciting uphill battle the Chumps came from behind to trim Bob's Men's Shop by the score of 100-73, in the elimination tournament being conducted at the Recreation billiard parlors last night.

Capt. Grisky of the Chumps was the star player of the evening, playing a very brilliant game. The Chumps after forfeiting 15 balls on three consecutive scratches and being minus 8 and their opponents 48 came from behind to win very handily.

Grisky and Johnson had high runs of 12 each. E. Straub, of the winners, a Class C player shows promise of developing into a fine player.

The players lined up with Capt. Grisky, J. Johnson and E. Straub on the Chumps, and S. Ames, Capt. E. Lord, and C. Straub. Much rivalry was between the Straub brothers.

Monday evening the 2nd round starts.

ENGLISH PAPERS BITTER IN THEIR COMMENT ON BOUT

LONDON, Feb. 28—(AP)—There were few in London today who had a good word for the Sharkey-Scott fight decision in Miami last night.

One of them was Ted Broadriss, widely known referee, who had this to say of Lou Magnolia, the fight arbiter, in the Evening News:

"I have seen Magnolia control several fights and in my opinion he is a good referee and a man who won't be bluffed."

But in general the newspapers dealt in fire and brimstone—especially the evening papers. The morning journals could carry no more than a few lines of the result, but their afternoon colleagues were strong in condemning the decision which gave Sharkey a technical knockout when Scott claimed he had been fouled.

Fred Dartwell, the Star's boxing expert cabled from Miami "I consider that Scott was deliberately robbed of the decision."

The Evening News declared that many American sporting writers agree the blow which gave Sharkey victory was a foul.

Scott's English manager was reported in the News as saying, "Scott has failed in his attempt to bring back to Britain the world's heavyweight championship, but his failure will be a blow on American boxing history which will never be erased."

Another interview reported in the same paper is that with J. W. H. T. Douglas, one of England's best known sportsmen, who declares that "the idea of minute's rest is all balderdash. Either Scott was beaten or he was fouled. To give him rest then ask him to continue, was inviting trouble and criticism."

WEISS MAILS CONTRACTS TO HIS BALL PLAYERS

NEW HAVEN, Feb. 28—(AP)—Contracts have been mailed to eight players of the New Haven baseball club by George M. Weiss, president and owner of the Eastern league aggregation.

Weiss has been represented as reluctant to operate the club here this season and is reported as having mailed the contracts merely to abide by the league rules which require them to be in the mail by March 1.

The contracts have been mailed to Gene Martin, former manager; Pitchers Lem Owen, Walter Linder and Kermit Smith; Catchers Thomas Padden and Stein Griss; Third Baseman W. C. Swenson, and Utility Man George Carlson.

MISS VAN WIE TO MEET MRS. HANLEY IN FINALS

ORMOND BEACH, Fla., Feb. 28—(AP)—Virginia Van Wie, defending champion, in the Women's South Atlantic golf tournament, advanced to the final round today when she won a four and two verdict from Marion Bennett, New Britain, Conn.

Mrs. Stewart Hanley, Detroit, Mich., earned the right to meet Miss Van Wie in the finals when she disposed of Ruth Replogle, Oklahoma City, six and five.

Miss Van Wie played the greatest golf of her career, posting a card of 38-35—73; men's par for the course, which bettered by one stroke the women's course record.

Collegians Wins

The Westerly Collegians basketball team defeated the Wakefield Eagles, the champion colored team of Rhode Island, the final score being 45 to 13. The Wakefield team was outclassed by the superior passwork of the Collegians. At half time the Collegians were leading by the score of 20 to 9. Jimmie Federico, the flashy left forward of the Collegians, was high scorer with 23 points. Cropper, also of the Collegians, was next with 8 points, while Howard was the only player for the Eagles to score. The Collegians would like to hear from the Plainfield Buddies.

Do you remember those carefree days of high school when a boy's or girl's highest ambition (scholastic honors excepted) was to join a fraternity or sorority?

And didn't you think you was sitting on top of the world with your feet hanging off when some upperclassman informed you in a subdued and mysterious voice that you had been elected to membership in the P. D. Q. society?

Remember how you broke out in goose-flesh when the upper classman told you to be at the old barn at the appointed hour. Remember how you started wondering what was going to happen to you and you wanted to talk to somebody about it but couldn't because you'd been warned not to breathe a word to anybody?

Then as the time approached for you to be initiated you became more and more nervous and your folks wanted to know if you felt well. You just said that you was all right but you'd been studying hard. Oh boy, what a fib that was.

And then came the night and the appointed hour. You left home with feet that felt as though they were shod with leaden shoes. Remember how you almost decided to turn back and go home but you were afraid you'd be laughed at if you did?

Just as the clock was striking the hour you approached the place. There was not a sound and you wondered if it was all a joke. Then your hair stood on end as you heard a groan and the rush of many feet. You were caught from behind and you was blindfolded.

Boy you sure did wish you had stayed at home. Blind-folded you were led around and around until you were dizzy. All the time someone was telling you how unworthy you were and that you would have to be put to severe tests to prove you were qualified to become a member of the illustrious P. D. Q's.

And then came the tests. You were made to look grotesque and ridiculous and paraded through the streets for the citizenry to gaze upon. Humiliating requests were made of you and unless you fulfilled these requests you were forcibly slapped on a tender part of your anatomy with broad paddles wielded with vim and vigor and not little satisfaction.

After a couple of hours of this fiendish work you were taken to a place and given the grip and the pass words, etc. Your aches and pains were all forgotten when you practiced the grip with the brothers. You were one of them.

But remember you ate your breakfast standing up. Them were the glorious days. And didn't you feel grand when you wore your pin first. And it's a safe bet you treasure it even today.

These kids with their initiations don't know how lucky they are.

DO YOU REMEMBER THIS ONE?

The Academy beats Bulkeley and easily win the league pennant!

This was quite startling news in the spring of 1903, for on Saturday, May 31, the N. F. A. boys went down to New London and whitewashed their ancient rivals, 10 to 0, with comparative ease. Gleason pitched superb ball for the Red and White, allowing but one hit, that to Wolfe, and striking out ten men. The Academy scored two in the first, three in the second, two each in the fifth and sixth, and one in the seventh.

IMPORTANT SOCCER GAME ON SUNDAY

There is great excitement among the soccer fans of this vicinity over the game Sunday afternoon on the J. B. Martin ground when the Velvetmen meet the league leading Plainfield team. SHARKEY TO BOX SCHMELING JUNE 26; MAGNOLIA CLAIMS SCOTT QUIT COLD

MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 28.—(AP)—Jack Sharkey, no matter how much his technical knockout victory over Phil Scott may be disputed, will fight Max Schmeling, the clouting German, at the Yankee Stadium, probably on June 26, in a 15-round bout to decide the world's heavyweight championship.

Frank J. Bruen, general manager of the Madison Square Garden corporation, made this announcement today to confirm previous plans and dispose of rumors that Sharkey, because of his poor showing against Scott, might be required to engage in another test bout, possibly against Tuffey Griffiths.

Bruen stated emphatically that Scott had fought his last fight in this country so far as the Garden corporation is concerned. The British champion was accepted reluctantly for the match, because of his reputation for figuring in fouls, his lack of color and drawing power. Bruen considers that his showing last night was "the last straw."

"We took it on the chin, financially, to put this show on," declared Bruen. "Regardless of the argument and disappointment aroused by the main event, I still think it was a good show. No matter what else happened; we disposed of Scott and the way now is clear to establish a recognized world's champion by early summer.

"We have a ten year lease on the Miami stadium, with nine years more to run and we will be back here next winter with a better show. We bucked obstacles this year in the form of a stock market crash and a poor headline bout. They were insurmountable."

Official paid attendance was announced today as 18,762, which in addition to 2,378 complimentary tickets, made a total of 21,140. Gross receipts were listed at $193,253.03, with a net "gate" of $161,716.03.

Sharkey's share on a basis of 25 per cent. of the receipts was $40,429.75, with Scott's 20 per cent. aggregating $32,342. The preliminaries cost the Garden $52,000 and the rental of the park on a percentage basis reached $12,500, making the total expenses exclusive of other promotional disbursements, $137,172. Including all disbursements the total expense is expected to reach close to $200,000.

Not since the "long count" controversy following the last Dempsey-Tunney fight in Chicago has any heavyweight fight aroused such bitter argument as Sharkey's victory, in the third round, after Scott had claimed foul and continued only after being given a minute's rest by Referee Lou Magnolia.

Jimmy Johnston, Scott's American manager, filed a formal protest with the Miami boxing commission today and said he would remain here for a hearing on Monday. This was regarded as purely a gesture, however, for Chairman Lou MacReynolds made the flat statement that the commission unanimously upheld Magnolia's decision. Since it was a question of judgment and not rules, there appeared no alternative but to regard the verdict as final.

A big majority of newspaper experts, polled by The Associated Press today, expressed the conviction that Scott was fouled by the left hook that landed around the belt line on the Briton's thigh, causing what appeared a semi-paralysis from effects upon the sciatic nerve.

At the same time, the bulk of critics disbelieved any serious injury had been inflicted by the blow and held the opinion that Scott quit after he resumed fighting and was hit hard in the stomach. The final blow was considered fair by all concerned.

Scott, to bear out his claim of an incapacitating injury, and therefore, a foul, went to a solarium this morning to undergo treatment for nerve condition. He walked with a limp and said he suffered intense pain. He had a lump on his side several inches below the waist line.

Magnolia, quizzed by newspapermen, declared he saw no blow struck which he regarded as foul or as cause for the disqualification of Sharkey. He denied the statement of Johnston that he (Magnolia) twice motioned to disqualify Sharkey for hitting low.

"Scott was not fouled," said Magnolia. "I warned Sharkey once and was sharply on the lookout for any foul punches. The blow on which Scott claimed foul and collapsed was a glancing punch off the hip bone. I called the halt to give Scott the benefit of any doubt, but chiefly because of the understanding beforehand with Johnston that he did not want "my Phil" to win on a foul.

"Johnston wanted to be consulted and I did so, as we carried Scott to his corner. Then I told Scott he had to go on or lose. He said he felt able to 'carry on.' Later, when he was struck squarely in the pit of the stomach by a left hook, and started to sag, I asked him if he wanted to continue. He said he could not do so and I immediately awarded the decision to Sharkey.

"Scott tried to claim a foul and then quit. I think Scott would have claimed a foul if he had been hit on the ankle. I do not think he was hurt. I am willing to bet $500 now that I could take Phil Scott down into the nearest cellar and make him quit."

Johnston, who went so far as to question Magnolia's integrity, nevertheless, dodged a prospective meeting with the referee at press headquarters in Miami Beach. Magnolia attacked Johnston's methods bitterly.

Johnny Buckley, Sharkey's manager, filed a claim to the "world's championship" to add to the general epidemic of statements, but this move received no applause in view of the expert opinion that Sharkey fought a bad fight. The American was wild when he tried to reach Scott's jaw in the first two rounds and erratic when he shifted his attack to the body in the third. He was so nervous and excited that tears of rage streamed down his face while waiting for Magnolia's decision and he jumped up and down like a wild man.

"Sharkey made the mistake of trying to knock out Scott with the first punch," Buckley admitted.

Both fighters will remain here for a time, Scott until he recovers and Sharkey until about the first of April. The main body of the expeditionary forces will beat a strategic retreat for New York tomorrow evening.

GRAND CIRCUIT MEETING AT HARTFORD IS ARRANGED

HARTFORD, Feb. 28.—(AP)—Securing a lease on Charter Oak park for a one-week race meeting starting Aug. 18, the Hartford Grand Circuit club tonight announced its decision to offer $36,000 in purses for a Grand Circuit meeting [illegible]

dates originally assigned by the stewards of the Grand Circuit, from Aug. 18 to Aug. 22, inclusive. These dates were cancelled ten days ago when the local club was unable to negotiate a satisfactory lease with the Connecticut State Fair association, owner of Charter Oak park. Since that time there have been meetings of committees representing the Trotting Horse Club of America, the Grand Circuit and the local club, at which financial details of the meet were adjusted and a satisfactory lease secured.

The local club met at the home of James F. Dolin, its secretary, tonight and arranged a program of 16 races which call for purses of about $40,000, although the officials of the club tonight appropriated $36,000 for ten races and announced that there would be six "late closers" with overnight entries accepted.

The famous Charter Oak stake for 2:12 trotters will once more head the list with a purse of $10,000.

AVIATORS HURDLE PASS HIGHER THAN MT. WHITNEY

NEW YORK —(AP)— The highest mountain peak in the United States, Mount Whitney, is 14,501 feet high, yet Yankee fliers are forced to a higher altitude in South America to work their way through a pass in the Andes.

Upsallata pass 50 miles north of Santiago, is the only available opening in the Andes. Pilots of the Santiago-Buenos Aires leg of the New York, Rio, and Buenos Aires line hurdle it at 18,000 feet.

The pass itself is 14,000 feet high but treacherous air currents force aviators to an additional 4,000 feet. Capt. John K. Montgomery, in flying the route, dropped 8,000 feet on one occasion, only to be shot up the same distance a moment later.

Gas Tax Averages $17

Two men were shot and wounded critically by a federal prohibition enforcement agent during a liquor raid on a residence four miles southeast of Tulsa, Okla.

AGRICULTURAL INTERESTS

LEAD ARSENATE PROTECTS LAWN FROM GARDEN BEETLE

Lead arsenate has been found to be an effective poison for use against the oriental garden beetle, an insect which causes severe damage to lawns in the Middle Atlantic states. Directions for treating lawns with this material are given by Harold G. Hallock of the United States department of agriculture.

When the soil is being prepared for a new lawn, acid lead arsenate should be broadcast uniformly at the rate of 8 1-8 pounds for 100 square feet of ground. To get a uniform distribution of the lead arsenate it may be mixed with two or three times its bulk of moist but not wet soil. The ground should then be cultivated, or raked so as to work the poison in to a depth of 3 or 4 inches. Such a treatment is effective for four or five years.

In old lawns, where the turf has been attacked but not killed by the grubs, the arsenical may be applied as a top dressing at the rate of one-half pound to each 100 square feet of lawn. The poison should be mixed with fifteen times its weight of good top soil. This mixture should be broadcast at the rate of 7 1-2 pounds to each 100 square feet of ground. This treatment should be given once each year for three years.

The treatments may be applied at any time from the first of April to the last of October, when the ground is not frozen. Mowing, watering, and other customary operations may be continued as usual.

In some instances plants are severely attacked by adult bettles. When this happens they should be sprayed with 3 pounds of lead arsenate and 2 pounds of wheat flour to 50 gallons of water. This solution has proved satisfactory in experiments conducted by the department of agriculture.

HEALTH OF PLANTS AND MAN PROTECTED IN LIKE MANNER

The methods of controlling plant diseases are probably as numerous as those used in fighting human ailments and since they are both concerned with the suppression of germs and organisms the means of dealing with them are somewhat similar, according to Dr. R. J. Haskell, who has charge of the plant disease survey work in the United States department of agriculture.

Doctor Haskell says there are four main lines of attack in dealing with plant diseases. The first method is to keep the mout of the country by means of quarantines and rigid inspection. The second line of attack is by eradication, which may be successful if begun before a disease has spread over a wide area. Another method is prevention of infection by placing a barrier between the "germ" and the host plant. This is done by spraying with fungicides, destruction of insect carriers, and in numerous other ways. The fourth method is selection and breeding for resistant varieties.

SOYBEANS ASSUME IMPORTANT PLACE ON AMERICAN FARMS

Extensive use of the soybean for forage and increased use of the beans for oil, meal, and human food have resulted in a phenomenal increase in acreage and production of the crop, says the United States department of agriculture. The feeding value of soybean seed compares favorably with that of other concentrates. Soybean seed will furnish, at moderate cost, at least part of the high-protein concentrates necessary for stock feeding and milk production.

Soybean hay can be fed profitably to all kinds of livestock. It makes an excellent winter ration for young cattle, sheep, horses, and mules, and can be used to good advantage for hogs and poultry. As pasture, the soybean is valuable for all kinds of stock. Hogs glean a maximum of profit from soybean pasture when it supplements a corn ration. Soybean pasture may be used in late summer and early fall when perennial pastures are short.

The fertilizing value of soybeans compares favorably with that of other legumes usually grown for green manure. Straw from soybeans is valuable as roughage for wintering dry dairy cows and beef cattle. It is also a good roughage for sheep.

CLEAN BROODER HOUSES

With brooder houses, like incubators, there is no substitute for thorough cleaning, and as the brooder house is the most probable connecting link between the flock of last year and the flock of this year, relative to disease, no detail in cleaning can be left unnoticed. First, dry-clean the house by brushing down the ceiling, sidewalls, and removing all dirt from the floor. Next, use water to soak up any crusted material that may remain on the floor. After such material has been scraped off, use hot water and lye, giving the floor and side walls a thorough scrubbing. If water pressure and a hose are available, this should be used for rinsing out the house after scrubbing. The house should then be given ample time to dry out thoroughly before disinfecting—particularly if a fire gun is used for this purpose.

As coccidiosis in the spore form is very resistant to ordinary disinfectants, the use of a fire gun for final disinfecting as a means of controlling coccidiosis seems practical and logical. The fire gun is nothing more than a giant blow torch, burning either kerosene or gasoline. The surprising part of fire gun disinfecting is the length of time an exceedingly hot flame may be held on the woodwork of the house without setting fire. With this equipment, disinfecting can be done easily, quickly, and effectively. As regards economy, each large poultry farm can well afford to have a fire gun, as it has many uses aside from that of actually disinfecting poultry houses.—Roy E. Jones.

TYPICAL AMERICAN VEGETABLES

When you eat sweet corn, potatoes, sweet potatoes and tomatoes, you are dining upon typical American dishes for all of these vegetables were originally natives to North and South America. The most typical of them all is sweet corn which has been popular in America for years and is still something of a novelty in European countries, particularly in England, where vegetable growing is much more highly developed than in the United States.

The summers are not hot enough to make sweet corn a practical common garden crop. Although found in America by the early explorers, the exact origin of corn is not known. Originally it was known as maize, a term that endures in England where the term corn is applied to wheat. Indian corn was the first move toward the common name, corn.

It is believed by botanists that corn is a development of a coarse grass native to the southern states known as teosint. But whether it is a derivative of this plant or a hybrid between teosint and some other member of the grass family, to which corn belongs, that has not been identified is unknown. Efforts to solve the mystery of the origin of corn have failed to bring definite results. It was here when the country was discovered but where it came from no one knows.

The potato came from South America, the temperate regions of the Andes, and from this same region came the tomato, at first grown only for ornament. The botanical name, Lycopersicon, means literally "wolf peach," referring probably to the poisonous qualities originally attributed to it. It was originally known as "love apple" and this name is still found in catalogues of English seed houses although long since obsolete in the United States. The original form of the tomato was small fruited in either yellow or red.

The present huge types and the various shapes such as the cherry and car tomatoes are what are known as cultigens, varieties that have arisen in cultivation from the original species brought from South America. The original tomato could hardly recognize its descendants.

The sweet potato botanically is a brother of the morning glory and originated in the American tropics.

GARDENING HINTS

Get seed boxes ready and see that sash for the hotbed is in repair.

Get an extra early start with tomato plants in the house and you can transplant them to the hotbed when it gets going and have earlier tomatoes than ever before.

Have a spring housecleaning in the garden as soon as the weather permits and get all old stalks and dead leaves that may harbor the eggs of last year's bugs or spores of last year's blights and burn them.

Does your garden need fertilizer? Figure out the needs of the soil and which it is most deficient. If it is order the fertilizing elements in sandy potash is advisable.

DEVICE AIDS MOTORIST TO PARK IN SMALL SPACE

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP)—A twin wheel parking device may aid the motorist to swing his car toward the curb when there is scarcely an inch to spare.

Such an apparatus has been invented by R. W. Branson, an employe of the Missouri state auditing department.

The device consists of a set of two small wheels attached to the car's front axle and hinged so they may be dropped to the ground through a control on the instrument board.

When the small wheels touch the ground, Branson explains, the driver puts the car in reverse and backs a few inches, thus raising the front wheels of the car.

Once this is done, Branson says, the apparatus becomes attached automatically to the steering gear and the driver may turn the car in either direction in a small radius.

Millions for Roads

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP)—Illinois will spend $30,000,000 on new paved highways in 1930. Engineers also are making a study of possibilities of improving the secondary road system, connecting the farmer with arterial highways.

Planes Round Up Deer

NOME (AP)—By using airplanes a herd of 12,000 reindeer was rounded up in a few days near Elephant Point, Alaska. In "cowpunching" days the task would have taken weeks or months.

An unusual angling prize was landed at Wildwood, N. J., by Magistrate John J. O'Farrell when he reeled in a sea gull instead of a fish. He was surf casting and in sending his line beyond the breakers, the weighted end wrapped a dozen turns about the gull's neck just as the bird swooped for a small fish. The magistrate received several cuts on the hands while he was liberating the gull.

CORNELIUS BRENNAN KILLED IN PECULIAR ACCIDENT

Patrick F. Brennan of Prospect street received word Friday notifying him of the recent death of his cousin, Cornelius Brennan, of Schenectady road, New York state, which occurred in an automobile accident. Mr. Brennan and four other men were injured in a peculiar accident at a gasoline filling station on the Schenectady road. An automobile occupied by four men skidded in front of Brennan's, striking him as he came out of the door and pinning him against a tree.

His left leg was mangled when it was jammed by the bumper of the automobile and despite the application of a rough tourniquet while frantic efforts were being made to remove him he lost so much blood that his condition was extremely grave when brought to the hospital. When attending physicians declared that a blood transfusion was the only possible means of saving the man's life three persons, among whom were Brennan's brother and a state trooper, volunteered. Tests were being made to determine whose blood would be suitable when word was brought from the emergency ward that Brennan had died.

According to the version given authorities, the automobile containing the four Schenectady men was being driven up to Brennan's station for service. Just as Brennan came out of the door to attend to their needs the driver apparently stepped on the accelerator instead of the brake and the car shot forward. The car was blocked between the tree and the service station in such a fashion that it could not be moved to extricate the man. Other attendants at the gasoline station and passersby worked in vain to free the victim. He received the last rites of the Catholic church after being brought into the garage.

Mr. Brennan, who was 55 years old, for many years was a resident of Greeneville, where he had a large circle of friends and relatives who will be deeply grieved to learn of his tragic death.

Mr. Brennan, besides his widow, leaves two brothers, John and James Brennan of Albany, N. Y., and two sisters, Mrs. Val Brown and Miss Julia Brennan, both of Holyoke, Mass.

On Thursday, Feb. 27, St. Andrew's Women's guild met at the guild room with a large attendance. Mrs. Aubrey entertained and served a dainty lunch.

The following names were omitted by mistake in the report of those assisting at the Dramatic club play and entertainment last Thursday: Miss Jean Copeland, Miss Dorothy Hunt, Charles Lillibridge and F. E. Coit.

The Greeneville N. M. Sewing circle met at the home of Mrs. William Dawson on Roswell avenue, Friday evening, with a large class present. The first period of the evening was devoted to sewing of fancy articles, after which a social hour was enjoyed with piano and vocal selections being offered. Refreshments were served by the hostess, assisted by Mrs. Helge Johnson and Mrs. Harry Richmond. The dining room was prettily decorated with the color scheme of red and white, the class colors being used. The circle will be entertained at the home of Mrs. Harold Wickham on North Main street.

Mrs. Charles Ogden and sons have returned to their home on Main street, after spending a week in New Jersey.

GIRL WORKERS OBSERVE FOURTH ANNIVERSARY

The Norwich Council of Girl Workers observed their fourth anniversary with a supper at the Third Baptist church this week with 31 members present. At 6:30 o'clock a delicious supper was served, consisting of fruit cup, creamed crab meat in patty shells, green peas, pickles, cranberry jelly, rolls, angel cake, orange sherbet and coffee. The tables were prettily decorated with pink crepe paper and white, and sweet peas were used for a centerpiece. Each table also contained a birthday cake with four pink candles. The hostess for the occasion was Mrs. Henry Sebastian and the supper committee consisted of Mrs. William A. Lund, chairman, Mrs. Herbert I. Peckham, and Mrs. Fred Laycock. The waitresses were the Misses Jennie Sebastian, Elinor Howard and Doris Lund.

After the supper a short business session was held which began with devotional exercises led by Miss Celeste Copeland of the First Baptist church group. Mrs. A. C. Freeman then took charge of the meeting and after a few words welcomed the new members. Miss Ruth Hamilton and Miss Elizabeth Pullen also took part in the meeting by giving a brief resume of the history and possibilities of the council. The next meeting will be held in the Universalist church.

SMALL GIRL PROBABLY FATALLY HURT BY AUTOMOBILE AT MONTVILLE

Rita Dutremble, 3, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alex Dutremble, of Thames View, Montville, was probably fatally injured at 4 o'clock Friday afternoon, when she was struck by an automobile operated by Randolph W. Birch, of No. 9 Wyllys street, Hartford, near her home on the Norwich-New London highway.

The child was hit as she was crossing the highway to join her sister and several other children. She ran directly in front of the machine, was knocked down, but was not run over. The driver did everything possible to avoid striking her, it was claimed, bringing the car to a stop within 15 feet after the collision.

Dr. H. Norman Rasmussen, of Montville, was summoned and after ascertaining the extent of the child's injuries took her in his automobile to the W. W. Backus hospital. It was found there that she received two broken legs, possible fracture of the spine, compound fracture of the skull, fracture at the base of the skull and possible internal injuries.

Early this (Saturday) morning it was reported at the hospital that the child was in a dangerous condition and was unconscious. The accident was investigated by Officer Howard Lamphere of Montville.

BRIDGEPORT WOMAN ADDRESSED CIVICS DEPARTMENT MEETING

The civics department of the Woman's City club held an instructive and interesting round table at the club rooms Friday afternoon at 4 o'clock. Miss Josephine Erwin, chairman of the Americanization group, introduced as speaker of the afternoon Miss Hazel Ormsby, secretary of the International Institute of Bridgeport.

Miss Ormby explained the work the institute is doing among the foreign born population in this country by having branches in every state from the Atlantic coast to California and also being connected with the international migration service at Geneva with branches in all the countries of Europe. The many problems and difficulties of new citizens are being solved she said. The work in America is carried on by specially trained foreign-speaking social workers who by the understanding of language and customs of the people are able to secure full cooperation in getting information for naturalization papers or any problem that may arise. The institute is also part of the Y. W. C. A. work and in Bridgeport is supported by the community chest.

Murdy, president of the Norwich chamber of commerce, endorsing the movement for additional local industries. At intervals of one minute, Scouts in pairs started out to follow this trail.

A Tribute

In the death of George F. Hyde the city has lost a most worthy citizen. In the community where he lived, the First Congregational church, (the interests of which plus his home environments, was his life) his efforts for ten years in promotion the Young Men's Christian Association, of Bridgeport, he was most loyal and conscientious. He was a devout Christian and attended all services, at his much loved church, when health permitted. Mr. Hyde, the son of Deacon Louis A. Hyde and Harriet Stuart Fuller, received his early education in the schools of Norwich, and was graduated from Norwich Free Academy in the class of 1892. Four years later, he was a member of the 1896 class to be graduated from Amherst college. When at first entering upon his duties at Bridgeport Y. M. C. A., he was assistant secretary. Later, he practically had entire charge of the boys, and it was he who started the project to secure a separate building expressly for boys. He was greatly interested in the local Y. M. C. A., where he held a position for a few years, also was one of its supporters. For many years he was chairman of the board of ushers at the First Congregational church and was noted for his affability and courtesy. Mr. Hyde also was one of the original members of the Young People's C. E. society, being deeply interested in its welfare in every way, at one time serving as its president. Through his own personal goodness, he has been influential in bringing others to Christ. As chairman of the good citizenship committee in the C. E. society, also in the Norwich Christian Endeavor union he was devotedly loyal. Sympathy has been widely manifested for his family of five sisters, Mrs. Herbert L. Yerrington, Misses Susan, Louise and Jessie Hyde, of Norwich, and Miss Gertrude Hyde, professor of art at Mt. Holyoke college.

Although in impaired health for many years, Mr. Hyde had been seriously ill but a week, consequently the announcement of his death at his home, 268 Washington street, early Wednesday morning came unexpectedly to the majority of his friends and acquaintances.

The Skipper

You kin take it from yours truly that I haven't no ambition
For to be the boss an' skipper of a craft.
Though I know there's lots of fellers that considers the position
Is a mighty easy sinecure, a graft.
I know it looks so simple it's a shame to take the money,
That the skipper never seems to do a thing;
But you bet your bottom dollar that the job ain't milk an' honey,
Which is the reason for the ditty that I sing.

When the ship is buckin' combers that is threatenin' to break her,
When she's rollin' in the trough or on the ridge;
When the scared an' shakin' wheelsman is a-callin' on his Maker,
An' the waves is throwin' showers on the bridge—
Then the skipper's work is risky an' it isn't dry an' prosy,
For he's got a ship to handle an' to guide;
While the crew is mostly sheltered in the deck house warm an' cozy,
An' the wind is makin' trouble far an' wide.

There's a log that must be posted, there's a cargo list for keepin',
There's three thousand tons of freighter on his mind;
There's the chances he is takin' when the ship is slowly creepin'
Through a fog that makes you feel ye're goin' blind.
There's the bitter winter watches when the bridge is frozen solid,
An' the wind is stabbin' at him with a knife;
An' the skipper simply stands it—lookin' satisfied an' stolid,
But I ain't exactly envyin' his life.

An' if the hooker's sinkin' an' the boats is smashed and battered,
It's the skipper who must be the last to leave;
An' if he bumps a hidden reef his whole career is shattered,
An' his reputation's gone beyond retrieve.

You can take it from yours truly I don't want to be a skipper
In spite of all the salary he makes,
For I haven't got his worries an' I'm feelin' pretty chipper
As an ordinary seaman on the lakes

Adventure

O, Possible and Probable,
Fell jailors of my mind,
I had a way of leaping once
And leaving you behind.

I had a way of soaring once
Off in a maze of blue,
Tempting Unbelievables
Until it happened true.

But now they've taken Beautiful
And measured her a gown,
Beautiful, my Beautiful
Come, storm through the town.

Naked on a smoking steed
While I cry your name
And old cringing Credible
Dies of rage and shame!

NEW FRENCH GOVT. APPROVED BY PRESIDENT DOMERGUE

Nearly All the Parliamentary Groups Are Represented In the New Cabinet — M. Tardeau Will Introduce the New Ministry to the Chamber of Deputies Wednesday — If Given a Vote of Confidence M. Tardeau Will Send the Delegation Back to the London Naval Conference On Thursday.

PARIS, Mar. 2.—(AP)—Premier Tardieu's second cabinet was officially constituted and approved by President Doumergue this morning.

M. Tardieu will introduce it to the chamber of deputies on Wednesday, and if he gets a vote of confidence will probably send the French delegation back to the London naval conference on Thursday. He himself, however, may not be able to accompany the delegation at first.

All the groups in parliament except the socialists and the communists are represented in the new ministry. Three are even a cabinet minister and an under secretary of state from the radical socialist party, whose leaders Camille Chautemps, Edouard Herriot and Edouard Daladier, are bitter enemies of Premier Tardieu.

The general impression in parliamentary circles is that though M. Tardieu has not been wholly successful in forming the cabinet of "wide republican concentration" he desired, his second ministry is one of the most representative from the parliamentary viewpoint that has governed France in recent years.

Owing to the general public dissatisfaction with the two recent political crises, the ministry has a good chance of weathering the storm in the chamber on Wednesday.

Premier Tardieu's adversaries affirm that they are as strongly opposed to him as ever, but his friends believe that he will succeed in splitting the vote in the radical socialists ranks and get enough votes for a working majority.

Jacques-Louis Dumesnil, minister of marine, and Henri Falcoz, under secretary of state for public works, are both radical socialists. It is pointed out that though they are supporting the premier as individuals and are acting contrary to the orders of their group, their personal friends and followers will probably vote for the ministry.

Le Temps, which is pro-Tardieu, said today "Premier Tardieu has formed a cabinet in which nearly all the parliamentary groups are represented."

The radical newspaper Paris-Soir, which opposes Tardieu, thinks that "the second Tardieu ministry leans more toward the right than his first. But owing to the long drawn out crisis it may survive the storm that wrecked the Chautemps cabinet."

The French delegation to the naval conference will consist of Premier Tardieu, Foreign Minister Briand, Minister of Marine Dumesnil, Minister of Colonies Pietri, Ambassador De Fleuriau, and Gustave De Kerguezec.

MAYOR THOMPSON, CHICAGO, NOW IN THE BACKGROUND

CHICAGO, Mar. 2—(AP)—"Big Bill the Builder" has dropped his speaking part.

He vetoes where he once commanded, and stalks but seldom into the drama of Chicago.

The gang plot wound up to a climatic series of murders without a spoken word from Mayor William Hale Thompson, the problem play woven about the empty city coffers was solved over his mute opposition. In each drama, moving almost parallel to a climax, Chicago business men spoke the heroic lines.

It was not so many years ago, when the militant cowboy mayor in his ten-gallon hat strode up and down the Mississippi valley stumping for flood control and swung around the circle of states for "America First," shouting threats, at an ocean's distance, to punch the nose of the king of England.

Ready enough, then, to meet the questioner with volcanic retort, Mayor Thompson now steps aside for a mouthpiece. Rarely does he grant interviews to newspapermen, and the city hall reporters have dropped the mayoralty office from their beats to call upon Samuel A. Ettelson, corporation counsel and spokesman for the mayor, to gather the day's news.

But if William Hale Thompson has forsaken the flare of the trumpets he has not quit the fight.

He defied the city council and the committee of citizens headed by Silas H. Strawn and shouted "reformers!" at the group of citizens who sought his co-operation in settling the financial problem. And as the Strawn committee dispatched solicitors through the city gathering contributions to the $74,000,000 fund from which the 40,000 municipal employes will break their two-month salary fast, mayor and spokesmen refused to admit they had yielded the one condition the rescue committee set up: that citizens must supersede public officials in dictating the disposal of the money.

OPTIMISTIC OVER OUTCOME OF THE NAVAL CONFERENCE

NEW YORK, Mar. 2—(AP)—Expressing optimism over the outcome of the five-power naval conference at London, Secretary of the Navy Charles Francis Adams, a delegate to the conference, today told an international radio audience "we are here to sit" until a settlement is reached.

He said the conference had been delayed by the fall of the French government, but nothing has been lost but time, and when the French returned they would start where they left off. A few days more or less spent in discussion was nothing as compared to the value of arriving at an agreement, he declared.

"It does not cost as much to keep this whole delegation in session as it does to maintain one small cruiser," he added.

Secretary Adams spoke from London and his words were carried over a network of the Columbia Broadcasting system to radio listeners in the United States and Canada.

He said "the interests of peace and of the navy are the same."

EARTH TREMORS CONTINUE TO SHAKE IMPERIAL VALLEY

Shocks Which Started Saturday Afternoon Continue In Moderated Intensity—At Brawley, Cal., Damage Was Estimated At $75,000 — One Woman Was Seriously Injured — All But Two Hotels In Brawley Have Been Closed.

BRAWLEY, Cal., March 2. —(AP)—With damage estimates ranging as high as $75,000 in Brawley, this Imperial valley section today still was quivering as earthquake shocks which started yesterday afternoon continued in moderated intensity.

While most of the tremors have been slight since late last night, a few today were very noticeable. No further damage, however, has been reported since yesterday afternoon when major shocks shook down cornices and copings, broke windows, cracked masonry and bounced automobiles like rubber balls.

Mrs. E. C. Dunham, of Brawley, was seriously injured when struck by falling debris but will recover. Several cases of minor bruises were reported.

Ropes closing off thoroughfares in the business district were removed today and despite an occasional shake, traffic was near normal. Firemen and police inspected buildings, reporting little danger providing there is no recurrence of heavy jolts. All but two of the hotels in Brawley remained closed as a precautionary measure. An inspection indicated they might be unsafe in the event of further heavy earth shocks.

Several hundred persons, thus deprived of sleeping quarters, even had they desired to make use of them, collected on street corners and in the lobbies of the two hotels still open. Many of them spent the night in the open.

The quakes did not affect the street lighting system and every downtown street last night was illuminated.

The earth movements were localized in the Imperial valley and appear centered at Brawley.

Westmoreland, Calipatria, Holtville, El Centro and the town of Imperial reported severe shakings yesterday afternoon but today the earth generally is quiet. No reports of major structural damage has been found outside of Brawley.

Calexico, Calif., and its Mexican sister city, Mexicali, reported visitations but they were very slight.

There was no panic among the inhabitants of the valley, although there was considerable excitement yesterday during the heaviest movements.

Brawley has experienced at least eight earth movements since last Tuesday. The city, like the rest of Imperial valley's towns, rests on a silt bed ranging from 600 to 1,000 feet thick.

EXPECT SENATE WILL PASS THE TARIFF BILL THIS WEEK

WASHINGTON, Mar. 2—(AP)—Senate leaders look for final passage of the tariff bill this week unless extensive clashes recur over attempts to overturn previous decisions which denied an increased sugar tariff and defeated proposed duties on hides, leathers, and shoes.

Lengthy debate preceded the rejection of these proposals and for this reason the party principals anticipate speedy disposition when they come up again. But it took eleven hours of uninterrupted oratory to turn back a lumber levy and as long to prove that a majority was unwilling to tax foreign oil and gasoline.

Tomorrow, debate will begin on an amendment by Senator Shortridge, republican, California, for a duty of seven cents a pound on long staple cotton, used in the manufacture of tire fabric and other coarse cotton products. Proponents see a good chance of this commodity being taken from the free list, but the opposition, to come principally from New Englanders, feels confident it will not.

POLITICAL CAMPAIGN WILL START THIS WEEK

WASHINGTON, Mar. 2—(AP)—America's biennial political campaign gets started in earnest this week with a variety of issues and personalities combing to give the congressional race unusual zest.

Tomorrow, Senator Deneen goes on to Hustings in Illinois, to defend his seat against Mrs. Ruth Hanna McCormick, now a congresswoman at large from Illinois, in which promises to be one of the most interesting of the primary contests.

Interest centers in the 33 senatorial races although the 435 members of the house stand for reelection. It is a test principally for the republicans who have a majority of 100 in the house. Of the senatorial contests, 13 democrats and 20 republicans are up for the voters' approval.

BRIDGE GAME THE BASIS OF SUIT FOR DIVORCE

CHICAGO, Mar. 2—(AP)—The woman who held 13 diamonds and did not take a trick wants a divorce.

The divorce bill, filed in behalf of Mrs. Lila Grey Colyer, tells of a bridge game in April 1928, in which Mrs. Colyer and her husband, Edwin C. Colyer, who takes his bridge seriously, were partners.

The Colyers were slightly behind. On a hand for game and rubber, Mrs. Colyer drew 13 diamonds. As they say over the radio, West (the dealer) bid a heart, Colyer (North) passed, East bid a spade and Mrs. Colyer (south) made it a no trump. She finally got the bid at six no trump. Since her opponents led first and she could never get in the lead, Mrs. Colyer lost every trick.

When the last card had been played and Colyer saw that his wife had held all the diamonds, (here's where she charges cruelty) he picked up the nearest thing—a cut glass grapefruit bowl—reached across the table and hit her.

In his suitcase police found a farewell letter addressed to his parents, who reside in Canonsburg, Pa. The letter, written in Slavish and somewhat incoherent, said in part "I had many a hard luck and you always think I am a thief".

Hess had been unemployed for several weeks and police believe he had grown despondent because of this. He came here about three years ago. A sister survives him besides his parents.

Rev. Arthur S. Wheelock, pastor of the church officiated, using the Episcopal single ring service.

The wedding was of considerable interest in the social circles of several cities. Some 500 invitations had been extended and the church was well filled with a fashionable gathering.

A program of classical music was rendered by the Flagg string ensemble of Danielson preceding the entrance of the bridal party. The wedding march from Lohengrin was played as the processional. An arrangement of The Song of the Island, a Hawaiian number, was played softly during the ceremony.

The bride was given in marriage by her father and was attended by Miss Elizabeth Hawkins of Schenectady, N. Y., a Wellesley classmate, as maid of honor. The bridesmaids were Miss Mary Case Colgrove of Waterbury and Mrs. Clarke Staples of Brookline, Mass., cousins of the bride; Miss Ruth Wilbur Pollard of this city, Miss Katherine Hobbie of Tonawanda, N. Y., Miss Helen E. Archer of Hartford and Miss Katherine G. Slocum of Hartford, the latter three classmates of the bride at Wellesley.

The groom was attended by Christopher Morrison Case, brother of the bride, as best man. The ushers were Eric T. Wakefield of Honolulu, William Beard of New York city, James McC. Farnum of Grafton, Mass., classmates of the groom at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, William Jackson of Pittsburgh, Pa., class 1930, M. I. T., and J. Kendall Fullerton of this city.

The bride was charming in a gown of directoire model cut with a bolero of deep ivory satin with double puffed sleeves and long side train. The trimming was a wide bertha and vestee of rose point lace, which adorned her mother's wedding gown. Her tulle veil was an heirloom in the groom's family. It was caught up with a coronet of rose point lace and side cascades of the same, with knots of orange blossoms on either side. She carried an ivory-bound prayer book with book mark of ivory satin tipped with orange blossoms.

The maid of honor wore Basque pink lace with peplum ruffles, cap sleeves and lace mitts. Her hat was of Basque pink felt, cape-line, trimmed and edged with matching hair braid and banded with velvet ribbon. She carried an arm bouquet of spring flowers tied with French blue ribbon. The bridesmaids were attired in pretty frocks of nile green lace. They wore becoming hats and lace mitts and carried arm bouquets of spring flowers.

Mrs. Case appeared in a gown of rose beige chiffon with aquamarines and crystals and she wore a hat of rose beige felt with hair braid trimming. Mrs. Smith, mother of the groom, was becomingly gowned in ecru lace and hat of deep brown horse-hair braid.

The church decorations had been attractively planned by Mrs. Robert O. Branch, assisted by Mrs. Lyndon E. Little, Mrs. John G. Boss, Mrs. Jay E. Grant and Mrs. Albert E. Welch. A beautiful arch over the altar was arranged with a background of palms and southern smilax. There was an arrangement of Easter lilies in baskets to mark the pews for the immediate family and friends.

Over 200 invitations had been issued for the reception held at the home of the bride. Southern smilax, rose color snapdragon, Darwin tulips, Templar roses and blue lupin made the living room attractive, while the dining room was decorated with southern smilax and spring flowers. Service was by a Middletown caterer.

The bride is one of the most popular members of the younger social set. She is a graduate of Windham high school and Wellesley college, class of 1928. The Girl Scouts of the Congregational church, of which she is captain, attended in a body. Mr. Smith is a graduate of Massachusetts Institute of Technology, class of 1928, a member of Phi Gamma Delta fraternity. He is maintenance engineer for the Oahu Railway company in Hawaii.

Mr. and Mrs. Smith left in the evening on their honeymoon. They will sail March 8 on the S. S. Malolo from San Francisco for Honolulu. For traveling the bride wore a tweed coat and flat crepe gown in shades of rose, and cream color fox collar with felt hat to harmonize. Mr. and Mrs. Smith will be at home, 4577 Kakaka avenue, Honolulu, after June 15. They received many beautiful and valuable gifts, including money, silver, pewter, rugs, art glass, linen. The bride and groom gave each other wrist watches. The bride gave her attendants crystal and pearl necklaces while the groom gave his best man a cigarette lighter and the ushers leather wallets. Guests came from Honolulu, Tarrytown, N. Y., Montclair and Passaic, N. J., Providence, R. I., Springfield, Boston, Southboro, Concord, Milton, Newton, Greenfield and Gardner, Mass., New Haven, Hartford, Waterbury, New Britain, Highland Park, Meriden and Baltimore, Md.

MRS. REDMAN RECOVERING FROM BITE OF PET CAT

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, March 2.—Mrs. Edgar Redman is showing improvement at her home, 448 Pleasant street, from the effects of a severe bite inflicted a few days ago by a pet cat that was suffering from a convulsion. The cat, which Mrs. Redman was attempting to treat at the time she was bitten, died a few hours later. Dr. J. A. Girouard, who was summoned to attend to Mrs. Redman's injury, decided on taking every possible precaution against rabies upon learning the history of the cat's illness. The pet had been under treatment by Dr. B. K. Dow, veterinarian, for some time, the latter indicating that he had seen no indication of rabies. The cat sunk five teeth into the middle finger of the left hand of his mistress, inflicting wounds as deep as one-quarter of an inch. Mrs. Redman was also scratched on the right hand. Severe swelling and pain, accompanied by some fever, followed as a result of the infection.

Following the animal's death, Mr. Redman had disposed of the body in a river but on advice of Dr. Girouard the carcass was recovered and sent to the state health department at Hartford to be examined for rabies. While this examination brought negative results, a true report will not be available for some six weeks when the condition of other animals inoculated for the test is noted. Meanwhile Mrs. Redman is to submit to the Pasteur treatment as a precautionary measure. A quantity of the vaccine has been ordered by Dr. Girouard through Town Health Officer Dr. Frederick E. Wilcox from New York.

One of the most flagrant cases of driving while under the influence of liquor to come to the attention of the authorities of this section in some time will result in the appearance at the Mansfield town court Monday morning of Joseph Kelley, 30, of Worcester, Mass. Kelley drove his car to the left of the road and into a machine driven by John Desjarlais of Stonington, near the Willington-Mansfield town line on the Stafford Springs highway shortly before midnight Saturday. The Worcester car then careened into an embankment and stopped when both front wheels had been pulled from the axle. It is said that Kelley, not conscious of the fact that the car was minus front wheels, made an attempt to drive off. He was found in a helpless condition about half an hour later by State Policeman Henry Heinold of the Stafford Springs barracks. Mrs. Flora Desjarlais, who accompanied her husband, sustained injuries of yet undetermined nature. Dr. J. A. Girouard, who was called to the home of the Stonington man's mother at 91 South street, this city, to treat the injured woman, planned to take an X-ray photograph this afternoon. Mr. and Mrs. Desjarlais were returning home from Chicopee, Mass., where they had attended a funeral. Noting the dangerous manner in which the Kelley car was approaching, Desjarlais pulled his car to the extreme right but was unable to avoid being struck. It is expected that Kelley will face three charges, driving while under the influence of liquor, reckless driving and intoxication. Both machines were badly damaged.

Believing that a deliberate attempt was made to wreck his car and probably cause him personal injuries, William Podbersky of Village Hill, substitute letter carrier at the local postoffice, is today considering an investigation by the police. Podbersky was returning home from this city about 1 o'clock Saturday morning when at a point near the Eagle's Nest property on Mountain street he nearly drove into a bar post and a pile of brush set in the road. He found that for a distance of about one-quarter of a mile the road was blocked at intervals by some 20 bar posts that had been pulled away from a fence bordering the road. He avoided the obstructions by driving into a field and back onto the road again. Podbersky claims that only for his timely discovery of the series of obstructions his car would probably have been ditched and sent plunging down a steep embankment. He claims to know the identity of the parties responsible for the act.

A hearing for some 40 property owners on Ann, Hope and Chapman streets, complaining against an alleged high assessment for the installation of a sewer line constructed in 1926-'27 was granted by the sewer committee at the council chamber Friday night. At the close of the hearing Alderman Eugene B. Lewis announced that the members of the sewer committee would investigate further.

Now that daily police protection is given the children of the Natchaug grammar school crossing Jackson street, the police committee, Alderman Eugene B. Lewis chairman, Saturday discontinued the stop and go flashes on the traffic standard at this location. In the future the signal will show only the caution light.

A fine of $50 and costs, with a remittance of $35 in the event of restitution, was imposed in police court Saturday in the case of Joseph A. Duprey, 28, of Huntington, Mass., formerly of this city, charged with issuing a fraudulent check. The check was for $25 and issued to the Hurley-Grant company about one year ago. Prosecuting Attorney Harry S. Gaucher brought out that another check for $10 had been issued by Duprey, but this charge was not pressed. State Policeman Kenneth Stevens of the Stafford Springs barracks arrested Duprey in Huntington and returned him to this city Saturday morning.

About 1,000 men and women of the town who had failed to pay the $2 personal tax when Collector Louis C. Vegiard closed his office Saturday night, will be granted an extension of time for one week, after which time the extra $1 assessment will be imposed.

It was indicated today that but very few of the 65 property owners in the town of Windham who filed sworn complaints against the revaluation of their property have been granted reductions by the board of relief. Candidates For Reformatory.

The night school teachers in the borough complain that there is a good deal of rowdyism going on outside the building during sessions of the school. Precocious young men who do not attend the school congregate on the school grounds, even going on the fire escapes and doing various stunts and making weird noises which attract the attention of the pupils and teachers. The state police now have the matter in hand and already have the names of two or three of the young men who are leaders of the gang.

DANIELSON

LOCAL RUNAWAY GIRL CAUGHT IN NIGHT CLUB RAID

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, March 2. — Jennie Misiaszek, runaway Danielson girl, is still locked up in New York. Her father, John Misiaszek, of Water street, made a fruitless trip to the metropolis on Friday, with the expectation of bringing his daughter home.

It appears that the girl did get caught in some sort of a night club raid and that the circumstances under which she is held by the New York police are such that they hesitate to turn her over for return to Connecticut.

Today, she was facing the prospect of prosecution in New York. What the exact charges are against her was not clear in police circles here today.

In any event, when the father arrived in New York Saturday, expecting to bring the girl back with him, he failed to impress the police there as to the earnestness of his mission, or, possibly, his identity. This feature of the case is regarded as unfortunate, for Mr. Misiaszek has spent several hundred dollars since the girl went away on January 8 last to bring about her return.

A Quiet Week End

Danielson experienced a particularly quiet week end. Up to late this afternoon no motor vehicle accidents of any consequence had been reported in. Yet, there was heavy traffic. No arrests for any cause were made either by the borough or state police. It was mentioned by some automobile owners today that they were not driving on account of being without the new operator's license, effective today. State officers did not go out of their way today to investigate as to whether everyone driving had a new license, but this is said to be in the cards for the immediate future.

During the current week, owners of property in the towns of Pomfret, Brooklyn, Canterbury and Plainfield through which waters of Blackwell's brook flows, are to be asked to give the state temporary leases in an arrangement intended to make the stream a state-leased brook. The hope of sportsmen aiding representatives of the state fish and game commission in working out the plan is for co-operation. Land owners will have explained to them the various advantages, financial and otherwise, in entering into such a plan as the state proposes. The state pays liberally in establishing a state-leased brook agreement. It furnishes a patrol during the fishing season, and imposes many restrictions on fishermen that are in the interest of the land owner.

Monday evening will be Neighbors' night in Killingly grange, and the visiting grangers will be largely from Plainfield and Moosup valley granges. The members of these visiting granges will furnish the program. Refreshments are to be served and there will be various diversions to interest all attending.

March played up to traditional form today, with a snappy and penetrating wind out of the northwest, yet with the temperature hovering about the lower 40's. Out in the country districts residents of those areas are more than pleased over the fact that, for the most part, frost is out of the ground. Deeply rutted roads offer a difficulty for travel with cars, but in no such degree as did the mud of two weeks ago.

A later date this month brings the annual borough caucus to nominate borough officers for the ensuing year. This caucus may be of interest this year, in view of recent quasi political activities in Danielson. It may bring a test of voting strength between factions that believe that the borough at present has an efficient, honest and worthwhile official family, and those who may think otherwise. Those who believe that the borough is being well administered will gladly welcome any test at the polls that those who may think otherwise are willing to sponsor.

Miss Blanche C. Lamoureux, of Furnace street, who recently resigned her position as a stenographer in a local bank, and who has been taking a much needed rest, has, after considering several offers of employment, taken a position as private secretary to Francis E. Storer, president of the Thames Bank and Trust company, at Norwich, and will assume her new duties at once. Her many friends here will wish her every success in her new position.

FUNERAL

Mrs. Aldei Savoie

Saturday morning, the funeral of Mrs. Aldei Savoie was held from the home on Water street, with services at St. James' church at 9 o'clock. The officials of the solemn high mass of requiem were Rev. Anthelme Mollard, M. S., Rev. Francis Baldwin, M. S., and Rev. J. A. Demers, M. S. Many attended the service. Burial was in Holy Cross cemetery, the committal service conducted by Rev. Fr. Demers. Bearers were Arsene Houle, Joseph Landry, Oscar Landry, Charles Landry, Albert Charbonneau and George Lavender. L. E. Kennedy was in charge of the arrangements.

The Quinebaug and Assawaga rivers, uniting here, are free of ice excepting in some sheltered coves along these streams. In ordinary years the ice in these rivers does not break up until about mid-March, although going out at times around March 10. This fact taken with the extra early appearance here of numbers of species of birds not usually seen in this territory until considerably later in the season appears to indicate an unusually early spring, which if it comes, will be something of a novelty, not experienced for a decade.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl F. Wood, of New York, who have a summer home in Brooklyn, were week end guests of Mr. Wood's parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Wood, of Academy street.

Don't forget to deposit in our savings department now. Money received as late as March 5th, receives interest from the first at 5 per cent. The Windham County National Bank. —adv.

Mrs. Mary F. Taylor, of Webster, spent the week end visiting with relatives in Danielson.

Robins and bluebirds—a considerable number of them—had made their appearance at the Ezra Burgess farm, at Westcott road and Stearns street, at the week end. Varioles also were reported seen near South Killingly today.

It is not unlikely that the inauguration of Danielson's home building program—actual construction — will get underway before the end of the present month.

The Military-Firemen's ball at the state armory at the week end was a success. Many communities in this section of eastern Connecticut were represented in the attendance.

An interesting prospect is that a property owner of the borough may be ordered into court for failure to clean the chimney at his home and who was not backward about telling Fire Chief A. P. Woodward that he would, in effect, have the chimney cleaned when he got good and ready. Chief Woodward is interested in the matter because of the fire department being called to the place referred to, largely as chimney cleaners.

It was 50 years ago Saturday that F. E. Bitgood, retired from business last year, walked into Danielson from his home on a farm in the Ekonk section of Sterling, to take a clerkship in a dry goods store here and to start a career that was through the years to make him one of the best known and most successful of the borough's business men. Yesterday, Mr. Bitgood retraced his steps of half a century ago from Ekonk to Danielson, but did it in a car, and not on foot.

JEWETT CITY

NEW LONDON SHIP'S LOG, 1844, DISCOVERED ON GEER FARM

(Special to The Bulletin.)

JEWETT CITY, March 2.—Frank Geer, while searching last week among a trunk full of old records and papers that have not been disturbed for close to a hundred years, came upon an ancient ship's log. Sunday's issue of the Providence Journal gave a full page in its artgravure section to just such a record of the whaling industry that flourished a century ago.

The Long Harpoon, by Arthur C. Watson, published in 1929 by George H. Reynolds, of New Bedford, tells the story of old whaling logs that are practically identical with the daily records Mr. Geer has found.

Written each day in the fo'castle, of the good ship Catherine, which cleared from New London, September 26, 1843, by a seaman whose signature appears as William E. Leeds, of Mystic, is recounted the thrilling experiences which befell the crew of this vessel during a long whaling cruise to the South Seas. Many of the entries have to do with the wind and weather, and facts incidental to the working of the vessel. During the voyage many vessels were spoken, from New London, New Bedford, Nantucket and one each from Stonington and Mystic.

On New Year's day, 1844, the Catherine was in communication with the Charles Henry and the Stonington, of New London. On the next day they were hailed by the Octavo, of New Bedford, and the Phoenix, of Sag Harbor.

This recording mariner makes occasional references to Miss Harris, of Norwich, and Miss Angie Hull. Special interest attaches to the record of the days during which whales were taken. On these lucky dates there appears a pen and ink sketch of a whale and a record of the number of barrels of oil the catch yielded in the trying kettles. Among other descriptions of rough weather was an unusual occurrence during a hurricane down off Tristan da Cunha. During the terrible blow, one of the ship's sows kept under the long boat on the forward deck, gave birth to a litter of pigs, and their squealing mingled with the howling of the gae. Many of the entries told of fair weather and smooth seas in the great South Pacific. Other notations had to do with the roughest side of whaling as for example, the following quotation: "Saturday, January 6, 1844—Begins with light winds from the north west. At 5 in the morning saw right whales. Lowered the boats but did not get fast. Middle part, light winds. At 10 o'clock saw another whale and chased him to the windward: started to come on board and saw two more whales. Pulled after them Mr. Potter got fast to one, and the line came out of the chocks of the boat, and took Mr. Weaver, the third mate, overboard and we never saw him after that. We tried for another, but did not make fast. Saw one large iceberg. So ends these sorrowful 24 hours."

Seaman Leeds was evidently a farm hand previous to signing up for this voyage. Following his return he evidently worked on the Geer farm, and leaving there, left his personal log of the cruise of the Catherine, New London whaler. Discovered now after 80 years it is a record of amazing interest.

PUTNAM

NO NEW DEVELOPMENTS IN MURDER CASE OVER WEEK-END

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Mar. 2—There were no developments in the Trudeau murder case over the week end. The case which developed at Webster a week ago today with the finding of the body of Mrs. Cecile Manski Trudeau of Lake street, Webster, on the Thompson-Putnam road eight miles north of this city was still under investigation today. While Leon Trudeau, husband of the murdered woman is under arrest on a charge of murder in the first degree, police have failed to secure a complete confession of his guilt.

Connecticut, under the impression that the crime was committed in Wilsonville within the confines of Windham county concerned itself with the case for the first time officially Saturday when State's Attorney Howard C. Bradford of this city conferred with District Attorney Edwin G. Normand of Worcester. The attorneys reviewed the case in detail. Attorney Bradford made no comment on the case today.

At noon today Lieut. Ross V. Urquhart and County Detective Rowe H. Wheeler were in Webster to obtain details concerning the case. The state police lieutenant is making a search of the premises of the deserted Wieczek farm in Wilsonville in hope of unearthing new evidence in the case to substantiate the theory that Mrs. Trudeau was murdered in Connecticut.

Trudeau who remains silent in regards to his part in the murder of his wife was removed to the Worcester county jail Saturday. Since his arrest he had been confined in a cell at the Webster police station. Miss Lena Wieczak of Lamartine street, Worcester, is the only other person under arrest. The state charges the 17 year old girl with being an accessory after the fact.

RUSSIAN MUSIC FEATURES LEGION DISTRICT MEETING

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Mar. 2—The romantic melodies of Old Russia, played by a quartet of talented Boston artists were heard at Elks home this afternoon to delight more than one hundred members of the American Legion and auxiliary posts of the fourth district. The Russian presentation was one of the delightful parts of the lengthy programme. The compositions were rendered by Mr. and Mrs. Bons Berestneff and Mr. and Mrs. Alixey Berestneff of Boston, whose presence in Putnam today was made possible through the efforts of Alexander Vonsiatsky of Thompson. The musicians wore beautifully colored costumes of their native country. The varied programme played on Russian stringed instruments with piano accompaniment consisted of the Russian folk tunes and a number of the famous European compositions. After the final number the artists were accorded a rising vote of thanks by the Legionnaires.

Preceding the musical programme Mr. Vonsiatsky in a brief talk "The Last Days of R. sia" vividly depicted the occurrences which took place in French East Africa when the French government after recognizing the United Soviet republic forced that part of the Russian imperial navy which had been sheltered by the French province to lower its flag. The vividness with which Mr. Vonsiatsky described the events proved to be of interest to his audience.

The principal speaker of the meeting was State Department Commander Alexander. Mr. Alexander delivered an eloquent and inspiring address in which he covered the purpose for which the American Legion is organized. He touched upon the country's need for an adequate national defense which should be maintained strong enough to protect America's lives and resources, terming the phrase National Defense, a subject for more serious consideration. According to the state commander, the legion is slowly growing stronger. Statistics indicate that the Connecticut department will have reached its quota for membership within a few months. An interesting point brought out in the commander's address was the noble effort the legion, through national cooperation, is making to aid the unemployment situation. Another topic of interest to the people of Putnam, was Mr. Alexander's assertion that this city will entertain perhaps more out of state people during the two weeks preceding the national legion convention to be held this summer in Boston, than it will at any other time. He encouraged the organization of reception committees by the local post and its auxiliary to receive the visiting Legionnaires who will be in the east within a few weeks.

During the afternoon a number of department officials spoke, their subjects ranging from organization and membership to the national convention which will take place in Boston in July.

Following the speaking programme a business meeting of the district posts and auxiliaries was held jointly.

BOSWORTH AND SON ARE IN EAST THOMPSON

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Mar. 2—An item appearing in the New London column of The Bulletin Saturday morning concerning the kidnaping of a child in Waterford by Burton D. Bosworth of Pomfret aroused considerable interest on the part of Windham county people. Bosworth is the father of the child alleged to have been abducted. Returning to his temporary home in East Woodstock Friday with his young son. Bosworth on Saturday eluded New London authorities who came here for the purpose of serving a warrant upon him charging him with breach of peace.

Attorney Irving H. Miron of this city, retained by Bosworth in a supreme court divorce action now pending, answered for his client promising the officers that both he and Bosworth would appear Monday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock in town court in Waterford to answer the charges filed against him.

In commenting on the case today Attorney Miron said that Bosworth would not be arraigned on charges of kidnaping or abduction such as were mentioned in newspaper accounts of the episode in which Bosworth and his child figured.

In December Mrs. Daisy P. Bosworth, estranged wife of the Woodstock man brought a suit for divorce against her husband. In her writ she charged unfaithfulness on the part of Bosworth and sought a divorce, alimony and custody of their five year old son, Robert. Judge Edward M. Yeomans in superior court in this city denied the petition of Mrs. Bosworth, who later took an appeal to the supreme court of errors.

After the Putnam hearing Mrs. Bosworth with her son went to Waterford to await the reopening of the case before the supreme court. Since custody of Robert Bosworth was not awarded by a court order to his mother, Bosworth it is believed felt he was exercising a legal right in taking his child. Going to Waterford Friday he awaited the opportune moment and carried out his plans.

When questioned today Attorney Miron said that Bosworth would not face charges of abduction or kidnaping. "That's none of the public's business," the attorney replied in answer to a question concerning the whereabouts of Bosworth and his son.

Bosworth is fighting his wife's action for divorce, and is himself making an effort to secure legal custody of his son. Attorney Miron said last week that the case will soon be heard before the high state judicial body.

The condition of Luther M. Keith of this city, who is a patient at the Day Kimball hospital was reported today as considerably improved. Mr. Keith is under observation at the hospital.

Miss Dorothy Keefe of New London and Edward Keefe of New Haven passed the week end at the home of their parents Mr. and Mrs. M. R. Keefe of Ring street.

A special meeting of the voters of the city will be held Monday morning at the municipal building on Church street. Appropriations made a fortnight ago at a meeting of the common council to defray current expenses of the government will be approved. As far as could be learned today no other matter of interest will come before this session. Because of the illness of Mayor Charles A. Richard, it is expected that Alderman-at-Large Warren S. Ames, acting mayor, will be presiding officer at the meeting.

There will be a number of Putnam friends present tomorrow morning at St. James Church in Danielson when the wedding of Henry M. Mayo and Miss Doris Monahan takes place. Mr. Mayo is an officer of the state police department and is attached to the Danielson barracks. Being of a genial and affable disposition. Officer Mayo is host to a wide circle of friends in this section of the county where his patrol takes him. Miss Monahan is a popular member of the younger set in Danielson and is well known in this city.

CITY TREES

There were the days when trees failed to get any attention except when they died, blew over, broke off or had to be trimmed to protect passing vehicles. They were appreciated, but they were left to take care of themselves. The result is that many of the landmarks of other days have disappeared because of lack of attention at the right time. They were neglected and because of that neglect they had to be removed.

Appreciation of good shade trees is more generally displayed in cities than it used to be. Provisions are made not only for the planting of a certain number each year in addition to the replacements, but they are given the care that protects them against pests and disease. They are regarded as a community asset and treated accordingly. Many a noble tree has been saved through well-directed efforts, residential streets saved the loss that would have accompanied the removal and the expense has been no greater than cutting them down and setting out new ones.

It is in recognition of the desirability of such a policy that a special committee named by the Providence city government has recommended that provision be made for the proper care of the trees growing along the streets of that city and the planting of trees on the streets which are without them.

Here we find another city has been added to the list of those attaching due importance to the trees. If the recommendations are followed Providence can expect that its trees in the future will be healthier and more numerous.

There isn't any city that can afford to overlook the importance of shaded streets. There is a value attached to it which is reflected in the appearance of property and the avenues of a city. And good appearance adds to the worth and interest. The city that is giving proper care to its trees and setting out new ones each year is making provisions for the future that will pay good dividends. It means an attractive community for those living there and one that gains the admiration of visitors. Every city should demand trees and more trees, and having obtained them they should not be neglected.

CONFERENCE RESULTS

When our delegates were setting out for the London conference we were told that there should be no expectation of quick results, that there were many complications and that a long session could be expected.

Perhaps that was for the purpose of restraining those like Senator McKellar of Tennessee, who is already clamoring for the recall of the delegates. The conference has been underway but a few weeks, one of which was a recess, and the senator from Tennessee is ready to throw his hands up and quit. It would seem that he was easily discouraged. Possibly he thought it was a conference of rapid fire salesmen where everything could be fixed up over night. Evidently he considered that the conference could deal with that important international question of naval limitation and reduction more quickly than the United States senate could dispose of the question of tariff revision. In view of the obstructive tactics which he has helped to play in connection with the enactment of legislation in the senate, he ought to be more considerate of an international gathering.

Senator McKellar knew before the conference opened that there were various points on which a disagreement could be expected. He knew that the several nations held varying views regarding certain steps which had been contemplated. While there had been discussions between the United States and Great Britain, they did not in any way accomplish an agreement and they most certainly did not bind the other nations.

Such a working understanding as had been brought about by the preliminary exchange of views with Great Britain served to indicate the desired goal. It helped to bring forth the naval demands of the other countries, and it would have been a most surprising result had it been possible to reconcile the differences in a session that has been underway a little more than a month.

There is no reason to believe that the delegates of this country are going to be called home without making every last desperate effort to secure a treaty. Neither are they going to quit without exhausting every possible effort to reach a compromise. Regardless of the senator's advice, there'll be no kicking over the traces.

PUTTING A PRESIDENT ASIDE

From all indications the bloodless revolution in the Dominican republic has accomplished its purpose and done it in such a manner as to avoid disaster to the country and to prevent a refusal of recognition by the United States.

It is not the practice of Uncle Sam to give recognition to a government which has taken control by other than constitutional methods. That would prevail in regard to the Dominican republic as well as others, but it would appear, from the part that has been played by the American minister, that it has been anticipated and plans to meet the situation made accordingly.

The desire of the revolutionists in the island republic appears to have been to make sure that President Vasquez did not so handle the situation that he would be reelected for another term. He had been able two years ago to get an extension of his four-year term, contrary to the original constitutional provisions. Fears were entertained that he would repeat his tactics. Evidently he could not give assurances enough that there would be nothing of the kind, and steps were taken to forestall any schemes.

These steps appear to have been successful, for conferences have resulted in the revolutionists getting control and forcing the president to present his resignation on the ground of illness and at the same time making him appoint, as the secretary of the interior, Dr. Urena, a leader in the revolution, who takes the office of president under the constitution of the republic in case of a vacancy. He is the second choice in case there is no president, but the vice-president of the republic had previously resigned so that nothing stood in his way to head the government till election.

President Vasquez will leave the country, the election in May will be conducted without influence on his part and it is certain that there will be no chance for him to continue as president. The solution is far preferable to a bloody contest, but it is unfortunate that Vasquez did not read the correct temper of the country sufficiently in advance to give positive assurance that he would quit at the end of his term and accept the choice of the people as his successor.

RURAL ROUTES AND ROADS

Evidently the postmaster general is convinced that more people ought to receive the benefit of rural free delivery or else the service that is now being rendered can be carried out by less carriers. This is a view that has been gathered from the statement by the postmaster general that there could be a reduction by at least 8,000 in the number of rural carriers.

This view is made possible by the fact that when rural routes were laid out they were served by carriers with horse-drawn vehicles while now the service is rendered by carriers with motor vehicles and those vehicles are able to cover twice the territory that a horse could. This would make possible the stringing out of the 25-mile route to 50 miles or the covering of two 25-mile routes by the driver with an auto.

That change has not been put into effect and there is no assurance that it will be. The matter of covering 50 miles does not offer a serious obstacle to the motor vehicle but there's a question whether the carriers would be interested in the proposition under such requirements and it is quite apparent that while 50 miles a day is nothing for an auto the task might easily be a difficult one during the heavy snows of winter or the ungovernable mud of spring.

While parts of a rural route may involve the improved roads, there are many miles which follow the country roads, those for which improvement has been sought but not obtained. If those roads were given the attention they should receive, the plight of those using them, including the rural carriers, would be greatly relieved. So far as the modern highway is concerned and the clearing provided during the winter, the carriers have no cause for complaint. But when it comes to the springy, neglected country routes one might expect a plea for shortening the routes instead of a suggestion that they be lengthened.

FIGHTING DOPE

The country has just passed through the observance of Narcotic Educational week, the purpose of which is fully set forth in the name.

It is to be sincerely hoped that some advantage was gained through the efforts that were put forward to reveal narcotic conditions, for by the spreading of such information it is possible to arouse greater support for the better control of habit-forming drugs. It is through education that many problems are solved and it is reasonable to suppose that help can be contributed to this cause through such a channel.

When it is shown that half of the prisoners in turpitude cases in New York city are drug addicts and when it is revealed that books of a "dope ring" in Chicago showed 18,000 addicts among the customers, involving yearly payments of $39,000,000, it must be apparent how seriously narcotics figure in criminal activity. They not only figure in the cases of those who are acquainted with its effect, but they are a menace to the youth of the country, figures showing that a large percent of the boys and girls arriving in the underworld went down along the "drug road.".

The problem is not one for this country to wrestle with alone. It is serious enough here, but it has long since been recognized that the successful fight against dope can only be made when the nations of the world unite in their opposition and the countries which produce it restrict their output to that which is required for medicinal and scientific purposes. The fight against dope is not a new one, but for the protection of humanity and to save it from demoralization it deserves and should get every possible help. A little study will quickly disclose that.

With a new revolution threatened in China, it must have stopped raining over there.

No one is likely to claim that Connecticut is anxious for a consolidation of the railroads of New England.

The new government in the Dominican republic has been reminded that Uncle Sam recognizes only a constitutional government, and acted accordingly.

AN IMP WITH A PLAN

"I know it, dear, you must write!" Ann said it with the seriousness of an imp with a plan. "It's what you've wanted to do all your life, what you're intended for, and now that we're married and have a home where you can be yourself and concentrate, it's only fulfilling destiny."

Ann was wrapped in an earnestness that somehow belied the twinkle in her round brown eyes.

"Yes, but Ann—"

"Hush, darling, I know what you're going to say. You can't write because there's too much noise, you don't have the time, I always forget and talk, and—" Ann threw her arms wide to indicate all the other bars to Dick's literary fulfillment. "But you just wait and see what a help I'm going to be." And she presented her mouth for a kiss, gave his right ear a fond tweak and a wink that he did not see.

"Oh, gee, Ann, to be able to write! You don't understand what it will mean to me." Ann covered the corners of her mouth like an imp with a plan that was begining to work, while Dick's young eyes saw distant Odysseys. "To sit down at one's desk at 8 o'clock in the morning with a bunch of sharpened pencils and a stack of blank paper and rise eight hours later with one's thoughts all written down. Thought made tangible, that's what it is, Ann. That's what real writing is!

"I can hardly wait to begin. Just think, Ann," was she smiling? Oh, but no, "ever since I was a lad"—Dick was a lad at such moments, other times he was content to be a kid—"ever since I was a lad I have looked forward to the day when I could bend all my energy toward creating literature, and now this vacation the time has come. Nothing to do but write eight or ten hours a day for two weeks!"

"Dear, it will be wonderful," she said.

The next morning Ann pulled the pillow from under Dick's head an hour earlier than usual. "Remember your schedule—up early, a cold shower," Ann told it off on her fingers "and a light breakfast. Then write until 1, lunch and write until dinner."

Two hours later Dick was completing the most fastidious dressing he had ever done.

"You know, Ann, one can't be thrown together and expect to do careful work."

"Why, no of course not, dear. But don't you think you could start writing now?"

"You bet! Just as soon as I sharpen some pencils. Don't think I'm not eager to begin. Why, I can hardly wait to get down to that desk."

When she told him that she had sharpened a stack of pencils and even laid but paper, for some reason that made the corners of Ann's mouth twitch, he looked disappointed.

Finally he was in the library and the door closed behind him. At 10 he came out to get some cake and milk. At 11 he wanted to see how near lunchtime it was. At 12.30 Ann looked through the keyhole and saw a horrible sight—saw him playing solitaire.

For the first time a chuckle escaped the brown-eyed imp whose plan was working beyond belief.

At luncheon the conversation ran like this:

"How are you getting along, honey?"

"Oh, all right."

"I planned a simple luncheon so you could get right back," she smiled, oh, so understandingly, and winked at the black-striped cat.

"I don't think I'll write this afternoon," with a quick look at his wife. "My indigestion, you now. I told you this morning I had it."

Then Ann said maliciously, "Why, Dick, that's peculiar. You never had it before. Anyway, you mustn't let that stop you. Think of all the stories that are waiting to be written by you."

At 2 o'clock Ann took to the keyhole again. He was reading a magazine. At 3 she tiptoed back and found him quietly, concentratedly, studiously bent over his desk—sound asleep!

Shortly afterward she was out in the yard practicing putting, when quite startingly her husband's long legs protruded from the library window and were hastily followed by the rest of him. "Ann," he said with a grin; "this is the happiest moment of my life. I have given up writing forever!" His right arm swung forward. "Never again will I take a pencil in my hand, never, never, never! Henceforth, until they pension me off, I shall devote myself to selling insurance."

"Oh, Dick, it worked!" And a second chuckle escaped the imp with round brown eyes and a plan that was complete.—Exchange.

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, March 2—The favorite in and outdoor sport of Washington is, of course, politics. And when there comes an off-season affair like that special election in the second Massachusetts district which puts William J. Granfield, a wet democrat, into the house seat vacated by the death of Kirk Kaynor, republican, Washington fairly revels in debate as to what caused the political upset. Look over house proceedings and you will find the result ascribed to prohibition, to unemployment, to the stay-at-home vote, to a snowfall, and even a question as to whether the absence in Florida of the most distinguished resident of the district, Calvin Coolidge, might not have been responsible.

House Humor

One thing that lightens up the wet and dry argument in the house is the humorous pokes members take at each other.

LaGuardia of New York, untiring loud speaker on the wet side, drew this advance picture of Mr. Granfield's reception when he arrives to take over his duties.

"I can see in my mind's eye," he said, "a committee of distinguished members here, headed by the dry gentleman from Texas (Mr. Garner), the democratic floor leader, and the distinguished dry leader from Alabama (Mr. Bankhead), and the distinguished dry leader from Mississippi (Mr. Rankin) bringing the new member down to the well of the house to qualify; and after he has qualified, these dry members bringing him over here (to the republican side) to a committee consisting of the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. Schafer), and the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. Dyer) and Mr. LaGuardia of New York (all republicans), so we can initiate him into the mysteries of the wet group of this legislative body."

The house chuckled delightedly because, after all, that's about what would happen, prohibition cross-currents having made for otherwise unexplainable political alliances.

New Biography

The Granfield election served to give his democratic colleague from the seventh Massachusetts, William Connery, Jr., who had oth republican and democratic nominations to run on last time, a chance to get into the Congressional Record this account of his own political background:

"I was born a democrat and I expect to die a democrat. My father was a democrat. He was mayor of Lynn. He ran five times before being elected, being defeated each time in order to build up the democratic party in Lynn.

"Of course the republican nomination was given to me voluntarily and came through no seeking on my part."

YOUR HEALTH

Get Rid Of The Cashier

By D. E. Davenport, M. D., Washington, D. C.

(From Gorgas Memorial Institute)

Last year I made the statement that no matter what a person's ailments might be, in every single case his condition could be cured, or his life prolonged, or the suffering made easier, or some threatened disease or breakdown could be prevented. Two days later a man came to my office. He was quite crippled with rheumatism. It had affected his knees and his wrists, and his fingers were deformed. He said: "I heard your lecture last week so here I am. What can you do for me?" "The first thing we can do," I replied, "is to give you a very careful physical examination." I began with the top of his head, the hair, the eyes, the nose, and mouth. When I got to the mouth, I said: "Let us X-ray the teeth." He laughed and said, "I don't have any. These are false." "Well," I said, "let us X-ray the places where the teeth were." We found three broken-off roots where the gums had completely healed over and left focal infection in the healing-over process. The tonsils were infected, and I suggested that they be removed. He said, "That's it, you doctors always want to cut out something. What were they put there for if they have to come out?"

I have been asked this question many times. It used to be difficult for me to answer it, until I though of a little comparison. I said, "Suppose we have a bank, and every day the cashier slips out five or ten dollars and puts it into his pocket, and you come and tell me about the bank not being very safe. I say, 'What you want to do is to get rid of the cashier.' You would say, 'No, what was that cashier put there for?' The tonsils, the appendix, and the gall bladder were put into the body for a purpose, and as long as they are doing their work well, they should never be removed. But we are talking about taking out the bad ones. When a cashier's conduct is such that his work inhibits the growth or business of the bank, you are better off without him."

He agreed and let us remove the root fragments and take out the tonsils, and we gave him some treatment and advice concerning diet. In three weeks he came back and hit my desk so hard it jarred the ink well. He said, "See that hand. It doesn't bother me at all."

It does pay to have a periodic health examination. I think we could put this periodic health examination on the same basis that we do the examination of things in the business world. Think of the man who goes along in a gasoline truck or car inspecting bridges, culverts, ties, and rails of the railroad. It costs something to have that done, but the inspector can detect dangers in advance, and, if used in time, a few shovels of dirt or gravel, or an extra spike put in, will prevent a very serious accident. An annual health audit costs something, but in the end it saves you money and trouble and pain, and it prolongs life.

YOUR INCOME TAX

No. 25

Deductions for depreciation form an important item in the returns of many taxpayers, and are the subject of frequent inquiries. "Depreciation" is defined as "a reasonable allowance for the exhaustion, wear and tear of property used in the trade or business, including a reasonable allowance for obsolescence."

In claiming a deduction for depreciation, several fundamental principles must be observed. The deduction must be confined to property actually used in trade, business, profession, or vocation. In general, it applies to the taxpayer's capital assets—buildings, machinery, etc.—the cost of which can not be deducted as a business expense.

Depreciation may be claimed on all business property, which includes not only buildings and machinery of a permanent character, but automobiles, farm tractors, mine and mill equipment, office furniture, and books. A lawyer, doctor, or other professional man may not charge off as a current expense the cost of a library used wholly in his profession, this being a capital expenditure and the library a capital asset. But he may deduct an allowance for depreciation, based upon the useful life of the library.

Whitefoot Keeps a Secret

The secret you have guarded well
A careless tongue is apt to tell,
—Whitefoot the Wood Mouse.

Whitefoot the Wood Mouse had had a very comfortable winter. Yes, sir, he had had a very comfortable winter. He had had a secret all winter. That means of course, that he had managed to keep that secret. Several of his neighbors had tried to find it out, but they had tried in vain. Reddy Fox

"Hello, Whitefoot!" exclaimed Peter in great surprise was one of these. Old Man Coyote was another. Yowler the Bobcat was a third. You see, they wanted to know where Whitefoot lived on the chance that they might be able to dig him out.

Of course, Hooty the Owl was always on the watch for Whitefoot, but he didn't care much where Whitefoot lived. His only chance of catching Whitefoot was when Whitefoot was outside his home. Peter Rabbit was another who wondered where Whitefoot lived. But on Peter's part it was merely idle curiosity. Peter likes to know all about the affairs of his friends. He hadn't thought much about it until one afternoon just before dusk he discovered Whitefoot on the edge of the Green Forest.

"Hello, Whitefoot!" exclaimed Peter in great surprise. "What are you doing over here on the edge of the Green Forest?"

"Why shouldn't I be on the edge of the Green Forest?" demanded Whitefoot in his squeaky little voice.

"There is no reason why you shouldn't be here," replied Peter, "only it is such a long way from your home."

"Who says it is a long way from my home?" squeaked Whitefoot.

"Well, isnt it?" demanded Peter.

Whitefoot chuckled. It was a funny throaty little chuckle. "That is a question I don't have to answer," said he. "However, I'll tell you this much, Peter Rabbit. I'm not as far from my home as you are from yours."

Peter thought this over for a few minutes. "Well, I don't suppose you are," said he finally. "I'm much bigger than you; I've got longer legs, and I travel about more than you do. Just the same, it seems to me that 'way out here on the edge of the Green Forest is a long way from where you want to be. Where is your home, Whitefoot? Be a good fellow and tell me. I won't tell anybody."

Again Whitefoot chuckled that throaty chuckle. "No, Peter," said he, "you won't tell anybody. You won't tell anybody for the very good reason I won't tell. I'll tell you this much, however. I've got one of the best winter homes I've ever had and it is where nobody in all the Great World will ever think of looking for it. Never in my life have I felt so snug and comfortable and safe."

Now, of course, all this excited Peter's curiosity to a very great degree. Probably if Whitefoot hadn't told him what a wonderful home he had, Peter wouldn't have given the subject another thought. As it was, he thought about it a great deal. And the more he thought about, the more curious he became.

A HISTORY OF CONNECTICUT INDUSTRY

Released by Manufacturers Association of Connecticut

The Floyd Cranska Company, Moosup

"Sold to Floyd Cranska": With the stroke of the auctioneer's hammer a small mill property which for 48 years had struggled along under various ownerships, in 1880 became the charge of a young man of 30 whose energy and ability were to guide its fortunes through 40 prosperous years.

Under the name of Floyd Cranska the little stone mill, equipped with cotton spinning machinery, and depending for its motive power upon the sometimes failing waters of the Moosup river, began its career as a successful yarn mill.

Old machinery was replaced with new, and soon a small group of discriminating thread converters learned that the name Cranska stood for thread yarns of superior quality and reliability, and this fact was attested by the steady growth of the business through nearly half a century.

In 1899 a subsidiary company was organized in Worcester, Mass., to convert the yarn made in the Moosup mill into sewing thread and to distribute this thread to a great variety of manufacturing industries through selling agencies in the principal centers of shoe and clothing manufacturing in this country.

Both Worcester and Moosup businesses were incorporated in 1907. The original building, which by this time had acquired several additions, was now torn down and replaced by the brick and stone structures which form the nucleus of the present factory group.

The Connecticut corporation now has 225 employees for whom it maintains modern tenant houses. The mill stream, which once furnished all of the motive power of the mill is now chiefly used to light these homes, while an efficient steam power plant performs the work of operating the 22,000 spindle mills.

The present officers are: Lucius B. Cranska, president and treasurer; Thomas J. Seaton, vice president and secretary.

HAVE you, too, heard the Cannery racket—the little tin-clad "Sound" operas and jazz numbers, so genially welcomed here by the delicatessen set?

To some theatre interests this is a heart-warming clamor. It means economy for them, hence greater profits.

To persons of sound musical taste, it is ludicrous and impudent—an affront to the intelligence and taste of the theatre-going public. They see in the talkies no excuse for resort to Canned Music.

Right Idea!

This four year old athlete is the son of Mrs. H. F. Kraemer, 103 Tenth St., College Point, N. Y. She says: "Herman's wonderful condition shows my idea is right.

"Whenever he's the least cross or upset, or has a cold, I give him a little California Fig Syrup. It always brightens him up; regulates his stomach and bowels; gives him a hearty appetite. I have used it with Herman since he was a year old, and it has never failed to help promptly."

All children love the rich, fruity flavor of California Fig Syrup. A pure vegetable product, it doesn't gripe or sicken. It always acts gently but thoroughly to cleanse the system of billious, headachy, constipated children. Doctors say it tones and strengthens weak bowels. Try it with your child. See how bad breath, coated tongue or feverishness disappear!

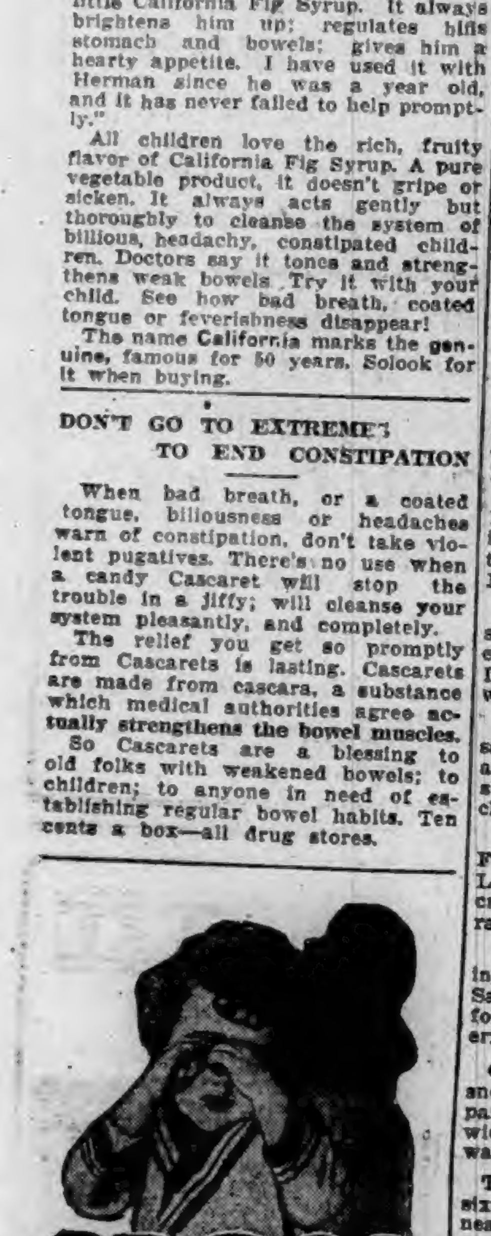
The name California marks the genuine, famous for 50 years. Solook for it when buying.

DON'T GO TO EXTREMES TO END CONSTIPATION

When bad breath, or a coated tongue, billousness or headaches warn of constipation, don't take violent pugatives. There's no use when a candy Cascaret will stop the trouble in a jiffy; will cleanse your system pleasantly, and completely.

The relief you get so promptly from Cascarets is lasting. Cascarets are made from cascara, a substance which medical authorities agree actually strengthens the bowel muscles.

So Cascarets are a blessing to old folks with weakened bowels; to children; to anyone in need of establishing regular bowel habits. Ten cents a box—all drug stores.



CROSS AND RESTLESS? MAYBE IT'S WORMS

If your little one is irritable and restless—there's a reason. Often it's worms. They are much more common than most mothers think.

Look also for the following symptoms: picking the nose, grinding the teeth, crying in sleep, offensive breath, loss of appetite or weight, nause or general restlessness. Any one of these signs may be your warning that worms are present.

Wise mothers take no chances with these dangerous and disgusting childhood pests. Even if worms are only suspected they give the child

A recreational period, under the leadership of Mrs. W. C. McKean, the director of the club, was enjoyed by all the girls. Refreshments were served. There was an unusually large attendance. The club meetings are to be continued during Lent on Friday nights.

SAYS LAW ENFORCEMENT BREAKS DOWN THROUGH APPEALED CASES

Where the Trouble Lies With Law Enforcement In Connecticut, was the subject of an interesting and instructive talk by Rev. Ralph H. White, of New Haven, at a meeting of the Sunday noon session of the Men's class at Trinity M. E. church. Rev. Mr. White, who is research secretary of the fact-finding committee for law enforcement in Connecticut, is completing a survey of the higher and lower Connecticut courts on the disposition of nine typical criminal offences, covering a period of three years. Basing his talk on the results of this survey, Dr. White said:

"Connecticut legislatures pass hundreds of laws but there is no information as to what is done with those laws after they are given to the police and the courts to enforce and interpret. In comparing one court with another, there is found an impossible inconsistency of interpretation that cannot be reconciled with either common sense or good government. The Connecticut statutes allow much discretion to the court, but as now exercised it goes far beyond making allowances for the circumstances under which the crime was committed.

It is very evident that judges and prosecuting attorneys are often governed by entirely different theories of law and sometimes rewrite the statutes of the state to conform to their own ideas of what they ought to be, or to local public opinion or to the advice of their political sponsors. Under these circumstances, an offender may be dismissed with a gesture in one court, who would have been sent to jail in the next town. It is inevitable when the public realizes that the judges and prosecutors may do as they please with the law, that juries will do the same and bring in verdicts contrary to the law and evidence. When there is no proper respect for the courts, disinterested witnesses will not testify for the state. Men will not serve on juries, if they have to face the ridicule of their friends. Contrary to the general notion, it is the prosecuting attorney who is chiefly responsible for enforcing the laws of the state.

"In a large city, of this state, a new prosecuting attorney was appointed, who had a different attitude toward the enforcement of law. Immediately the fines and penalties imposed by the court were increased four times. There was no change in the judge or in police activity. This illustrates how a prosecuting attorney can turn law enforcement on and off like a faucet.

"Enforcement of Connecticut law breaks down most of all in the courts that hear appealed cases from the city and town courts. Naturally, a city court judge wishes to have his sentence upheld on appeal, but some of these courts settle more than nine-tenths of their appealed cases over the bargain counter, offering the accused whatever reduced penalty is necessary to secure from him a plea of guilty. Although the right of trial by jury is seldom exercised, it is a formidable club for forcing a court to make concessions. If the attorneys for the defense should suddenly demand jury trials with all the trimmings for their clients, the administration of justice would simply stop, for our present court facilities could not take care of 10 per cent. of the cases. The only way to prevent unjustified appeals is to add something to the penalty of the lower court upon conviction, but this is almost never done. The man who now goes to jail nurses the grievance that he is there only because he is too poor to put up a bond, hire a lawyer, and change the jail sentence of the city court into lawyer's fees.

"In the trials of felonies the dockets of some of our superior courts are so crowded, and the prosecuting attorneys so heavily burdened, that it is simply impossible for them to adequately prepare and prosecute their cases. The opening of the court session is popularly termed as 'bargain day.'

"American criminoligists have usually ignored the chief function of law which are to punish the crime and prevent its repetition by others. They have created a state of confusion of the public mind. They have really increased crime by filling the minds of the judges with indecision and inhibitions.

"Where the administration of justice is old-fashioned and crime is not regarded as mental aberration, when punishment is prompt and penalties hurt, there is less than one-fourth of our crime. This is so in any civilized country in Europe or in Canada across the border.

"How can our courts receive proper respect when the law is flouted when they are organized? Most of the city charters provide that the judges shall be nominated by the judiciary committee of the legislature and that the judges shall, themselves, appoint the prosecuting attorneys and the officers of the court. These provisions are pushed aside.

"The local political organization makes out a slate on which the judges, prosecuting attorneys, and other court officers apear. The judge must agree to accept the whole slate before his name is presented. The judiciary committee then rubber stamps the nomination. A nomination based on merit alone and without the official support of the local political organization would have no chance at all. How can we expect a judge to adequately administer the law who has foresworn himself in taking his oath to administer his office according to the best of his ability, because his first act is to appoint a prosecuting attorney conspicuously unfit for the job, and over whom he dare not exercise his legal control?

"The wonder is that our courts are as good as they are, for it sometimes happens that men who enter the "Temples of Justice" through the sewer gate of politics, free themselves from their old associates and make model judges. In a very large city in Connecticut, several yeares ago, a professional criminal lawyer was appointed to the bench against the protest of its decent citizens. When he assumed the robes of office he bitterly disappointed those who put him there, by enforcing the laws with strictness and impartiality. The prosecuting attorney who he had to appoint was not so good and the judge, after an inadequate presentation of the state's case, would take the witnesses in hand himself, draw out the facts, and send his old clients to jail to the rage and chagrin of their lawyers and friends. It is needless to add that this judge did not have a ghost of a chance of a reappointment.

"Crime can be immediately reduced three-fourths by utilizing the commonly accepted methods of other countries. This can be done without doing any violence to American principles of law. It is idle to expect the legal profession as a whole to solve our difficulties and to introduce reforms which, while they might be a blessing to the people, would raise havoc with their fees and emoluments.

"What other profession or labor organization would we expect to be so altruistic? Lawyers go through the lip service of court ritual and feel that any outspoken criticism of our present procedure would make them unpopular with the profession and might jeopardize their clients when they took their cases to court. We cannot expect the legislature to take the initiative, when for a century it has been completely controlled by the legal profession.

"Connecticut can ill afford the heavy burden of unnecessary crime. We have no natural resources, and as a center for distribution are not well located. We have to import not only our raw material, but our labor. Our industries are sharply competitive. In the long run, the cost of crime and the inefficiency in production that results from its presence must either be taken out of the profits of industry or the pay envelope. When it comes out of the first, the industries move away, and if out of the latter, labor is ill paid and dissatisfied. The ineffective administration of our laws is something that concerns the welfare of every decent citizen."

Rev. Dr. White expects to appear before the special committee of the house of representatives at Washington, March 11th, to present the facts that the committee has secured relative to the problem of enforcing the prohibition law in this state over against the general problem of law enforcement. He will probably also present the facts of the effect of the 18th amendment upon the death rate, crime rates, alcoholic insanity, automobile deaths, high school attendance, etc.

ORGAN AT TRINITY M. E. CHURCH DEDICATED SUNDAY

The new organ at Trinity Methodist church was dedicated Sunday afternoon at a four o'clock vesper service with a large number of parishioners and friends participating. The service was very impressive and the musical numbers reflected the broadened powers of the new organ in a manner that was most gratifying. The dedicatory address was given by Rev. Joseph Cooper, the pastor, at the morning service, his subject being, "The Value of Music in Worship." John Richardson, secretary of the Norwich chamber of commerce, rendered the offertory solo.

The concerto was played by Miss Ruth Drexchler at the piano and William H. Huber at the console. This work by Pietro Yon is remarkable for the variety of forms in which the themes are presented and the quaint beauty that pervades the first two movements. Miss Drexchler showed a perfection of technique and interpretation that was most enjoyable, rending the pianissimo passages with delicacy and the final with great power, brilliant accuracy

The program was carried out as follows: Prelude, Evensong (Johnston); processional hymn; invocation, Scripture, Psalm 93; offertory solo, Fear Not, O Israel; (Buck) Mr. Richardson; service of dedication, The Prayer of Dedication, in unison; Concerto Gregorian, (Yon): Andante Mistico, Allegro; Andante; finale, Miss Ruth Drexchler at the piano; choir, Land of Hope and Glory, (Elgar); Fantasia, (Tours); benediction, recessional.

In his dedicatory address Rev. Mr. Cooper spoke in part as follows:

The use of musical instruments and of singing have very largely been used as aids to religious worship. Religion and the religious spirit finds an instrument for vital expression in songs and hymns.

The ancient Jewish people used a large number of instruments and a great deal of psalmody in their temple worship. The Saviour, Himself, used to sing hymns in the social hours which He spent with His disciples.

After the church took organic form and worship became systematized and formal the art of singing was cultivated as assistant to the act of worship. Music and singing interpret the real meaning of the doctrines of the church. Truth vocalized is far better understood by the art of music than by logical definition. If our creeds were sung instead of being said they would find a quicker entrance into human minds and would bring more understanding to human experience.

Music reveals and expresses the joyousness of the religion's spirit. Joy sings. Glad people are ready to sing or make melody in their hearts. Songs and laughter are fitted to each other. The joy of the Lord is our strength.

Music exacts faith in sublime emotion. Faith is hard to philosophy, but it is easy to sing. It can and does express itself in forms of art and life. We can sing it and live it when we cannot put it into logical formula. Singing cheers us in the days of dark discouragement. God gives us songs in the night. The church never can reach the heights of her faith only as that faith becomes articulate, and song is one of the finest melodies of such articulation. We should cultivate the art of singing for the inspiration and the uplift that always comes by the way of song.

NEW LONDON, March 2. — New London chapter of Ahepa, a fraternal society that extends to every state in the Union, held a jubilee celebration this afternoon in connection with installation. The chapter is No. 250 and is part of an organization of 30,000 members. The installing team was from Springfield chapter. MISSION SUNDAY PLEA MADE BY REV. FR. REILLY

The two curates of St. Patrick's parish have shown marvelous efficiency during the annual vacation of several weeks in the south of the rector, Rt. Rev. Msgr. M. H. May, in sick calls in individual homes and in the institutions, supervision of the school of upwards of 500 pupils, attending to the numberless charity and emergency calls, daily masses, also great numbers of confessions at the week end, so that hundreds of penitents go to the altar at the three early masses every Sunday for holy communion. This week they are pushing the drive in advance of Foreign Mission Sunday, which comes March 9. Speaking at the 9 o'clock mass Sunday, Rev. John J. Reilly said that while, if ever there was a time when the boasted prosperity was a myth it is now, nevertheless, there is money enough so that automobiles are running about the country, the radio is emitting static in nearly every home, theatres are crowded and beauty parlors ditto. All this indicates that the people have means, if only they get enlisted in the campaign for the spreading of the kingdom of Christ.

Father Reilly referred to the lavishness with which Americans showered comforts and luxuries upon the boys who went to the front, not forgetting them the minute their steamers drew out, but following them across the seas with socks and mitts and chocolates and cigarettes, mountains of comforts which roused the amazement of foreign countries. The boys proved themselves worthy of all this when the time came to fight for a principle. Now the missionaries from Maryknoll and other seminaries go out to prove that the redemption of Christ was universal, to do their part that the blood of Christ may not have been shed in vain. Quietly, without ostentation, the church of Christ is carrying on His work in foreign lands; and it is only occasionally, as in the recent instance of the pope's pronouncement in the soviet matter—now the topic from pulpits of all denominations throughout the country—that the common sense and correct thinking broadcast from the Vatican City indicates that the church is always and ever carrying on, in its duplication of Christ's thirst for souls. It should be the part of Catholics now to stand back of their missionaries as in war time they stood back of the boys who went across.

Father Reilly read Bishop Nilan's circular letter setting forth the aims of the Catholic Mission Aid society, inaugurated last year to consolidate a number of mission movements into a single organization enrolling millions, in which ordinary members donate $1 annually, special members $6 a year, while perpetual membership is secured through alms of $40. The enrollment will be made next Sunday.

Father Reilly assisted Rev. Myles P Galvin in giving holy communion. As March is devoted to copying the virtues of St. Joseph, foster-father of the Saviour, the junior choir sang a special hymn to St. Joseph, among the hymns so well given by these young singers, directed by the organist, Henry J. LaFontaine.

PARTIES ARE BENEFICIAL, SAYS RABBI GORDON

"The average man has a yearning for uniformity and adopts a hostile attitude toward sects and parties within a movement towards controversy and diversity of opinion in general," said Rabbi Theodore H. Gordon of the Jewish Theological seminary in his sermon at the Friday evening service of the Norwich Community synagogue. Feeling that this attitude is unsound, the rabbi attempted, in the light of historical facts, to demonstrate that parties are beneficial rather than detrimental. "Parties are groups that are working for the realization of an ideal or principle," he declared.

"Such parties are beneficial," said the rabbi, "and tend to work for the development of a group rather than a disintergration of it." The rabbi noted three examples—the controversies between the Pharisees and the Sadducees in the days of the second temple; between the Rabbinism and Karaism in the 8th century in Babylon and between emotional Chassidism and Rigorous Rabbinism.

"In all these cases Jewry has been the gainer from these controversies," said the rabbi, "since the parties concerned were interested primarily in the conservation and development of Judaism." In religion we have a feeling, common to all groups, that the other groups are menaces to Judaism. In the Jewish nationalist movement the same situation exists. We have profited from the lessons of history and our attitude is still a very primitive one. We still feel that parties are a menace. It is not easy to tell at close range the harmful controversy from the beneficial controversy."

STORRS HENS GAIN IN EGG-LAYING CONTEST

In the 17th week of the Storrs laying contest, the birds came through with an increase over last week's production of 221 eggs. The total production for all pens for the week was 5,080 eggs or a yield of 72.6 per cent. Changeable weather during the week apparently did not affect egg production.

It looks as though the hens were settling down and an increased production for the whole contest no doubt will be noticed in the next several weeks.

No less than three pens were tied for first place for the week with a production of 64 eggs each. In this group there were two pens of Rhode Island Reds and one of White Leghorns. The latter is owned by Toivonen Leghorn Farm of Girard, Pa., and the Rhode Island Reds by Harold G. Colt of West Hartford, Conn., and George B. Treadwell of Spencer, Mass.

A pen of White Leghorns owned by Steelman Poultry Farms from Lansdale, Pa., a pen of Reds entered by Burdean Acres of Newton Center, Mass., and another pen of the same breed sponsored by Donald I. Goodenough of Torrington, Conn., all tied for second place with a lay of 63 eggs each. Two more pens of Reds; one owned by Globus Poultry Farm of Attleboro, Mass., and the other by Edward N. Larrabee of Peterboro, N. H., were tied for third honors with 62 eggs each.

Fourth place for the week went to a pen of White Leghorns backed by J. A. Hanson of Corvallis, Oregon. This pen laid 61 eggs for the week. Thus it can be seen that the Rhode Island Reds gave the other breeds a hot race during the week.

At the present time the only pen which seems to have a place cinched in the Rhode Island Red class is the one owned by Harold G. Colt of West Hartford, Conn., as there is only a difference of 14 eggs between the other four pens During the week Donald I Goodenough's pen from Torrington, Conn., has jumped into third running and yet there is only a difference of three eggs between his pen and the one owned by Homer R. Rowell; and five eggs between his and the one owned by F. S. Chapin of Longmeadow, Mass.

By the looks of the records of these pens we may expect very keen competition during the coming weeks.

Life Was a Misery

"Before I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I was weak and rundown, could not sleep and had troubles which come at my age (forty-three). Life was a misery. Nothing did me any good until I tried the Vegetable Compound. I am on my third bottle and I cannot recommend it too highly. I feel like a new person and I really think I would have been dead if I had not taken it. I think every lady ought to take it at the Change."—Mrs. Eunice M. Worthy, Route 4, Spartanburg, South Carolina.

SAILORS FOUND WITH WENCHES, ATTEMPT FLIGHT, IN NEW LONDON RAID

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Mar. 2—The black and tan resort at 119 Potter street, conducted by Marian Lewis, colored and which probably has been raided more times than any other of the numerous resorts of this character in the city, was visited late Saturday night and the proprietress was arrested on a charge of conducting a disorderly house. Pearl Ring, 19, colored, of Yonkers, N. Y., and Eva Jones, 31, colored, of New York, Harold Gawthorpe and Cecil E. Hughes, white and sailors, were arrested on a charge of frequenting. The Ring woman was in court Feb. 3 on a like charge and was ordered to leave the city. Gawthorpe has also been before the court on a charge of frequenting disorderly houses. All will be in court Monday. The police obtained information shortly before Saturday midnight that the two sailors had entered the house and a raiding squad, Sergeant John Courtney, Automobile Patrol Officers George Cockell and Clarence Martin and Patrolman Frank Philopena went to the house. As the officers entered Gawthorpe attempted to run from the house and Hughes endeavored to escape by climbing through a window. Both were nabbed and arrested, together with the three women.

NEW LONDON, Mar. 2—A thief conducted a raid on sleepers in one of the dormitories at the Y. M. C. A. during Saturday night for this morning four of the lodgers discovered that they had been relieved of either their money or their jewelry. The dormitory was occupied by 11 men and among them were Richard Stanley, U. S. N., Boston; James Darnorey and Carl Plimpton, soldiers at Fort Wright, Fishers Island and Louis Kumpf. When the four men awoke this morning and started to dress they discovered the thefts. GEORGE B. COUSENS HELD BY MAMARONECK POLICE

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, March 2.—George B. Cousens, formerly of New London, is under arrest at Mamaroneck, N. Y., charged with violation of the Mann act and being a fugitive from justice. The young man is wanted in Augusta, Me., on a charge of passing fraudulent checks. The arrest of Cousens was revealed in a communication received Saturday by the police department from Officer L. G. Lagner, of the Mamaroneck police department, who requested information as to whether Cousens was wanted by the New London police, or if he had a police court record here. Cousens has no police court record in New London, but he has been sought several times for departments of other cities. On Feb. 8, last, the New London police received a request from the police of Augusta to arrest Cousens on the charge of issuing fraudulent checks. Cousens has not resided in New London for 12 or 15 years and prior to his departure from the city he was employed as a soda water dispenser.

Patrolman Braxton Hill today reported a number of dilapidated automobiles stored in a public highway, the property of Max Ragovin, stored in Mather court.

PECULIAR RENT SYSTEM FOR THIS GAS STATION

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, March 2.—The estate of Henry D. Barrows has leased premises on the westerly side of Williams street, near Main, to the Atlantic Refining company, Philadelphia, for a gasoline filling station. The term of the lease is for one year from Oct. 1, 1929, and the rental is a most unusual arrangement, for it provides for the estate to be compensated on a basis of the amount of gasoline sold. The instrument provides that the estate shall receive payment as rent at the rate of one cent a gallon, provided that the amount of gasoline distributed is not less than 5,000 gallons per month. In that event the lessees must pay the estate $50 monthly. In other words, the estate demands a minimum rental of $50 monthly and that in case the gasoline sold during that period is more than 5,000 gallons the rental will be based upon the quantity of fuel distributed. An option of the lease provides for the lessees renewing the lease for five years.

PEDRO'S WIFE OBJECTS TO CAVEMAN TACTICS

Andrew Pedro, city laborer, who was in the police court Friday charged with breach of the peace, upon complaint of his wife from whom he is estranged, will be there again Monday. Pedro was re-arrested Saturday after he had gone to his wife's home, 19 1-2 Mitchell court, and had attempted to force an entrance, also threatening to kill her because Mrs. Pedro refused to resume marriage relations with the man. Pedro's arraignment in court Friday was the result of his having beaten the woman Jan. 22. When his case was tried a continuance was granted until March 31. A short time after leaving the court room, Pedro went to Mitchell court and threatened his wife. Mrs. Pedro made complaint to the police, but her husband could not be found. Saturday, when he was known to be employed at the city piggery, Sergeant Patrick Murphy and Automobile Patrol Officer William Corcoran arrested him.

SAILOR IGNORES ADVICE—GETS INTO TROUBLE

Alex Toverski, sailor, apparently does not believe in taking the advice of patrolmen when he has been drinking and as a result of that obstinacy he will be tried in the police court Monday. Toverski was on Main street early Sunday morning and was advised to go to his boat by Patrolman Antonio Turello. Instead of taking the advice, Toverski went to the Coffee Pot, a Main street restaurant, where he created a disturbance. He was taken from the restaurant by Patrolman Louis Tooker, who ordered the sailor to go to his base. A short time later when Tooker returned to the restaurant, he found Toverski there and creating a second disturbance. Then the bluejacket was arrested.

MARINES SPOIL GOOD RECORD OF OVER SIX YEARS

There was but one case to claim the attention of the police court Saturday and it was unusual in the respect that the two men accused were marines, and not a member of this branch of the federal service has been presented in the New London police court for six years. John Yates and Alton Bryant, stationed at the submarine base, were charged with intoxication and breach of the peace. The latter count was nolled and on the former charge a fine of $5 and costs was imposed in each case. Yates and Bryant went to Ye London grill, State and Main streets, Friday night and were boisterous in their conduct. When Aaron Abend, 174 Jefferson avenue, employed there as a waiter, remonstrated with the marines for their conduct, Yates and Bryant handled the waiter so rough that his uniform was damaged. He made complaint to the police and Yates and Bryant were arrested by Automobile Patrol Offiver Augustus Ray and Patrolman Cornelius Moriarty.

J. B. LADD DROWNS HIMSELF AFTER LOVE DISAPPOINTMENT

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, March 2—The body of J. B. Ladd, 65, of 33 Tilley street, for several years employed as night watchman at Palmer Bros. mill, Washington street, was found floating in the Thames river Saturday afternoon. The authorities have rendered a verdict of drowning and intimate that Ladd ended his existence because of a love affair.

The body was found by the agent of the Fishers Island Navigation company and when sighted was south of the company's pier and between that and the wharf of the New England Steamship company. The police were notified and Automobile Patrol Officer Augustus Ray went to the pier and secured the body until it had been viewed by Medical Examiner Charles Kaufman. This afternoon Medical Examiner Kaufman conducted an autopsy after that official and Coroner Edward G. McKay, Norwich, had made an investigation to determine whether Ladd came to his death by foul play or suicide, for the dead man was seen as late as 9:30 o'clock Friday night. The autopsy resulted in it being determined that death resulted from suicide for the man's watch had stopped at 3:09. There was no water in the lungs, which would indicate that Ladd died of shock when his body struck the icy water and death occurred before water could enter his lungs.

While making Ladd's body fast to the pier, Frank Sistare, of Fishers Island, and who had been drinking, interfered with the work of Officer Ray. Sistare was arrested on a charge of interfering with an officer and will be in the police court Monday.

Ladd had been paying attention to Mrs. Minnie E. Lewis, 75, of 30 Nameaug avenue and earlier in the week the couple applied for a marriage license. Had the wedding occurred Wednesday as planned, it would have marked Mrs. Lewis' fourth marriage. Several days after the applying for the license, it is understood that for some reason the marriage intentions were dissolved. Ladd is known to have drawn over $1000 from a savings bank last Thursday and Friday he is known to have visited friends in Groton and at night attended a theatre. He left his companions on Bank street, near Shipyard street, at 9:30 and from that time Ladd's whereabouts are not known to the authorities. It is believed he was despondent over the love-affair and went to Shaw's cove bridge during the early morning hours, jumping into the cove or the Thames river.

The money Ladd drew from the bank was not found and what has become of it is not known. Ladd has a son in the middle west and the latter has been notified of his father's death. The son, it is expected, will arrive in New London some time Monday. In the meantime a search will be made to determine, if possible, what became of the money.

SPEED LAUNCH MADAME X IS BROUGHT INTO PORT

The speed launch Madame X, said to be owned by Charles Travers, lone survivor of the Black Duck, Dec. 29th, when the other three members of the crew were mowed down and killed by machine gun fire of a United States Coast Guard patrol boat, off Narragansett Pier, was brought into port by the Coast Guard early Saturday morning. The boat was seized when found moored at a pier in Newport harbor. No one was on the Madame X, neither was liquor found aboard the launch. However, the coast guard officials declare that the boat, long known as a rum-runner and having a speed of 19 knots an hour, which is much speedier than any of the patrol boats, was sighted off Newport several nights ago, running without lights. She was given a signal to stop, but instead of doing as commanded, the crew escaped, for the boat speeded away, easily out-distancing the patrol boat. When a search of ports along the waterfront of the Rhode Island coast was made and the Madame X was found, she was taken charge of and brought to the state pier.

TAX RATE MAY BE 23 MILLS OR EVEN ABOVE THAT FIGURE

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, March 2. — The board of relief concluded its duties Saturday and filed its abstract for record at the office of the city clerk. It is now estimated that the city's tax rate for the current year will be several mills in excess of that predicted. It was stated by city officials that the rate would not exceed 20 mills, but the rate is sure to be in excess of 23 mills and it would not be surprising if the rate would be fixed at between 24 and 25 mills. In view of the fact that the assessors caused a wholesale increase in valuation of property throughout the city the tax bills, when rendered, of property owners will be the largest in the history of the city and coming at this time when many tenements are vacant and many stores unoccupied, there will be general howl made, but with nothing for the property owner to do except pay the bill, unless the grievance is taken to court. This latter action, it is said by some property owners will be done.

The original list amounted to $60,059,004. The board of relief ordered this amount increased to $60,072,798, but after more than 600 remonstrants had appeared before the board, deductions were made in the sum of $1,183,843, bringing the grand list down to $58,888,955, and on this latter amount the tax rate will be determined. A meeting of the budget committee of the city council will be held next Wednesday night and it is known that it will be a stormy session, for already property owners have signified their intention of going before the committee to further voice their grievances over the acts of the assessors and the board of relief.

Antone Roderick, 9 Cliff street, Stonington, was arrested this afternoon by Patrolman Carlos Stone charged with violation of the traffic laws in passing an automatic danger signal on Main street, corner of Crystal avenue. He will be in court Monday.

The New London police were notified tonight of the recovery at St. Petersburg, Fla., of a Ford car, registered in this city. The car carries Connecticut registration, N—8250. Inquiry of the state motor vehicle departed gave the owner of the auto as Donald MacDiarmid, 119 Squire street. McDiarmid's name does not appear in the city directory, neither is there any such house number.

NEW LONDON TEAM DEFEATS WESTERLY BRIDGE SHARPS

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WESTERLY, R. I., March 2.—The New London bridge and whist team of I. B. Bailey and E. G. Jayne emerged victors Saturday night after seven rubbers of bridge in the sixth and final day of play in the fourth annual open elimination bridge whist tournament held under the auspices and in the clubrooms of the Westerly Square and Compass club. The tournament began last Monday with 128 players and 32 tables in play being cut down one-half each night as the play progressed. During the week there have been large galleries to watch the players and Saturday night some 75 or more fans gathered around the one table in play in the center of the card room.

The New London players held the lead from the first over their Westerly opponents, E. M. Tillinghast and Robert P. Mitchell. At the end of the third rubber, however, Robert P. Mitchell made a little slam and then only 99 points separated the teams.

At the conclusion of the evening's play the Square club vice president and manager of this year's tournament, Charles M. Lamb, presented Messrs. Bailey and Jayne the first prize, two Chatham rockers, with the statement that one had to know how to play bridge successfully, also had to have the high cards to win and oft times as they sat in the chairs they could think of the narrow escapes that had been theirs from winning during the tournament. Second prizes of six decks of gold-edged playing cards and scores were awarded the hunners-up, Tillinghast and Mitchell.

The play by rubbers:

New London—Bailey and Jayne: 467, 530, 132, 582, 606, 628, 196. Total 3,131.

Westerly—Tillinghast and Mitchell: 125, 297, 506, 87, 368, 131, 450. Total 2,066. Margin 1065.

STONINGTON

The increase in the grand list of the town due to the work of the re-valuation committee has made the town meeting to be held this (Monday) evening of interest to taxpayers' and tenants. The general opinion is that 20 mills should be the tax rate, while some think the rate should be made high enough to allow the payment of a good sum on the town debt. The fishing boat, "Little Jennie," went on the ledge at Turner's reef Thursday evening. At high tide a coast guard boat pulled her off, little damage resulting. This is the second fishing boat from the village that has been on this reef recently. This is a very bad reef and a petition has been signed by a number of fishermen recently to be sent in to the government to put a gas and whistling buoy there.

BACHELOR'S TRAGIC LOVE BRINGS 'DOT' FOR MODERN LOUISIANA GIRLS

His own romance blighted, Julien Poydras (sketch) left a perpetual dowry fund for girls in West Baton Rouge parish, Louisiana, 106 years ago. Two modern brides who shared in the fund this year are Mrs. Gabriel Levy (standing) and Mrs. Robert Kidd.

BATON ROUGE, La., March 2—(AP)—The blasted romance of a bachelor who died 106 years ago has made marriage a profitable undertaking in West Baton Rouge parish.

Thirteen young women in the past year brought their husbands dowries from interest on the money he left to make sure that no budding romance be blighted by financial difficulties. The fund now amounts to $36,000 and yields about $2,400 a year.

This bachelor friend of romance was Julian Poydras—peddler who became an aristocrat, and befriender of the man who became King Phillippe of France.

He died a disappointed man because of a tragic love affair, tradition has it, despite his five vast plantations, his 500 slaves, huge sugar houses, great warehouses and mercantile interests.

While still a peddler with a pack on his back he loved a Creole girl of the parish. Whether she refused to wed without a proper dowry or died before Poydras could accumulate enough for two, history does not record. He never married.

But he remembered the Creole beauties of the parish he loved so well and his perpetual dowry fund has benefited scores of brides.

Any girl who has lived in the parish five years may apply for a dowry. Shares vary with the number of applicants. Because of this prospective brides have been known to postpone weddings for a year to obtain a larger share.

Once the entire $2,500 went to one girl, the only applicant. The bridegroom played in luck for she was his fifth wife and all her predecessors had participated in the fund.

Everyone in Louisiana knows the name of Poydras, one of the glamorous figures of old Creole days. Born in Uantes, Brittany, about 1740, he participated in the Louisiana revolution against Spanish rule in 1768 and later became a small shipper and then a merchant prince and philanthropist.

He grub-staked Louis Phillippe, say historians, when the future king came to Louisiana as a penniless refuge.

Where Shall Waistlines Go? Paris Would Like To Know!

PARIS, March 2—(AP)—Wavering waistlines are the big problem here of spring styles for women who have made up their minds how long they want to wear their skirts.

Dressmakers here show a variety of waistlines in their spring and summer collections. Hardly a noted designer insists upon one type and forsakes all others.

The nearly normal beltline, hovering one or two inches below the normal waistline is the average. Placement depends upon the proportion of the woman, the length of her legs and torso and her general build.

Women who wish to wear short skirts with new styles will place waistlines as high as possible to increase the length of their skirts.

Pulled in waistlines are reserved for skirts and blouses or sport clothes for girls with slender figures. Belts should never be pulled in uncomfortably or unnaturally.

For the ordinary costume, day or evening, the natural proportions of the figure should be one's guide. If corsets must be resorted to they should not be laced into an hour-glass waist under any circumstances, according to Paris.

Hips should be as restricted and slender as possible. Placement of waistlines naturally depends on size and proportion of the hips.

Too narrow shoulder effects make the waist and hips look larger and couturiers generally employ rudimentary cape-sleeve effects, and small shoulder capes to balance up proportions.

SILK-COVERED BEADS MATCH THE DRESS

PARIS, March 2—(AP)—Jewelry matches the costume to the extent of being made from the same printed crepe de chine at some Paris dress houses.

Graduated beads, the largest the size of a marble, are covered with silk print.

Sometimes silk covered beads are combined with plain colored composition rondelles and strung on thick silk braid.

OLD-STYLE PINKING FINISHES HEMLINES

PARIS, March 2—(AP)—Old-fashioned pinking grandmother's way of finishing an edge by cutting it into minute points or scallops, is a new and favored way of finishing the hemline of printed silk spring dresses.

Collars, capes and necklines are also pinked and pinked collars and cuffs of white pique are prominent features of morning dresses of tweed and wool crepe.

BRIGHT COLORED HOSE SMART FOR SPORTS WEAR

PARIS, March 2—(AP)—Bright colored silk stockings with stripes and small paterns of open weave are shown as chic sports apparel by a specialist in outdoor raiment.

Oversize Hankies

PALM BEACH, Fla., March 2—(AP)—Linen sport handkerchiefs, gaily printed and as large as men's, are popular with sports ensembles at Palm Beach.

OLD-STYLE SILK REPS REAPPEAR FOR EVENING

PARIS, March 2—(AP)—Corded silk reps of changeable colorings is a new old-fashion revived by a dress house which has made ball gowns for three generations.

Ruby red and fuchsia purple are developed with matching jewelry and wraps for the modern grande toillete of reps.

The dresses are made with ground length skirts moulded to the hips and then flared in wide unpressed pleats.

PARIS 'GOES PINK' IN SPRING FASHIONS

PARIS, March 2—(AP)—Pink is the new-comer among spring shades sponsored by fashion authorities.

Paris headlines pale shades like wild rose, rose opaline and lingerie pink for spectator sport costumes, indoor dresses and evening ensembles.

Even footwear and gloves have "gone pink," and a leading couturier shows pink costume jewelry with evening dresses of identical shade.

Day and street ensembles have touches of pink on navy blue and black. Tailored suits with pink silk, or handkerchief linen blouses and coats lined with pink to match blouses of two-piece costumes, are distinctly new.

All rose-colored evening ensembles are seen at leading dress houses, varying from ashes of roses to pale shell pink, the latter usually in chiffon or lace.

Bright shades of red for evening, and pale cream and gray tints for indoor afternoon and evening ensembles are wisely shown. Violet blue and purple shades are good for evening.

White is supreme for sportswear, and ranks next to black in importance for evening.

Pastel shades should be off-tints which look sunfaded. They are smatrest in violet blue, pale turquoise, yellow, almond green and above all, pink.

Navy blue and black are equally smart for street and afternoon ensembles. Some beige is shown but not so much as last spring.

Tweed ensembles and travel clothes stress black and white mixtures, beige and brown, blue and white and red and white. Spring tweeds have less white than those of winter, and are more solid in texture.

Jersey and jersey-like materials which simulate tweeds are multi-colored and frequently horizontally striped.

VAGUE CLORS REGAIN BEACH POPULARITY

PALM BEACH, Fla., March 2—(AP)—After being neglected for years in favor of vivid hues, the vague in colors is in vogue at Palm Beach. Angel blue, pastel pink and pale lavender are prominent.

Coral is another tint gaining popularity, and flowered chiffon also is favored. One society matron was noted wearing a distinctive frock of this material in yellow and black on a background of green.

RURAL PUPILS TO SING IN MASS CHOIR AT FAIR

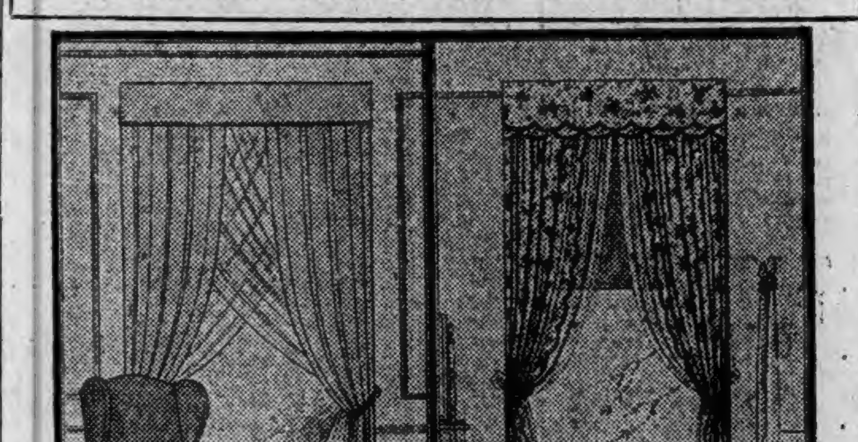
Every rural school child in grades four to eight is eligible to try out for the choir. He must pass tests in music and rhythm.

C. A. Fullerton, head of the music department of Iowa State Teachers' college, will direct the choir.

Well-Dressed Windows Add That Smart Touch



Correct curtains help to "make" a room.

By Elsie Drew Kennedy.

Have you ever considered the importance of your windows?

Whether you live in a small city apartment or in a large country house, your windows indicate to the world what you are. By your windows, you are either a hospitable woman of good taste and cheerful disposition, or you are a careless soul unwilling to learn how to use the best asset of your home. Interior decorators all admit that windows are real assets. Whether you go in for period or modern furnishings, your windows make or mar your rooms.

Consider what your windows can do for you. They can present a lovely picture in themselves, and if possible complement the picture they present—whether it be the branch of a tree, a bit of garden, neighboring chimney pots, or towering skyline. They also shall admit all the light and air possible.

A correct glass curtain is the first essential. Here the modern looms offer a big variety. Favored by decorators are the new celanese voiles, trifling in cost but luxurious in effect. Most often used in the larger cities is a golden yellow celanese voile that brings the illusion of sunlight on the darkest days.

The graceful manner in which a celanese glass curtain may be draped is shown on the left in the illustration. Hung criss-cross, it is formal enough in character for the formal room it decorates. The illustration to the right shows a sheer net glass curtain, a fine white cotton fabric, always good, and in harmony with the simple character of this early American bedroom.

Overdrapes in modern homes must be made very long to lift the ceiling. In the illustration at the left, rayon taffeta is used in the theme color of the room. The formal character of this interior is sealed in the tailored valance and long folds of the side drapes.

Rayon taffeta is one of the new synthetic fabrics which cost so little, yet achieve a quality in color and texture comparable to the finest fabrics.

In the illustration to the right, drapes of cretonne are used in gay flower print, a decorative motif taken from rare old Jacobgean cloths and now available in this inexpensive cotton fabric. A sprightly informal character is given the room in the scalloped edge of the drapes and the double valance, double to allow more scalloping.

WOMAN IN LIFE AND IN THE KITCHEN

SUGGESTIONS FOR THE HOUSEWIFE

If a ham is kept covered when frying it will not be dry and hard

A cup of cold-boiled rice added to griddle cakes makes them light.

Potatoes, beets, squash and turnips can all be baked in their skins.

A piece of orange rind kept in the canister gives a delicious flavor to tea.

If a buttonhook is mislaid shoes may be easily buttoned with a closed safety pin.

A few sound apples placed in the cake box will help keep the fruit cake moist.

When the juice of a pie has run out into the oven, sprinkle salt over the juice to prevent it from filling the oven with smoke and odor.

If you add a few drops of lemon juice to dates that you are running through the chopping machine, it will prevent clogging.

If cold baked potatoes are dipped in hot water a few minutes and then placed in the oven until thoroughly warmed, they will be as if freshly baked.

When a hot water bottle is not at hand, a good substitute is to take an electric light bulb with cord attached, turn on the current, and wrap a piece of flannel around it.

To remove wallpaper, brush it with warm alum water, using all the alum the water will dissolve. Apply with a white wash brush. Let it dry and the paper will come off very readily.

To fry fish clean and wipe it as dry as possible. Sprinkle it with salt, dip it in flour or egg and cracker crumbs and fry in deep fat until brown.

Brooms wear shorter on the side that is used most. If a worn broom is dipped in hot water and trimmed with shears it will be as good as new.

COLD SHORTENING

Chill your shortening before making pastry. It is one of the easiest ways to get your pastry flaky and lovely.

PEAS-BEANS

String beans and green peas make a pretty dish served together. They are especially nice with chops or roast, with which jelly should be served.

VEGETABLE DISH

A single vegetable served en casserole, with cheese sauce, parsley sauce or some other tasty sauce, makes an excellent luncheon, with a salad and stewed fruit.

BREAD PAPER

Save the wax paper that comes around bread. It makes a wonderful cleanser for the iron. Run your iron over a pad of this paper each day you use it and it will stay smooth as new.

FRUIT TARTLETS

When making pies save some of the crust and bake it over the backs of muffin tins. Fill these moulds with stewed fresh plums, apricots or other fruit, top with whipped cream and serve chilled.

HEALTH AND BEAUTY

A bucket of water standing in a room is a good disinfectant.

An excellent lotion for the hands is equal parts of spirits of camphor and glycerin. It has a softening and whitening effect.

Soft corns come between the toes. Absorbent cotton should be placed between the toes to prevent friction and keep the parts dry. Sprinkling sulphur between the toes is found helpful.

A good freckle remedy will be found in equal parts of lemon juice and glycerin. If the skin is too tender for the glycerin, run a fresh slice of lemon over it, allowing it to dry in.

TEA

Tea should be freshly prepared and not allowed to boil or stand too long on the stove, as the tannin extracted in this manner is harmful, causing constipation. When used to excess it promotes indigestion, not only because of the tannin, but because tea is usually drunk too hot.

ELBOWS

Whenever you use a pack of any kind for your face put just a little on your elbows and let it remain as long as the face pack does. You'll be glad you've done it the next time you wear a sleeveless dress, for elbows get so ugly without attention.

FOR DECORATION

Black oilcloth is popular for its shining decorative effect. Narrow valances of black oilcloth at the kitchen windows have their scalloped edges bound with an inexpensive and gayly colorful cretonne. Chair pads of black oilcloth may be bound with the same cretonne.

CORRECT SHOES

The shoes should be long enough to allow the foot to lie naturally without cramping the toes. The great joint should come where the sole shape has the most pronounced curve. Seams should never come over the great toe joint. The toe of the shoe must be wide enough to allow the toes of the foot to spread when walking.

NEW CASSEROLE

A delicious dish is cabbage and tomatoes, served en casserole. Shred the cabbage and then alternate lining a baking dish with slices of raw tomatoes and shredded raw cabbage. Put bread crumb layers between and on top. Cover with a meat sauce, a cheese sauce or just a very thick white sauce. Bake from 30 to 45 minutes, slowly.

FUR COAT

Never dry a fur coat which has been worn in a rainstorm, near a register. Intense heat injures the skin. First remove the moisture with a dry cloth, then hang the coat in a cool place where it will dry.

DICTATES OF FASHION

Gray is also effectively combined with lemon yellow.

Dotted alpaca has come to light as the spring mode.

Suits are belted at the waistline, a belt often being added.

Such trimmings as are used on spring hats are usually placed at the back.

Precious or imitation colored stones set in a background of brilliants are another novelty.

Stripes are becoming important in the spring mode—striped chiffons being especially cited.

An alliance between millinery and footwear is also again reported, hats and shoes are often both of linen.

White silks printed in black are said to be a leading print fashion; many of these are the so-called photographic types.

Bonbon or candy pink is one of the most approved pink tones and pink is highly approved for evening. Shell pink is another favorite.

Hosiery dyed to match the shoes with which it is worn is one of the new notes—delicate pastel stockings with matching slippers are illustrative of this idea.

Elaborate lace and lingerie effects, yokes that reach the waist, jabots, half sleeves and appointed bands of lace or embroidered batiste are being worn on silk afternoon frocks.

SHORT SLEEVES TO BE FASHION

Whether or not you like the short sleeve mode you will find yourself reluctantly admitting that it is one of the highlights of the early spring showings. The short sleeve which either puffs above the elbow or reaches just to it, is being shown for sports, afternoon and evening. One of the smartest recruits to the short sleeved list is the wool crepe dress with sleeves reaching just to the elbow and slightly flared. This adds to its chic when it chooses the new lighter-than-navy shade.

EVENING HANDKERCHIEF

A decorative new evening handkerchief has four layers of petals in shaded pinks outlining a nine-inch center square of lace and chiffon.

WAISTLINE EFFECT

One of the most flattering treatments of the new silhouette is to fit the frock tightly about the hips and normal waistline, as a bottle green crepe dress door, and blouse slightly above the waistline both front and back.

LAUNDRY HINTS

To clean your dusty felt hat rub it briskly with a dry sponge.

Irons will remain smooth while using if a little kitchen cleanser is sprinkled on a cloth and rubbed on the iron while hot.

Knitted garments should be washed carefully to prevent stretching and laid flat and smooth to dry.

To clean satin slippers take a little alcohol and drop three or four drops of lemon juice into it. Apply this solution to the slippers with a soft white cloth.

To remove yellow spots from old lace, either wet the lace and spread where it will freeze, or wet it and spread in a very hot sun. Either method may require several days to bleach thoroughly, and it must be kept wet all the time.

NEW LINEN

If you have purchased new household linen at the mid winter sales, do not use a single piece before writing your name or sewing your name tag in the corner. While doing this, add the size, as one for small sheets, two for three-quarter sheets and three for full size. This is a great time saver.

CLEAN BANDS AND SEAMS

Neck bands, wrist bands, and the inner seams of undergarments do not always respond to ordinary methods of laundering. The soil that collects on them, mixed with the perspiration of the body is often difficult to remove. Before putting such pieces into the tub, it is advisable to spread them on a flat surface and go over the badly soiled portions with a brush dipped in soap jelly or a thick lather of soap suds. Work the soap well into the fabric and let it stand for a while before proceeding with the wash.

PIANO KEYS

Sometimes very yellow piano keys can be whitened by rubbing with flannel dipped into cologne water.

HANDY BAG

A heavy paper shopping bag makes a handy pocket when tacked on the inside of a closet or pantry door.

A JAR OF HONEY

Jars of softly colored china contain a goodly amount of honey, and when all the honey has been eaten, think what nice jars they will make for holding small crackers or sweets!

SAGGING FLOORS

If your floors have sagged, you can cover the cracks either by moving the molding down a little on the baseboards or else buying wider moldings to cover them up. Either improves the appearance

CONCERNING WOMEN

There are now some 60 women doctors in Mexico City, Mexico.

Elizabeth Jetis, policewoman of Erie, Pa., figured in on 278 arrests during the past year.

Women in Greece over 30 years of age and able to read and write, have been granted the right to vote.

An organization of girl Fascists is being formed in Italy. The age of members will be from 17 to 22.

Nearing the age of 100, Mrs. Jane Himmelrich, of Lewisburg, Pa., is a loyal supporter of Bucknell university in all its athletic contests.

Chambermaids in Paris, France, have formed a union. The regular wages of these maids of all work is from $12 to $18 a month.

The biggest farmer woman in the United States is Miss Charlotte F. Worley, of Alliance, Neb. Once a lawyer, she now works from 10 to 15 hours a day and earns from $100,000 to $125,000 a year.

Miss Rita Morris, 21-year-old mountain girl, is a fire lookout on the very highest point of Black Mountain, looming nearly 8,000 feet above the floor of Southern California in the San Jacinto mountain range.

SUNDAY NIGHT SALAD

One of the easiest ways to provide Sunday night salad is to make a dish of gelatin, with plenty of nuts and fruits. If guests drop in, this kind of salad can be stretched indefinitely

RECIPES

Apple Snow: Beat three egg whites stiff, then fold in two-thirds cup of cold applesauce. Add sugar to taste, a little nutmeg and two teaspoons of lemon juice and pile lightly in glass dishes. Chill. Serve with soft custard.

CLUB WOMEN SPROUT "WINGS" IN WASHINGTON

Mrs. Merrit O. Chance (lower right) has organized an aviation section of Washington club women. Sylvia Carmel (upper right) of Vernon, N. Y., and Esther Merriman (left) of Akron, O., are taking the course.

WASHINGTON, March 2—(AP)—Washington's club women may soon be flying to meetings.

The Woman's City club has organized a special aviation section, the first woman's club in the country to include such a course in its regular program.

Thirty members, most of them mature women, are now enrolled for study with the idea of learning to fly.

Some, including Mrs. Merrit O. Chance, president of the club, plan to buy and operate their own planes. Mrs. Chance hopes to fly from her country home in Maryland, 20 miles from Washington, to preside at club meetings.

"I have driven a car for 20 years," says Mrs. Chance, so I don't see why I cannot pilot a plane. We have ground for a landing field on our place."

Several young women lawyers, members of the club, also will enroll for the aviation course. They like to live outside the city in summers and will use the planes to take them back and forth from their offices.

Mrs. Lyle B. Steever, director of the aviation section, is a graduate of the Aviation institute and holds a student pilot's license.

Preliminary to taking up ground work, talks will be given by experts from the department of commerce, the navy department, and various airports.

Smugglers And Frills Combine To Keep Customs Women Alert

WASHINGTON, March 2—(AP)—From appraising dainty imported lingerie to apprehending smugglers' ranges the work of women customs collectors.

There are only four women now employed in this capacity by Uncle Sam. The other 39 collectors, stationed in various cities, are men.

Mrs. Jeanette A. Hyde, collector of Hawaii and Mrs. Nellie Greene Tomlinson, collector of Iowa, represent the two extremes, seaport and inland, of the service. The other two women collectors are Mrs. Jennie P. Mumor of Utah and Mrs. Eddie McCall Priest of Tennessee.

Through Mrs. Hyde's hands pass all sorts of dutiable articles from all over the world. Even an inland city like Des Moines gets a surprising array of unusual articles from abroad.

Bases for face powders and cough medicines, used by mid-west manufacturers, are imported and appraised by the Iowa woman customs collector.

Between $100,000 and $200,000 are turned into the U. S. treasury department annually from the Des Moines office.

"Customs collecting seems a fitting work for women," says Mrs. Tomlinson. "So much of the import material consists of household furnishings and women's clothing.

"Many women do not understand that articles such as lingerie are taxed according to the amount of hand labor they represent. Heavily embroidered articles often are taxed almost as much as the article is worth, while an expensive piece of raw silk comes in free. These measures protect home labor."

More and more lingerie, for the west as well as the east, is being imported each year, says Mrs. Tomlinson.

NEXT FALL'S GAY PARTIES ALREADY BOTHERING DEBS

WASHINGTON, March 2—(AP)—The present crop of debutantes are still dancing madly, but those who will come out next fall are eagerly making plans.

It will be a case of "the debs are gone but long live the debs."

Some will make debuts in several cities. Miss Audrey Barret, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Barret, is one of these. Coming out parties in Washington, Baltimore and New York are being planned for her. She is now abroad and will visit Egypt before returning to this country in the spring. Her parents took a house here for the winter but have been spending most of their time in Arizona and California.

DARK SUEDE GLOVES CHIC FOR SPRING

PARIS, March 2—(AP)—Dark colored gloves of suede may supersede light beige and suntan shades for spring.

Several important couturiers show slip-on gloves of tobacco brown, navy or black with dark street ensembles.

One of the dressmakers who first promoted the return of long gloves for evening advises dark brown antelope gloves with black and dark blue street costumes. Another house favors navy blue.

A well known woman dressmaker features snell pink long gloves of finest suede with all evening dresses.

Polish For An Old Saw

CATANIA, Italy, March 2—(AP)—Giuseppe Perrone, cabinet-maker, is $1,000 richer because he's honest. He found checks, made out "to bearer," totalling 19,000 lire in an antique commode. He returned them and the commode's owner, struck by his scrupulousness, told him to cash and keep the sum.

Guiding Your Child

By Mrs. Agnes Lyne

Curiosity

Children today live in a world of complex mechanical contrivances. Surrounded by radios, telephones, elevators, automobiles, airplanes and other contraptions, even a four-year-old frequently asks questions which might well make a professor stop and think.

One mother of a bright five-year-old boy found herself reading the Scientific American and the Encyclopedia Brittanica in efforts to keep up with his questions.

It seemed to her that the more she told Peter the more he wanted to know. An afternoon automobile ride exhausted them both, Peter never stopping in his questioning, his mother cudgeling her brains in vain efforts to satisfy that eager, unceasing flow of curiosity.

It seemed as if it were literally insatiable. The constant asking of questions when it is not a form of attention-getting or nagging is actually a sign of frustrated curiosity.

The wise mother does not let her child's curiosity lead him into a jungle of verbal confusion. She tries, as soon as possible, to satisfy it by leading it into the channel of actual experience and discovery.

The best way, for instance, to satisfy a child's interest in electrical contrivances is to help him rig up some extremely simple device like a battery with a bell which rings or an electric light which goes on when the connection is made.

It is, of course, the peculiar virtue of progressive education that it tends thus to harness the child's curiosity to concrete experience. Thus he comes really to understand.

SILK CUT-OUTS TRIM SPRING PRINT DRESSES

PARIS, March 2—(AP)—Scissors play an important part in furnishing the trimming for some of the new printed silk dresses.

Cut-out designs applied to silk of the same pattern finish necklines and hemlines of summer dresses at one of the most famous dress houses. The cut-outs may be only partially attached in the case of floral silks, simulating realistically the effect of artificial flowers.

Snipped and slashed white cotton pique collar and cuffs are another specialty of the house that sponsors cut-out silk trimmings.

PARLEY SHADOWS WASHINGTON TEAS FOR SOCIETY GIRL

WASHINGTON, March 2—(AP)—Beatrice Pitney, Washington society girl is taking a greater interest in the naval reduction conference in London than she is in pink teas.

Miss Pitney, who is the daughter of Mahlon Pitney, former associate justice of the supreme court, has written six pamphlets dealing with international relations.

ARTIFICIAL FLOWERS BACK FOR EVENING

PARIS, March 2—(AP)—Artificial flowers, bunched or single, reappear on spring evening dresses.

Most of the flowers used are in the form of sprays and match the dress in color. Pink wisteria and carnations of mixed colors are the preferred blossoms.

Y SENIORS WIN RAGGED GAME FROM NORWALK; TWO BIG GAMES TONIGHT

The Y Seniors came out ahead in one of the poorest played games this year, Saturday night at the Y gym, leaving a mediocre Norwalk team on the short end of a 61 to 35 score. It was a state Y league game.

Both teams were way off, although the Seniors made a stirring comeback in the second half to clinch the verdict after matching the sloppy basketball of the invaders, step for step, in the first two quarters. Norwalk, likewise, made up in part for their previous poor work by scoring 15 points in the last five minutes, although they at no time came close to making it dangerous.

Coach Demarest of the locals used many combinations, only Captain Harris of the regulars playing a majority of the game.

Enos Eccleston, the left guard, sprung a big surprise by leading the Seniors in scoring with 15 points. Eccleston, who plays a neat floor game and does a good job in the backcourt, usually tallies but three or four points in the regulation ten-minute periods.

In the preliminary, the Y Emps walloped the Shyma Jrs., of Taftville, 50 to 15. The Taftville boys could not fathom the amateur rules, at all, after playing with the pro brand at Parish hall and were an easy prey. They previously had beaten the Emps by one point, at Taftville. Summaries:

Double Attraction at Y Tonight

The annual Married Men-Single Men series will get under way tonight when the first of the three games is scheduled. The two teams are composed of players of the Norwich Y team with the addition of a few former Y players. Coach Demarest has gathered quite an array of talent and the Bachelors will have to show plenty of stuff if they intend to take the Benedicts into camp.

The Old-Timers will have Normandin and Belair, forwards; Harris, center, and Demarest, Eccleston or Davis at guards. For reserves, Herb Neilson, and Art Nevins will be available.

Manager Leffingwell of the Bachelors has a quintet equally as good as Demarest's clan and is confident of getting the decision in the first encounter. His starting lineup will be, himself and Lynch at forwards, Pingree at center and Brown and Yerrington at guards. It is expected that Jim Kelly will be back after a year's layoff and he will see service in one of the guard positions, as will also Ludlow and Barber.

In the second attraction of the evening the Norwich Girls will meet the W. M. I. team. This team is without a doubt the best team to have appeared here this season and the local lassies have plenty in store to overcome the visitors. Saturday evening, W. M. I. administered a severe drubbing to the Fishers Island high school team and are as yet undefeated this season.

The local girls will have their regular lineup of Misses O'Hart, Kaiezek, Gregory, Manty, Gadbois and Sibly, which is a snappy combination.

The largest crowd of the season is expected for the two banner attractions and Manager Leffingwell has provided extra bleachers and promises seating room for everyone.

First game will start at 8 p. m. and the Married Men-Single Men's game at 9 p. m. Randy Whaples will officiate.

Tilden Eliminates DeMorpurgo

MONTE CARLO, March 2—(AP)—Big Bill Tilden staged a dramatic come-back for the benefit of Riviera tennis fans today when he eliminated the Italian ace, Baron H. L. De Morpurgo, in straight sets in the semi-finals of singles of the Butler trophy tournament. The scores were 8-2, 7-5, 6-1.

BRISTOL WINS EASILY FROM WINDHAM FIVE

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, March 2.—With its powerful five-man zone defense working like a smooth motor, the Bristol high basketball team rollicked along on its winning tide at the state armory here Saturday night, taking Windham high for a fare-thee-well score of 36 to 24. It is estimated that 1,500 people saw the game which was the most important on the home schedule. Coach Monahan's state champions seemed to have but little trouble in running up an effective lead of 12 points in the first half and remaining safely on ice throughout the remainder of the encounter. It was a case of Daniel versus Goliath with Daniel minus his sling for Windham. The locals displayed gameness and persistency to the final whistle of the one-sided combat. Coach Monahan threw his reserves in during the final periods. Against these Windham showed a more even match. The locals were taking their third defeat of the season, having won 10 games.

Despite the tumultous cheering of the banner crowd it was Bristol night from start to finish. In the encounter of the second teams during a preliminary the Bristol outfit defeated Windham 21 to 15. Windham's defeat in the major encounter dashed all hopes of a crack at the Yale Interscholastic tournament at New Haven unless there is an unexpected turn of events.

FIRST ACADEMY BASEBALL PRACTICE IS TO BE HELD DURING THIS WEEK

The Academy baseball team will have its first practice this week, but whether it will be indoors or on the broad open spaces of the campus has not yet been decided by Coach Earle E. Brigham.

The campus is in such good shape that the local mentor has thought seriously of calling his boys for an outdoor workout before the week is out. But this all depends upon the weather for the next few days. If it holds fairly warm and gives the campus 48 more hours in which to dry out completely, then the first call will probably come Wednesday or Thursday. If conditions are adverse the coach plans to take the batterymen to the state armory until the middle of the month.

Plans are going ahead rapidly at the school for a big season. All of the lettermen were successful in their midyear examinations, leaving no worry for Wildcat fans from this source.

The revised schedule, showing 22 games, 17 of them at the campus, follows:

Sat., April 5—Richmond Radiators (Dusty league) at home.

Wed., April 9—Norwich Fire Dept. (Engine 3) at home.

Mame and her girl friend are discussing the possibilities of bridge as a step in their social education.

"Hey, Mame, quit fooling with that stock, your counter looks good enough, and come here, I wanta talk to you.

"Now Mame, do you think that you gotta know how to play bridge in order to be up to the minute in your social accomplishments. I know that sounds kind of snooty, coming from me, but I'm asking you as a friend."

"Why am I asking you that? Well, I'll tell you. Last night I met a swell fella and he kinda took a liking to me but I sees right away that he's sort of ritzy on account of the questions he asks me."

"Yes, it was at the dance and I was sitting out the dance all alone when he comes along and asks me if he could have the pleasure of dancing with me. Right off I knew he was the goods, 'cause most of 'em say, 'Come on, Kid, let's you-me hoof this one.'

"Well, when we was dancing together he got real chummy-like and asks me if I played bridge. I was truthful about the matter and says that I wasn't very good at the game as I didn't care much for it. No, I didn't tell him I hadn't ever played it.

"He says how he'd be happy to give a few fine points on the game some night if I'd invite another couple in to play. He says that if you wanta get anywhere you gotta know how to play a good hand of bridge.

"Now, like a dummy, I gotta learn something about the game from somebody what knows something about it. Now, I know, it ain't no use to talk to you 'cause you can't even play a good hand of Old Maid. But I didnt know but you knew somebody what could show me.

"You know, he talks about leading from a king and fin, fin, fin-something which I didn't understand. He wanted to know if I thought it was good policy to declare a bid in a four card suit if I had three honors. Of course, I said yes which seemed to please him.

"Then he says: 'What would you bid if you had 13 diamonds?' Well, that was a sticker so I sorta hedged and says it would depend on how much honor I had. Now, I guess that wasn't the right answer 'cause he says 'I see you haven't played much bridge.'

"Then he goes on to explain that you would bid high so you would be doubled and then you could redouble. I says, 'Yeah, the only time I was ever doubled was when I was a kid and had been eating green apples, but I didn't wanta redouble.'

"He says he ain't talking about that kind of a double and that I was probably like the woman who had had 13 spades and bid no trumps and got set. I told him she oughta got set 'cause 13 spades was more'n any woman could use in a life-time, unless she was in the contracting business.

"That didn't prove to be no wisecrack, not with him. The dance finished about that time and he says good night. Now, I ask you, if I had understood about that bridge stuff would have I made a hit?"

SARAZEN WINS TITLE IN WEST COAST OPEN

BELLEAIR, Fla., Mar. 2.—(AP)—After one of the finishes for which he is famous, Gene Sarazen, stocky professional from New York, today won the 15th annual Florida west coast open golf tournament with a 72-hole score of 282.

Sarazen started the final round three strokes behind Joe Turnesa, of Elmsford, N. Y., but uncorked a brilliant 69, one stroke under par, and when the final scores were posted he held a three stroke lead over Turnesa who finished second with 285.

The victory was worth $1,000 to Sarazen. He also received a gold medal and will have his name inscribed on the Morton Plant trophy.

In third place, two strokes behind Turnesa, came Johnny Farrell, New York and St. Augustine, former national open champion. He in turn led Bobby Cruickshank, another New Yorker, by a single stroke. Cruickshank, considered out of the running this morning, turned in rounds of 70 and 71 to capture fourth money.

Harry Cooper, Los Angeles, who scored a fine 65 yesterday morning, finished fifth with a total of 290.

Of the first four to finish, three were members of the Ryder cup team. The training they received on the wind-swept dunes of Scotland and England in their European invasion stood them in good stead today as the players awakened this morning to a wind of gale proportions. It was the low, screaming "wind-cheater" shots manufactured by Sarazen's irons that carried him to victory.

Among those who finished in the money were:

Gene Sarazen, 68-73-72-69—282—$1,000.

Joe Turnesa, 67-71-72-75—285—$750.

Johnny Farrell, 71-70-72-74—287—$500.

Bobby Cruickshank, 75-72-70-71—288—$400.

Harry Cooper, Los Angeles, 65-74-75-76—290—$300.

Craig Wood, 73-72-73-75—293—$200.

Al Espinosa, 67-76-71-80—294—$150.

Denny Shute, 77-74-72-74—297—$100.

Al Watrous, 70-76-73-80—299—$75.

Horton Smith, 73-73-74-80—300—$75.

Ed Kirby, 71-75-77-77—300—$75.

Billy Burke, Greenwich, Conn., 75-71-75-80—301—$50.

Louis Chiapetta, Hartford, Conn., 72-76-74-85—307.

H. Bontempo, Springfield, Mass., 75-72-77-81—310.

SECOND GAME OF BIG SERIES ON TUESDAY

The second game of the Army-Navy and Shyma series for the Taftville basketball championship will be played at Parish hall, Taftville, Tuesday evening. This game should be a hummer as the manager of the Shymas has secured the services of two of the fastest basketball players in the state, Mondi Normandin and Roy Dissinger, to bolster their lineup and with Manager Murphy of the Army and Navy team keeping his lineup intact, one of the hardest fought games of the season should be the result.

Lefty Dugas, Shyma forward, left Sunday to join the Wichita team of the Western league and will don the court uniform no more this season.

BEAUREGARD TO CLAIM N. E. TITLE IF HE BEATS VACCA FRIDAY NIGHT

Al Beauregard, of Taftville, state bantamweight champion, will claim the New England title if he beats Johnny Vacca, of Boston, New England champion, in the main bout at the Shyma club show at Parish hall on Friday evening. Beauregard will probably enter the ring at the class weight while Vacca will be two or three pounds over the bantamweight limit as the contract is made out for only 120 pounds.

With Beauregard at the bantamweight limit he will have a legitimate claim to the title if he can take the verdict from the Boston boy. Vacca has held the bantamweight title for a number of years but of late has never defended it, being unable to make as low as 118 pounds. Most of Vacca's fighting has been done at weights ranging from 120 to 124 pounds, considerably over the bantamweight poundage. Unless Vacca can make the weight and fight in defense of his title in New England it is only right that some boy that can make the required class be given a chance at the crown.

Beauregard realizes that this is his chance and is making the most of it. He is willing to spot Vacca two or three pounds in order to get a clear claim to the New England title. He is training as he never trained before and is now down to nearly 118 1-2 pounds five days before the contest.

That this fight is attracting wide attention is evidenced in the advance sale of tickets, which is heavier than for any other show put on by the club. Reservations are being sought not only by local boxing fans but by others throughout the state and another packed house is anticipated.

The supporting card for this bout is a strong one with two six rounders and two fours, all furnishing plenty of action for the most rabid boxing fan.

MOOSUP AND PLAINFIELD IN VOLLEYBALL GAME TONIGHT

At the Community house one of the most keenly contested volleyball games ever seen in eastern Connecticut will be staged between the Plainfield team and that representing Moosup. Interest in this contest has reached fever pitch and there is bitter feeling and heavy wagering on the tussle. Mr. Herbuer, former Penn athlete, has been chosen as referee of this important match and there is not a single person in either town that envies him his task.

It promises to be an unusual spectacle as both teams are composed of prominent business men of Plainfield and Moosup. Ever since the incorporation of the Fat Men's volley ball team in 1920 this event has always been a feature of the season. This year due to the rather antagonistic attitude of contestants much publicity surrounds this game and it seems that nothing short of an actual show down will ever bring peace to this distinguished body. It has transpired locally that the Plainfield group has supplied its players with fairly large sponges to sponge up Moosup blood. On the other hand, Moosup players have arranged to wear their new outfit made up of heavy flannel trousers and heavy flannel shirts to act as an absorbant and to stay an excessive blood flow.

The Plainfield team flouts a mean optimism that reaches to almost the height of egoistical effect. This team in reality believes that it will be a show surpassed only by the "Gold Diggers of Broadway."

Plainfield team: Capt. H. Fontaine, Ovila G. Charron, Lester Salisbury, Frank Bernier, Louis Lamothe, William Vincent.

Moosup team—Capt. N. Fournier, F. Chartier, J. Labonte, G. McKenzie, G. Russell, C. Robitaille.

LITTLE ACTION IN METRO RINGS THIS WEEK

NEW YORK, March 2—(AP)—Boxing hits the doldrums this week without anything to get excited about except Primor Carnera's eighth appearance in an American ring.

The Italian giant, none of whose bouts have gone more than two rounds, meets Roy (Ace) Clark, Negro heavyweight, in the feature ten rounder at the weekly show at Philadelphia tomorrow night.

Clark stands 6 feet, 7 1-2 inches in his stocking feet and weighs 235 pounds. Carnera will have an advantage of about one inch in height and 40 pounds in weight.

Five six rounders will support the card with Buck Weaver, Medicine Lodge, Kas., meeting Leonard Dixon, Leiperville, heavyweights; Jean Boireau, France, taking on Calvin Reed, Philadelphia, featherweights and Willie Henry, California, meeting Johnny Alberts, Wilkes-Barre, Pa., in bouts of general interest.

Carnera was scheduled to box at Tulsa Friday night but this bout was cancelled because no suitable opponent could be found.

At Boston, Friday night, Tuffy Griffith, Sioux City heavyweight, meets Al Friedman of Boston.

On the west coast, Fidel Labarba, Los Angeles featherweight, meets Santiago Zorilla, of Panama at Los Angeles on Tuesday.

While the six day race holds forth in Madison Square Garden, the smaller fight clubs steal the show so far as New York is concerned.

At the St. Nicholas arena tomorrow night, Joe Glick, Brooklyn lightweight, meets Bill McMahon in a ten rounder.

Tuesday at the Broadway arena, Tony Canzoneri, former featherweight king, takes on Solly Ritz, New York lightweight, in a ten rounder.

COLUMBIA FIRMLY SET AT HEAD OF COLLEGE LEAGUE

NEW YORK, March 2—(AP)—The Lions of Columbia, firmly entrenched in first place, apparently have ended Penn's two-year reign in the Eastern Intercollegiate Basketball league.

The Lions consolidated their hold on the lead with one-sided triumphs over Cornell and Yale during the past week and brought their league record to six victories and one defeat. Penn, in its only start of the week, nosed out Dartmouth at Hanover last night, 27-25; and maintained second place with five wins in seven games.

It still is possible for Penn to beat out Columbia for the title but the odds are decidedly against it. Penn still must engage Yale at New Haven where the Elis have yet to be beaten, as well as Columbia and Princeton at Philadelphia. Columbia's remaining games are against Princeton at Princeton, Dartmouth at New York and Penn at Philadelphia. Of these only the Penn game looks dangerous.

LEWIS TAKES LEAD FROM HORWITZ IN SCORING

NEW YORK, March 3—(AP)—By a single point, Lewis of Cornell led the individual scorers of the Eastern Intercollegiate Basketball league today.

Figures to date, compiled by The Associated Press, give the Cornell ace 70 points to 69 for Horowitz of Yale. Each has played nine games, with one more to go.

In threatening positions, however, are two Columbia stars, Gregory and Bender with 65 and 63 points respectively and three games still on their schedule. Burch of Dartmouth, in fifth place with 61 points has two more games to play.

Horowitz has the most field goals, 28, and Burch the most foul goals, 21. Booth of Yale has committed the most personal fouls, 23.

Brown Has 24-Game Slate

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Mar. 2.—(AP)—A schedule of twenty-four games was announced tonight for the Providence college baseball team by Graduate Manager John E. Farrell. At the same time, it was announced that John A. Flynn, lawyer and well known former ball player of this city, was re-appointed coach for the sixth year.

The schedule includes a game with Yale at New Haven, on June 7.

FRED WARD WINS 20-MILE MARATHON, NOSES OUT DEMAR

HOUSTON, Texas, Mar. 2.—(AP) — Fred Ward, Jr., of Dover, N. J., today won the first annual National A. A. U. 20-mile marathon here after a sprint in which he outstepped Clarence DeMar, the veteran long distance runner from Boston.

Ward, running for the Millrose A. C. of New York, set a time of two hours, 12 seconds. He beat DeMar, from Melrose A. A., of Boston, by seven yards.

Until the last eighth of a mile there never was more than 10 yards between Ward and DeMar. The first mile was made in five minutes, seven seconds by the winner and the last in six minutes.

For Ward it was another triumph for one of the most promising of America's candidates in the Olympic marathon in 1932 and for DeMar it was a defeat that took little from his promise as a contender in the same event. DeMar, 42 years old, and for 21 years engaged in marathon competition, has won 14 major marathon races.

The bout was so good that the promotors wanter to sign McCarthy for another match this week but the local lad is booked for a bout in Newark on March 10 so was unable to sign for the bout.

Al Koziol, local featherweight, has two battles on his programme this week.

Tuesday night, he is matched to fight Fred Bender in a return bout at New Bedford and Thursday an opponent, as yet unnamed, at Providence. Koziol scored an impressive win over Bender last week when he took the bout on 24 hours notice.

Al may go to the wars Tuesday without the services of his faithful trainer, Barney Keenan, local cop, who is laid up with a bad cold.

Koziol will also fight in Middletown on March 13.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Chevrolet Cars

The greatest ten-day sale of used cars ever staged locally is announced for tomorrow by Austin, Chevrolet dealer. Ten models of automobiles of all makes, each completely reconditioned, will be offered.

"Unused transportation" is the keyword of the sale, according to Mr. Austin. "That is what these cars really mean, service that has not yet been used."

"To many persons have the wrong impression of used cars and the values that lie in them. This results from the unfortunate employment of the word "used" which implies a previous ownership and a reduced worth."

"Today cars are built with years of life and limitless thousands of miles in them. Drivers are more efficient today. Cars are serviced more often than formerly. Better roads reduce abuse of travel. Cars are traded in when the bulk of their lives is ahead of them. Some have been driven only a little longer than is necessary to break them in. Thousands of so-called used cars being offered today at prices far below their actual value are better than cars of like age still being run by their original owners."

"Backing our policy of careful trade-ins is the national Chevrolet policy of completely reconditioning a car before we offer it for resale. Every part of such a car is carefully checked, and if not up to our rigid standards, is repaired or replaced. The result is a car in more nearly perfect condition and with more service in it than if it was still in its first owner's hands."

Palace Theatre

Judging by the audiences which have already crowded the Palace theatre tfo see "Son of the Gods," Richard Barthelmess's most recent picture is as big a success here as it has been elsewhere. The reason for this is that it has such a compellingly human story. It is a story with which everyone can sympathize, and it is told beautifully and splendidly acted.

In "Son of the Gods," an American boy has been raised by a Chinese under the belief that he was his son. There is a deep ineradicable bond between them. The Chinaman, who had prayed for a son, had received one, not his own, but a foundling which a policeman had picked up and brought to him in his palatial home in San Francisco. The boy is in fact, the old man's chief season for living. He dresses him expensively, gives him plenty of money, and sends him to an exclusive American college.

But the boy Sam Lee is a Chinaman to his classmates. They like him, and they help him spend his money, but they do not accept him socially. Neither do the girls who discover his secret, and consequently young Sam decides to give up college and go back to New York. There he decides to go to Europe, and he goes but he finds the same discrimination there, and when he finds love, he also discovers sorrow and indescribable humiliation.

Constance Bennett, who plays opposite Barthelmess, is the eldest of the three beautiful Bennett sisters, daughters of the eminent American actor, Richard Bennett. Born in New York in 1905, Constance was educated in that city and at fashionable schools on Long Island. Then came a finishing school in Paris after which Constance made her debut in Baltimore and Washington. Soon after becoming one of the most popular actresses in the country, Constance eloped with Philip Plant, youthful millionaire. Mr. Barthelmess, whose present role is considered his best, was educated at Trinity college, Hartford.

Starting Wednesday and for three days the Palace will present a double feature bill including "The Ship from Shanghai," starring Conrad Nagel and Kay Johnson, and "Strictly Modern," with Dorothy Mackaill and Sidney Blackmer, another great twin-feature program, which no one should miss.

POETRY

Had Christ Not Lived And Died

Had Christ not lived, no temples to our God
Had proved His Presence near;
Nor had stained glass revealed our Master dear,
More precious year by year;
Nor had the sculptor given our Blessed Lord
The glorious lineaments that rank Him—Peer;
Nor had a Raphael on canvas stirred
The reader of God's Word
To homage of sweet Mary's Son, our Lord.

No reason could there be for Handel's art,
To choose Messiah's name,
In themes inspired by love, not thought of fame
A living, breathing flame
Save that his genius touched the Sacred Heart,
So all encompassing in its acclaim;
Men bared their heads in Life's too careless mart,
Remorse withdrew the cruel dart,
That pierced Christ Jesus, pleading there apart.

—By Edith Lynwood Winn.

Crocus

When trees have lost remembrance of the leaves
That spring bequeaths to summer, autumn weaves
And loosens mournfully—this dirge, to whom
Does it belong—who treads the hidden loom?

When peaks are overwhelmed with snow and ice
And clouds with crepe bedeck and shroud the skies—
Nor any sun or moon or stay, it seems,
Can wedge a path of light through such black dreams—

All motion cold, and dead all trace thereof;
What sudden shock below, or spark above,
Starts torrents raging down till rivers surge—
That aid the first small crocus to emerge?

The earth will turn and spin and fairly soar,
That couldn't move a tortoise-foot before—
And planets permeate the atmosphere
Till misery depart and mystery clear!

And yet, so insignificant a hearse?—
Who gave it the endurance so to brave
Such elements?—shove winter down a grave?—
And then lead on again the universe!

—Alfred Kreymborg

HUMOR OF THE DAY

"Come, come, my man, you've been looking around here a long time without buying. What do you want?"

"I guess I want another floorwalker—I'm the new owner."—Pathfinder.

Doctor—Do you feel this pain often?
Seaman—Every five minutes, sir.
Doctor—Does it last a long time?
Seaman—Yes, sir, about a quarter of a hour each time.—California Cub.

Judge—What possible excuse did you jurymen have for acquitting that Patient (coyly)—Twenty-four, Doc-
Jury Foreman—Insanity.
Judge—What, the whole twelve of you?—Pathfinder.

Doctor—H'm! Severe headaches, billous attacks, pains in the neck—h'm what is your age, madam?
Patient (coyly)—Twenty-four, Doctor.
Doctor—H'm—(continuing to write) —loss of memory, too.—The Pathfinder.

Visitor—Isn't it difficult to keep your household budget straight?
Mrs. Newlywed—My dear, it's terrible. This month I've had to put in two mistakes to make mine balance.

Senior—What is it that lives in a stall, eats oats and can see equally well at both ends?
End Man—By me.
Senior—A blind horse.—Colby-White Mule.

M. D.—I paid you $10 a few days ago to eliminate the knocking in my machine; now it's just as bad as ever.
Mechanic—Doctor, I may say the same of my rheumatism, which you treated. So we might call it square.

Three villages in the Savoie valley, near Lyons, France, were plunged into darkness when an eagle flew into the overhead electric cables which serve the district with power. Workmen spent a whole night trying to locate the cause of the breakdown and in the morning found the bird electrocuted just outside the village of Longefroy, which, with Tessens and Macot, had been without power.

TRYING PERIOD FOR BUSINESS AND INDUSTRY REPORTED LAST WEEK

NEW YORK, Mar. 1—(AP)— The recovery in business and industry passed through a halting and rather trying period during the past week, although the records of several preceding recessions indicate that such periods are essential to the process of regaining normalcy.

The decline in commodity prices developed nerve wracking swiftness early in the week, then appeared to strike bottom, and substantial rebounds occurred. Economists point out that commodity prices usually continue to decline for a time after general business recovery has set in. Bradstreet's food price index reached the lowest level since January, 1922. The McGill commodity service stated that industrial prices are now lower than in 1921, and are comparable with early 1916.

For the first time this year, steel mill operations receded slightly. The brisk upturn in steel mill operations was the feature of the industrial improvement of late January, and it was felt early in February that steel output would be inclined to slacken some during the month.

The grain markets dominated the commodity price situation. March wheat tumbled below $1 a bushel, but heavy buying quickly appeared, from both federal farm board and speculative sources. Prices rallied several cents before the close of the week.

Among other commodities reaching new lows for the season or longer, were cotton, crude rubber, raw sugar, raw silk, cocoa, and some of the non-ferrous metals, notably silver, tin and lead. The uncertain price levels have made buyers cautious, and tended to hold manufacturing activity in check.

In the motor industry, reports of the smaller car manufacturers continued the most cheerful. Manufacturing activities advanced slowly and irregularly. Large stocks of used cars remain a troublesome factor. There were reports of slight improvement from the radio trade. Building operations have shown little expansion, but manufacturers of building materials, particularly paint manufacturers, were more active.

Freight car loadings showed moderate expansion, failing by a wide margin to reach the levels of a year ago.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Woman's City Club Comedy

"The Jade Doll," a Japanese Comedy in three acts, by Miss Leila M. Church is the title of the surprise which the Music Department of the Woman's City Club has planned for their annual contribution to the entertainment of the members of the club.

The play will be given, as advertised, in the new Masonic Temple. Membership tickets, which must be presented by the holders, serve as admittance as this is primarily a club affair; however, additional tickets may be secured by members and friends of the club and of the cast.

This play, which has previously been given at various places, has been pronounced one of the most artistic and charming entertainments; dainty costumes, bright lines, quick action, graceful dances, delightful songs, dignified posing and humorous acting follow each other before the unique scenery presented on the stage. The cast which comprises 96 people, well known to the Norwich audiences, is being trained by Miss Leila M. Church. The great enthusiasm with which one and all are entering into this enterprise planned for Norwich, promises a most unusual evening to those who wish to spend a few hours viewing an artistic wholesome musical show.

The Music department considers itself most fortunate in having been able to secure Miss Church's talent for this occasion. She will personally train all the various groups for the play.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Broadway Theatre

Shakespeare wrote "The Show's the Thing," but today in addition to the show, theatre patrons look also for courtesy, comfort and cleanliness, which is part of the creed of the Broadway theatre staff, "where a welcome awaits you." Delighted patrons Saturday and Sunday testified to their enjoyment of those "big four" essentials to their show-happiness, responding wholeheartedly to the management's efforts on their behalf. The piece de resistance of the Broadway's banquet which closes with today's and tomorrow's showings, is that masterful film version of the tremendously vital stage success, "Her Unborn Child." This play and its offspring, the film has caused heated discussion all over the country, ending with a hearty endorsement by clergy, physicians and moral welfare workers as an intensely convincing human document. Telling frankly but without offensive situations, the love-life of two typical American youngsters, who follow love's dictates blindly, forgetting consequences, is filmed with fullest measure of vivid drama and tense emotion, plentifully sprinkled with delightful and homely humor. A modest suburban home with its daily problems for "mother," with the elder daughter and two mischievous youngsters, of school age, a wealthy, proud neighbor, guarding her son with selfish jealousy, an understanding family physician, and a thoroughly lovable colored "mammy" form the modus operandi for this story of characters so familiar they might almost live next door to us. The surrounding program, specially booked to balance the vital strength of the story, features an Octavus Ray Cohen comedy of Darktown "sassiety," temptingly titled "Brown Gravy," the latest Paramount Sound news; "bouncing ball" song novelty, "smiles," and the "Song Writers' Revue," in which the inimitable Jack Benny introduces the most popular song writers of today, with each playing a bit of his best known composition, with a corps of lovely dancing girls adding zest to the skit.

SPECIAL MUSIC SERVICE AT M. E. CHURCH SUNDAY

A good sized congregation gathered in the Methodist Episcopal church Sunday evening when the Junior choir, under direction of Mrs. Lewis E. Aldrich, gave a special recital. The girls wore for the first time their new vestments and were highly complimented on their appearance. The service opened with a Processional, "Onward Christian Soldiers." The pastor, Rev. George Warren Potter offered prayer and led in the responsive reading. Doris Rose and Bertha Backus sang the duet, "Ivory Palaces," and the choir sang "God's Way Is Best." Florence Gembel and Virginia Ward sang "Room For Jesus," which was followed by a selection by the choir, "Saviour Breathe An Evening Blessing." The hymn "Softly Now The Light of Day" was sung by the congregation. The pastor gave a short sermon on the theme, "The Drifter." The recessional hymn was "Now The Day Is Over."

Sunday afternoon the pastor had charge of a religious service at the Johnson home. Mrs. Lewis Irish was soloist and sang "I Will Pilot Thee" and "God's Will Is Best."

At the morning service the pastor preached from Psalm 19:14, "Let the words of my mouth acceptable in thy sight, O Lord, my strength and my redeemer. He said in the course of his address: "There is a book entitled 'Seven Thousand Words Frequently Mispronounced'. If you look through the book you will never need to pronounce most of the words. The most troublesome words are the short ones. They are the words that really mean great things, such as God, man, child, wife, love, sky, home, light, pain, joy, death. Jesus spoke mostly in monosyllables and that was doubtless why the common people heard Him gladly. The beatitudes in the King James' version of Matthew contain 119 words; of these 90 are words of one syllable." The three words Rev. Mr. Potter then discussed as those mostly mispronounced were, God, I, and they. The Junior choir sang, under the direction of Mrs. Lewis E. Aldrich.

The chairman of the prayer meeting committee of the C. E., Mrs. William Weaver, was leader of the C. E. meeting Sunday evening and spoke on the subject, "Faith and What Is Does."

FARMERS IN SOVIET RUSSIA ARE DOOMED TO SERVITUDE

Government Has Decided to Convert Russia Into a Vast Area of State-Controlled Farms—Will Proceed Regardless of Individual Sufferings and Misfortunes of Peasant Farmers—If the Peasants Show Good Production Each of Them Will Receive His Quarter of a Pound of Meat Daily — Should They Fail, "God Help Them to Get Their Bread"—Men Who Shun Work Will Be Regarded As Mentally Unbalanced.

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R., March 3—(AP)—"Uncle Mike," better known to the outside world as Michael Ivanovitch—"Uncle Mike," better known to the outside world as Michael Ivanovitch Kalinin president of the central executive committee of Soviet Russia, took the peasants of Voronesh familiarly into his confidence today and told them all about the government's decision to convert Russia into a vast area of state-controlled collective farms.

His speech was a remarkable one. President of the highest official body in the Soviet Union, and himself a sturdy son of the soil, he straightforwardly declared to his peasant hearers "we have begun to remake man."

In doing this, he declared, the government could no longer allow the peasants to labor unproductively on their farms, or to waste their time in useless pursuits.

Therefore, the communist authorities had decided to mobilize the bulk of the country's one hundred million farmers on more productive collective farms, where labor and its fruits would be allotted equally to all toilers.

"If we succeed in attaining our goal of collectivization, no power on earth will be able to undermine or destroy us."

Kalinin is the intimate medium of contact between the peasantry and the government, and his address, following the warning Joseph Stalin made yesterday against too hasty progress toward collectivism, shows with what earnestness the communists are directing their agrarian campaign.

"In this process of colectivizing our farms and suppressing the kulaks (peasant proprietors) we should be considered to have no human feelings if we said such a drastic transformation carried with it no individual sufferings and misfortunes.

"But we know that this move toward socialization is best for the masses. Therefore we can not allow individual sufferings to influence us.

"However harsh and painful the extermination of the kulaks may seem, it is absolutely necessary, because it insures the healthy development of the collective farm organism and fortifies us against great expenditure of human lives in the future.

"If the peasants of these collective farms work out and carry into effect a good production and financial plan, each of them will receive his quarter of a pound of meat daily. But if they fail in this, then God help them to get their bread.

"We have begun to remake man, and have just begun. We are still far from real equality. Until we have attained complete communism there can be no real equality. We have not yet reached that stage of development when each worker receives for his equal share of labor an equal share of products.

"There will be genuine equality only when each works according to his abilities, and receives according to his requirements.

"Under real communism each man will work conscientiously and loyally. Not to work will be considered as abnormal as for a man to go into the street naked. The man who shuns work under communism will be regarded as mentally unbalanced."

Kalinin's warning to the peasants that if they failed to make the collective farm scheme a success "God help them to get their bread" complements Stalin's warning yesterday. It indicates that the communists, finding they are going too fast, are genuinely anxious to explain their plan, and to advance it by words and not by violence.

After Stalin's instructions to the party members to slacken the speed with which they have been realizing the scheme, Kalinin's speech attempts to explain the idea to the peasants. Between the two, the government apparently hopes to consolidate its gains and to avoid rousing the peasants to desperate acts.

SENATE VOTES TO RETAIN TARIFF ON CUBAN CIGARS

WASHINGTON, March 3.—(AP)—The senate tonight eliminated a provision from the tariff bill which would have repealed an existing statute limiting parcel post Cuban cigar importations to lots of not less than 3,000.

Senator Fletcher, democrat, Florida, proposed striking out the repeal provision. He said it would have meant a "direct drive on the box trade" of American cigar manufacturers.

Cuba has been insistent on repeal of the statute in negotiations for resumption of permanent parcel post relations between the islands and the United States.

WASHINGTON, March 3.—(AP)—A prediction that the tariff bill would be passed by the senate by Wednesday, was made tonight by Chairman Smoot of the finance committee, after the senate had completed another 11 hours of continuous labor on the measure.

HEARING ON DIVERSION OF WARE-SWIFT WATERS

HARTFORD, March 3.—(AP)—Connecticut agriculture is benefited by the floods in the Connecticut river which Massachusetts claims would be reduced by its proposed diversion of water from the Ware and Swift rivers, it was testified today before Special Master Charles W. Bunn in the suit of this state to have the United States supreme court enjoin the proposed Bay state diversion which is claimed to be necessary in order that Boston may have an adequate supply of drinking water.

Testimony of nearly a dozen Connecticut farmers who were witnesses for this state, as well as one placed on the stand by Massachusetts, was that meadow lands along the river provide fine hay as the result of the annual deposits of the high stages of the river.

Two river pilots testified for Connecticut that an inch of water, or even half an inch, is of importance to them in navigating the river at times of low water, but cross-examination by Massachusetts brought out that such small variations in the depth of the river are not reported to the pilots.

Marked Improvement In Condition Of Taft

Reserve Energy of the Former President Has Amazed Attending Physicians.

WASHINGTON, March 3—(AP)—One month from the day that he resigned as chief justice found William Howard Taft today clinging tenaciously to the thin thread of life, which has been sustaining him since last Wednesday.

In view of his seventy-two years, the former president's reserve enery has amazed the attending physicians. They have said that this will be his last illness, emphasizing that any improvement would be but temporary.

The regular morning bulletin by Drs. Francis R. Hagner and Thomas A. Claytor, said Mr. Taft had spent "a good night," and added: "He continued to take some nourishment. A few days ago his condition was very critical, but he has slightly improved, and, unless some further sudden change occurs due to the arterio sclerosis, his span of life to the aarterio sclerosis, his span of life for the present is indeterminate."

Arterio sclerosis, or hardening of the arteries with consequent impairment of the blood circulation, has given the doctors more concern of late than any of the other ailments afflicting Mr. Taft.

Robert A. Taft left tonight for his home in Cincinnati. He had been at the home of his father since Friday.

On leaving the Wyoming avenue residence, Mr. Taft said he expected to remain in Cincinnati for two or three days. He said there had been a marked improvement in the condition of his father over the week end and that unless there were an unexpected relapse, the former president might live for some time.

To Decide Status Of Purchaser Of Liquor

U. S. Supreme Court Has Advanced Hearing On the Case to April 14

WASHINGTON, March 3.—(AP)—A decision to pass upon a highly disputed point of prohibition enforcement came from the supreme court today while the wets were determining who would have the final word before the house judiciary committee in behalf of repeal of the 18th amendment.

The case upon which the supreme court decided today to act involves whether the purchaser of bootleg liquor may be prosecuted for conspiracy to violate the Volstead act when he orders liquor knowing that illegal transportation will be necessary. UNEMPLOYMENT SITUATION HAS REACHED THE SENATE

Early Consideration of Labor Legislation Topic of Spirited Debate — Wagner and Lafollette Demand Legislation to Set Up Employment Systems — They Have Been Invited to Present Their Measures Before the Commerce Committee Thursday.

WASHINGTON, March 3.—(AP)—Promise of early consideration of labor legislation came out of a spirited debate in the senate today, over the unemployment situation.

Responding to demands by Senator Wagner, democrat, New York, and LaFollette, republican, Wisconsin, for legislation to set up unemployment systems, Chairman Johnson of the commerce committee invited them to lay their measures before him at the committee session Thursday. He recently became chairman of this committee.

Senator Vandenberg, republican, Michigan, replied to attacks upon the administration with a demand that the senate "get down to business" and enact the two-months-old administration bill expanding the public buildings program by $230,000,000.

Blame was thrown back and forth in the two-hour discussion and various cures were offered. Senator Couzens, republican, Michigan, urged action on the bill by Senator Brookhart, republican, Iowa, to allow World war veterans to cash their bonus certificates.

Senator LaFollette deplored alarms being broadcast of a communist demonstration on Thursday and condemned cries of a "red scare" as attempts to drag a red herring across the trail of the millions of men and women who, through no fault of their own are out of work.

Senator Wheeler, democrat, Montana, also belittled the talk of a "red scare" and denounced a letter circulated by Matthew Woll, a vice-president of the American Federation of Labor ascribing unemployment demonstrations to communist activities. He assailed the contention of Woll that William Foster, a communist candidate for president in 1928, was on his way here from Russia with $1,250,000 for propaganda. Senator Heflin, democrat, Alabama, suggested that the senate lobby committee summon Woll before it.

Senator Couzens said he had received information from high administration officials that there were 3,100,000 unemployed and that there were likely to be more. He also suggested that congress might repeal the $160,000,000 tax reduction authorized for this year and apply this money to relieve unemployment.

Senator Wagner denounced suggestions that delay in enactment of the tariff was responsible for unemployment.

The New Yorker also assailed the leadership of President Hoover in connection with tariff enactment, blaming him for any delay.

Senator Fess, republican, Ohio, served notice that he would answer Wagner tomorrow.

Hallowes, Jr., a Jacksonville attorney, who will direct the prosecution, said the death penalty would be asked. Hallowes is serving because of the illness of State's Attorney Charles Durrance. A tentative panel of 12 veniremen was in the box when court adjourned late today but the entire panel was subject to challenge of the defense.

On the testimony of Landry and of Willie Jones, a Jacksonville detective, who was with Detective Smith on the night they fought a gun battle with three men, the state expected to build is case. Senator Nye, who has supported the farm board in its campaign to establish a national farmer-owned and farmer-controlled grain organization said he had received numerous protests citing the conference in Chicago last week between farm board members and officials of the National Grain corporation.

The resolution would direct the senate's inquiry also into activities of the grain trade toward the farm relief act and would ask for a report on whether the trade had sought to "depress the world market for American agricultural products and to reflect such depression upon the domestic market for the purpose of discrediting the farm board."

Chairman McNary, of the senate agriculture committee, ordered a meeting for tomorrow when the resolution was referred to him, Senator Wheeler, democrat, Montana, suggested that the committee might go ahead and conduct an inquiry of its own without a resolution but Senator McNary replied that he did not favor turning the committee into a grand jury.

JUDGE D. A. LYMAN DIES AT HOME IN COLUMBIA

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, March 3—Dwight Alfred Lyman, 86, died at his home in Columbia Green at 10:30 o'clock Sunday night. His death brought to a close one of the most fruitful and colorful careers in the annals of the towns of Windham and Columbia. His long and active life is one that left a rich heritage of good deeds and kindness and which brought just rewards of untiring enterprise.

Judge Lyman is survived by his wife, four children, Mrs. Lizzie Doten Lyman Tharp of San Jose, Calif., Miss Lillian Lyman of Columbia, Hollis Hunt Lyman of Willimantic and Samuel Edson Lyman of Elizabeth, N. J.; and four grandchildren, Lyman Tharp, Hardy Tharp, and Lillian Margaret Tharp of San Jose and Edson Hunt Lyman of this city. He was born in Barrie, now Albion, Orleans county, New York, November 11, 1843, the son of Samuel Edson and Fanny Charlotte Clark Lyman, both of whom were former residents of Columbia. The scene of his birth was a log cabin.

The family returned to Columbia in the spring of 1850 and Judge Lyman attended the district school during the winters and working on his father's farm during the summer months.

In the fall of 1862 he went to Fort Trumbull to enlist in the cavalry, but an illness of typhoid fever at that time made him unfit for military service and in the winter of that year he engaged in the manufacture of willow furniture with a man residing in Columbia. In 1863 Mr. Lyman went to Hartford and was employed there for two years by the Colt Willow Ware company, becoming an expert in willow work and making of it his life hobby. The trade died out in Connecticut in 1873 and for many years Judge Lyman was probably the only expert willow tradesman in the state.

He entered the employ of the old H. P. & F. railroad in 1871 and was appointed station agent at Lovetts, now Versailles, remaining there until the spring of 1873 when he took charge of the local clerical work for that company in this city. The Air Line had just started to operate at that time.

The following year he became a traveling salesman for the American Basket company of New Britain and two years late became similarly employed by the Williams Manufacturing company of Northampton, Mass. In 1876 he started a basket shop in the Maryland penitentiary, at Baltimore, for a contractor. He acted as overseer and instructor of the shop until 1877 when he returned to this city. On April 1, 1878 he was appointed superintendent of the Windham Almshouse. The old building was burned in March 1879, and much credit is given to his plans and supervision for the present fine buildings and handsome stone walls about the almshouse and cemetery. His administration of the almshouse was most successful and resulted in the adoption of beneficial reforms. He maintained active interest in pauper legislation and was the author of the anti-auction and contract pauper law. As clerk of the board of selectmen he created the present system of keeping the selectmen's and pauper accounts.

In the spring of 1890 he was appointed census enumerator for Willimantic and then continued in taking the manufacturing statistics for Windham and Tolland counties, a work that lasted until 1891.

In the spring of 1891 he opened a fire insurance office of which the present D. A. Lyman & Company is the outgrowth. The same year he began newspaper work as the local correspondent for The Hartford Courant, covering a large amount of eastern Connecticut. He remained with The Courant until about 1907 when he accepted the editorship of the Willimantic Journal until it was sold some three years later.

It was also in 1891 that Judge Lyman with George E. Stiles founded the Willimantic Building and Loan association and was elected its first secretary. He held that position with honor and credit for a quarter of a century and contributed largely to the extensive growth of the association from a small beginning to a large membership with assets of over a quarter of a million dollars. In the spring of 1916 he declined to hold the secretaryship longer and his partner, James P. Mustard, was elected his successor.

Judge Lyman won his title in May, 1897, when he was appointed deputy judge of the Willimantic police court. In May, 1901, he became judge and held the position for two years, being the only lay judge the court has ever had.

Judge Lyman took up his legal residence in Columbia in 1915 in a newly built cottage. Columbia soon turned to him for services and he was elected selectman for four consecutive years, three of which he served as first selectman. He also served on various town committees, giving unfaltering support to the republican party which had been the party of his choice when he received the right of franchise.

Mr. Lyman was married to Miss Abbie M. Hunt of Columbia on September 10, 1865. Four children were born to them, all of whom survive. Mr. Lyman became a member of the First Spiritualist society of Willimantic in 1864 and served as first trustee of the society since 1873. He was also a member of the Connecticut State Spiritualist association serving as its president for some 15 years. He was also a member of the Masonic fraternity which he joined in 1868, and affiliated with Eastern Star lodge, No. 44, of this city. He was a past worthy master of Borden grange No. 93 of this city of which he had been a member for nearly 40 years.

Judge Lyman was of the eighth generation of the lineal descendants of Richard Lyman, one of the first settlers of Hartford.

WILLIMANTIC TO HOLD A COMMUNITY WEEK

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, March 3—Under the leadership of Allen B. Lincoln, plans for a Community week to be held during school commencement in June along lines similar to the Old Home-Old Church and Old School Week held in 1915, were inaugurated at a meeting held in the chamber of commerce rooms this evening. In 1915 the event brought back to the city hundreds of former residents. Along the same plan, it proposed to invite all former residents of old Windham to visit here during the Community week and to offer special programs tending to make the visit enjoyable. The representative group tonight will report back to various organizations in the hope of securing city-wide co-operation in making the 1930 gathering a success.

THREE DIVORCES ARE GRANTED BY JUDGE YEOMANS

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WILLIMANTIC, March 3—During a short calendar session of the Windham county superior court held here this afternoon, Judge Edward M. Yeomans granted decrees in three uncontested divorce cases. James W. Baker of Ashford was granted a divorce from Ina A. Baker, who is incurably insane at the Norwich State hospital. Marion I. LaFleur Boyea of this city received a decree from Joseph Norman Boyea on the grounds of desertion and Bessie Palmer was granted a decree from James Palmer on the grounds of cruelty.

But one of the three cases on the short calendar list was taken up, the case being that of aNthan M. Hutner of Brooklyn, N. Y., et al versus Lilliam Polakoff et als. Hutner testified that on March 10, 1923, he took a first mortgage on property in Woodstock used for a summer camp for children and called Camp Lincoln, to secure a note for $3,500. The unpaid balance amounts to $6,250 on the principal and $391.67 interest and there are taxes to the amount of $460 outstanding. He gave as his estimate value of the camp $10,000, Robert E. Harris, judge of probate and town clerk of Woodstock, estimated the property to be valued at $8,000. Judge Yeomans ordered a foreclosure of sale with limitation as the first Tuesday in May.

The divorce case of Ernest E. Frink versus Mabel Salisbury Frink, seeking a divorce on the grounds of desertion, was started and then ordered continued until the plaintiff was able to appear in court. Witnesses heard today on behalf of the plaintiff were A. J. Dixon, Rev. Ernest Drake and Herman E. Frink, all of Sterling.

Court was adjourned until April 17, on order of Judge Yeomans who made a proviso that court be reopened in the event of an emergency.

Fined and Jailed

Kelley, 30, of 18 Normal street, Worcester, Mass., driver of a car that crashed into one operated by John Desjarlais of Stonington on the Stafford Springs highway late Saturday night was fined a total of $175 and given a 10-day sentence to the Tolland county jail at a session of the Mansfield town court this morning. Kelley pleaded guilty to intoxication, reckless driving and operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of liquor. Justice of the Peace Byron M. Houston imposed a fine of $25 on the first count, $50 on the second and $100 and costs on the third, a total of $203.80. The 10 day jail sentence went into immediate effect and Kelley was taken to Tolland by State Policeman Henry Heinold of the Stafford Springs barracks. Mrs. Desjarlais who was in her husband's car at the time it was run into by Kelley's continued today to suffer from the effects of the shaking up that she received. An X-ray photograph was taken Sunday by Dr. J. A. Girouard and another taken today in the hope of ascertaining the cause of pains being felt by the woman.

The Hampton Congregational church, one of the historic landmarks in this section, was damaged to the extent of about $400 this morning in a blaze caused by an overheated furnace. Clayton Gill, painter, who was engaged in decorating the interior of the church, discovered the fire before it had gained headway and quick response was made by the Hampton fire department under direction of Chief Robert J. McDermott. The pumper truck of Engine company No. 1 of the local fire department was also sent for. The fire was extinguished with chemicals. A section of the main floor about 10 feet square and some dozen pews were damaged, the loss being partially covered by insurance according to Mrs. Gertrude Pearl, member of the church committee. Mr. Gill had built the fire in the furnace this morning. The section of flooring destroyed was directly above the heating plant. The church was built about 200 years ago and is said to be the oldest in Windham county. It is an imposing wooden structure standing on the main thoroughfare in the village of Hampton.

Holmes, manager of the store, had gained a wide circle of friends in this vicinity and surrounding towns. Mr. Holmes, a former Colchester representative to the state legislature, Friday night completed nearly 27 years' work in the retail grocery business in Colchester. DANIELSON

MELINSKI HOUSE IS TOTALLY DESTROYED BY FIRE

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Mar. 3—A cottage house owned by Michael Melinski and occupied by himself and family on the Chicken Farm road, west of Elmville, was burned to the ground this morning with a loss of $3,000, fairly well covered by insurance. The furniture was saved.

The fire was discovered about 10 o'clock, but whether a defective chimney was responsible or some other cause remains a matter of uncertainty. The cottage occupied a site next to the large house on the chicken farm, owned by Magloire Bessette, and for a considerable time there was danger that this house and the large barn and other structures on the chicken farm would be ignited and destroyed, as half a gale was blowing out of the northwest at the time.

Telephone calls for aid brought in addition to Mr. Bessette, his son, Ernest Bessette, and the hired men on the Bessette farm, brought Albert Day and hired men from his place on the Goodyear road, others from Goodyear and Elmville and Selectman Alcott D. Sayles of East Killingly with men to form a bucket brigade and to man a forest fire pump that was made available.

Ernest Bessette said this afternoon that he had asked Chief A. P. Woodward of the Danielson fire department for help, but the request had been declined on the ground that sufficient water was not available at the chicken farm to operate the big pumper.

All effort to save the flaming home from destruction were unavailing. The fire had gained too much headway to be overcome before all the help that finally got into action. It is understood that Mr. Melinski, who works in a Danielson mill, will rebuild in the spring.

WEDDING
Mayo-Monohan

This morning in the presence of relatives and intimate friends Miss Doris Monohan, daughter of Mrs. Molly Gaudreau of School street, and State Officer Henry T. Mayo of the Danielson barracks were united in marriage at St. James' church at 8 o'clock. Rev. J. A. Demers, M. S., performed the marriage ceremony and was celebrant of the nuptial mass.

The bridal couple were attended by Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Meunier of Main street.

The bride wore a blue suit with fox scarf, with a small model hat and shoes to match. She wore a corsage bouquet of pink sweet peas. Mrs. Meunier wore a purple suit with fox scarf, with hat and shoes to match and carried a bouquet of lavender sweet peas.

Following a wedding breakfast Mr. and Mrs. Mayo left on their wedding trip, during which they will visit in New York and Philadelphia before staying for a time with relatives of Officer Mayo in his home city of Danbury. They will make their home in Danielson.

Ash Wednesday, marking the beginning of the Lenten season, will mark the beginning here of special series of religious services continuing until the eve of the Easter period. Announcements have been made that Lenten services will be held under the auspices of the Danielson Federation of Church, these to be mid-week services on Thursday evenings, and that the Federation also will arrange Holy week services and an Easter evening musical program.

At the Westfield Congregational church on Sunday mornings during Lent Rev. Harding W. Gaylord will preach a series of sermons on the general theme The Divine in Human Life. Next Sunday morning Rev. Mr. Gaylord's topic will be Facing the Issues of Life; March 16, The High Act of Worship; March 23, The Holiness of Beauty; March 30, The Hard Quest for Truth; April 6, The Glory of Sacrifice; April 13, Palm Sunday, The Mastery of Success; April 20, Easter Sunday, Looking Beyond.

This church also will have three special Sunday evening services during Lent, in the auditorium. On March 16, there will be a stereopticon service Peter in the Firelight, with slides illustrating Kipling's appealing story. There also will be appropriate music. On March 30, there will be another stereopticon service—Jesus of Nazareth—slides to be used reproducing pictures from the life of Jesus by the artist William Hole and solos by Mrs. Harold B. Atwood. Palm Sunday evening there will be Lenten communion, reception of members. Mrs. Atwood and the Girls' choir will sing.

Brawley—that little city in the Imperial Valley of California that has been repeatedly shaken by earthquakes of greater and lesser degree—during the past few days—is the home of Myron Witter, owner and publisher of the Brawley Daily Times, and son of Mr. and Mrs. David A. Witter of Furnace street.

At his home here this afternoon the father of the California newspaperman, who gained his first experience in a printing office here in Danielson, said that he has not heard from his son direct since the occurrence of the earthquakes, but has learned that the presses in the Brawley Times office were stopped by the quivering of the earth and that one of the plateglass windows in the Times building was broken. Mr. Witter also said that his son has just returned to his home in Brawley after having been at Long Beach to undergo an operation for appendicitis.

Myron Witter has practically grown up with the Brawley section of the Imperial Valley. The city has a population of about 10,000. It and the district of which it is a part has, among other ways, honored Mr. Witter with an election to the California legislature, and while a member of that body he did much to further legislation in the interest of the Boulder dam project. He made his first visit east in a long time two years ago the coming summer.

Lionel Poirier is to become a member of the state police department and has been assigned to the Ridgefield barracks training school. Mr. Poirier, a fine physical specimen, will be remembered by many hereabouts as a basketball player of ability on local teams of three or four years ago.

This evening the young people of the Brooklyn Congregational church presented a play, Mabel's Aunt, in the gymnasium of the Westfield Congregational church here. In addition to the play there were readings, musical selections and folk dances.

This morning's mail brought to a considerable number of people here and elsewhere in the town of Killingly ballots to be used in the nation-wide poll on prohibition that is being taken by a New York publication. Conversation here would indicate that the majority of these ballots sent to Killingly will find their way back to be counted in the total of nearly twenty million sent out.

In observance of the World day of prayer, a union service is to be held at the Baptist church here Friday afternoon at 300. The theme will be That Jesus May Be Lifted Up.

A preliminary survey by Frederick Swan of Wauregan, co-operating with the state fish and game commission, indicates that it will be possible to arrange for the stocking of Blackwell's brook from a point near Brooklyn village to the point where it empties into the Quinebaug river during the present month. With the arrangements completed the brook will be heavily stocked with thousands of adult trout and controlled during the fishing season as are other state-leased streams.

Mrs. George J. Heneault has returned here after visiting in New York for a few days.

Frederick Emmons, for years a resident of Danielson, now employed at a hospital in Boston, was a visitor with relatives here today.

The Church Family night at the Westfield Congregational church this month is scheduled for Tuesday evening.

This was Neighbors' night at the meeting of Killingly grange. The visiting granges were from Plainfield and Moosup Valley granges.

Henri C. Beausoliel of New Bedford returned to his home today after visiting with friends here over the week end.

Schools throughout the town of Killingly reopened today after a recess of a week.

For the first Monday in a number of weeks there was no session of the Killingly town court today.

Areas hereabouts are to share in the distribution of pheasants to be made by the state during the spring season.

PUTNAM

POLICE SEARCHING FOR CLUES IN MURDER CASE

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, March 3.—Investigation in the Trudeau murder case at Webster was practically at a standstill today. No developments occurred during the day, although officers of the Webster police department and of the Danielson barracks continued their search for new clues in an effort to fix more clearly the responsibility for the crime on Leon Trudeau, Webster man under arrest for the murder of his wife, Mrs. Cecile Manski Trudeau.

Lieut. Ross V. Urquhart, assisted by County Detective Rowe H. Wheeler and officers of the Danielson barracks, are working on the theory that Mrs. Trudeau was murdered at the deserted Wieczek farm house in Wilsonville. The grounds surrounding the dwelling are being combed in search of new clues.

Unless the authorities unearth new links in the case during the week nothing is looked for until Saturday morning, when Trudeau and Miss Lena Wieczek will be arraigned in first district court in Webster on charges of murder and being an accessory after the fact, respectively.

BOSWORTH CLEARED OF CHARGES OF KIDNAPING

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, March 3.—Burton D. Bosworth, East Woodstock man mentioned in police despatches Saturday morning as a kidnaper, was cleared of such charges today with an explanation by his attorney of the manner in which he took his five-year-old son, Robert, from the boy's mother to his (Bosworth's) home in East Woodstock.

According to his attorney, Bosworth in company with a constable went to Waterford Friday and made an appointment to see his child, who was in custody of a woman appointed by Bosworth's estranged wife. After a few minutes in the presence of his son, Bosworth was asked by the boy if he had brought him any presents. The father replied that he had, but had left them in his automobile outside. Robert, anxious to receive his father's gift, ran to the automobile parked outside his home. When the boy was in the car, his father asked him if he would like to go for a ride. The child was agreeable and the father and son departed, their destination being Bosworth's home in East Woodstock. In his haste to get away, Bosworth forgot the officer of the law who had accompanied him on the trip, who was left behind.

Bosworth returned to Waterford this morning to appear in town court on a charge of breach of the peace. He was represented by Attorney Irving H. Miron of this city, who is also counsel for the Woodstock man in his fight against his wife's divorce action now pending in the supreme court of errors.

CITY VOTES 6 1-2 MILL TAX RATE ON GRAND LIST

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, March 3.—Only a handful of voters were in attendance at the special city meeting held this morning in the municipal building on Church street. The session opened at 9 o'clock with Warren S. Ames, alderman-at-large, presiding in the absence of Mayor Charles A. Richard. Confirming votes were given the proposals of the common council to lay a tax of six mills on the dollar on the city grand list, and an additional half mill on the same list for the purpose of reducing the principal and interest of the sewer debt. The recommendation of appropriating $57,380 for the operation of the various city departments for the ensuing fiscal year, was approved. The voters also empowered the council to borrow a sufficient sum of money to meet current expenses of the city and all appropriations made at this morning's meeting until taxes are collected or the payment of the same is provided for.

A petition presented in superior court in Willimantic today by Judge M. H. Geissler of this city was a mortgage foreclosure on the property in South Woodstock owned by Frank Dee and others, known as Camp Lincoln, which will be sold at auction on May 6. The Putnam attorney, acting in behalf of Nathan Hutner and Ruben Hillman of New York, holders of the mortgage on the summer camp, presented the petition to Judge Edward M. Yeomans of Danbury, presiding magistrate, who signed an order authorizing the foreclosure of the mortgage by sale of the property.

Camp Lincoln is composed of several hundred acres of land situated on the shores of Roseland lake on the Senexet road in South Woodstock. For the past ten years it has been a summer camp for Hebrew boys and girls of New York city.

Copies of the municipal register containing reports of the city officers for the year ending Dec. 31, 1929, were distributed this morning at the special meeting of voters. The report of George W. Perry, city engineer, contains a wealth of information concerning conditions in the city in regards to sewage disposal. The annual report of the fire department submitted by Chief Ralph E. Thurston is likewise an interesting document, which tells in detail the activities of the department for the past year.

Mrs. Leroy Thompson, who before her marriage was Miss Elizabeth Moras of Bradley street, is a patient at the Jamaica hospital in New York city, suffering from acute appendicitis. Mrs. Thompson underwent an operation today, after which her condition was reported to be favorable.

Miss Grace R. Murphy of Northampton, Mass., returned to her home Sunday, after a few days' visit with relatives in this city.

Judge M. H. Geissler was in Willimantic this morning, attending a session of superior court held in that city.

Miss Marjorie C. Bradford, assistant clerk of courts, was in Willimantic today at a session of superior court.

Scores of visiting firemen were in this city last evening, attending the 30th annual ball of the Putnam fire department which was held at the state armory on Harris street.

It was said this morning by a member of the board of trustees of the Day Kimball hospital that other plans for the proposed nurses' home at that institution are being considered at the present. The official intimated that no definite action on the subject will be taken for several weeks yet.

Deputy Sheriff Charles A. Ayer of Dayville has served two attachments on the ladies' wearing apparel store of Noel E. Durpre and has placed a keeper in charge. This is the second Main street business house to be closed by a sheriff's writ within a month. It was rumored today that Mr. Durpre, who has been in business in Putnam for a number of years, is contemplating the filing of a bankruptcy petition.

The hook and ladder and pumper companies at the central fire station in Union square responded to an alarm this morning which was for a chimney fire at a dwelling on Grove street. The alarm was received at 11:58 a. m. No damage resulted, according to Chief R. E. Thurston, who directed the activities of the firemen.

The condition of State Landscape Commissioner Luther M. Keith, patient at the Day Kimball hospital, was reported as slightly improved today.

In the rural sections farmers are now busying themselves with the task of collecting the sap drippings of the maple trees which were tapped early last week with the beginning of the run. The farmers report that the trees are giving off an unusually large quantity of the fluid this season, which is indicative of a moderate price being placed on maple sugar and syrup.

President Earl C. Rogers of the Northeastern Connecticut Fish and Game club has announced that the annual meeting of the rod and reel club will be held Thursday evening, March 6, in Odd Fellows hall on Pomfret street at 8 o'clock. Of interest to sportsmen in this section is the announcement by Mr. Rogers of the placing by members of the executive committee of 248 cans of trout in streams of Eastford, Putnam, Woodstock, Ashford, Phoenixville, Thompson and Pomfret, during the past year. The committee also released 200 pheasants on hunting grounds in this section. Of especial interest is the fact that 16 cans of trout released in the Mashamoquet brook in Pomfret and the Five Mile river were of the brown trout species.

City Tax Collector Harvey Grinsell is engaged in the collecting of a few unpaid taxes due the municipality. In some cases the collector has been forced to employ drastic action in order to induce delinquent taxpayers to settle the claims of the city.

The school officials were forced to suspend sessions at Putnam high school today because of the frigid temperatures that prevailed within the building this morning, caused by a reaction in the heating system. The school has been closed during the past week for the mid-year recess. Superintendent Farrin said this afternoon that conditions had been adjusted and that school would reopen in the morning. All schools of the public school system opened this morning for the spring term.

WAUREGAN

Among out of town visitors at the presentation of "The Beantown Choir" Friday evening were, Mrs. Isabelle Howe, New London; Mrs. Grace Strickland, Hartford; Lillian Bethel, Auburndale, Mass.; Mildred and Florence Leach of Boston; Gordon Harrower and Doris Hope, Providence; Mrs. Spencer, Worcester; Rev. L. R. Richards and Mrs. Richards and Miss Annie Ashe, Pomfret, with a large number from Plainfield and Central Village. The candy sales during the evening were in charge of Mrs. J. Arthur Atwood and Mrs. Alan Smith. Hearty commendation was given by these visitors of the acting of the local party; outstanding praise being heaped upon Mrs. Gertrude Tracy and Earl Leach and Mrs. Kenneth Filkins for their portrayals of the Widow Wood, Hezekiah Doolittle and Samantha Sniggle respectively.

Miss Mae Leary has returned to her school duties at Plainville, after spending a week at home.

A large congregation attended the church service Sunday morning. A duet was rendered by Mrs. W. Williams and Mrs. G. Tracy. The Lord's supper was celebrated, and a special sermon preached by the pastor, Rev. William Williams.

The Earnest Workers met Monday at the home of Mrs. Eilkins.

RICHARD H. HAMER'S DEATH SADDENS MANY FRIENDS

In the passing away of Richard H. Hamer at his home in Eagleville, Feb. 13th, the community has lost one of its most respected citizens. He came here to live when a small boy. He was overseer of mule spinning for John L. Ross and Son and later for the Eagleville Co. He was a man of sterling character, greatly beloved by many friends and neighbors who mourn his loss. He was a staunch member of the democratic party.

On the Amos Tanner farm at Pierpont, O., are many chicken coops and all of them are automobile hood covers from ancient cars that have been scrapped. A few boards fastened over the ends, with a hole cut for an entrance, and the chickens have a durable, comfortable nesting place. The louvers in the sides give ample ventilation and at the same time exclude rain.

JEWETT CITY

SPECIAL TOWN MEETING OF UNUSUAL SIGNIFICANCE

The selectmen of the town of Griswold met Monday and selected a date for a special town meeting. A tax is to be laid on the assessment of 1929 to meet the current expenses of the town. The meeting will be called upon to take action relative to the appropriation of $3,000 toward the lighting arrangements for the new Quinebaug viaduct. The most important matter to be considered will be that of the proposed revaluation of the taxable property of the town. This is the last year of grace, and action becomes imperative. The provisions relative to this revaluation are a state law, and in event of any town failing to take action, then the state will assign experts to the job and such delinquent towns must pay the bill and stand the new figures, unless there shall be abatements by the board of relief. The grand list of Griswold, according to the assessment of Oct. 1929, is $3,500,495. It is forecasted that the revaluation figures will show something like two million dollars in excess of that amount. The matter to be decided by the town at the coming meeting will be, by what method shall the revaluation be determined. The selectmen, other town officials and many property owners are of the opinion that around $8,000 can be saved by the town, if this work is accomplished by local men. Again, it is pointed out that the home town officials who may be selected would be possessed of the advantage of knowing the town property. On the other hand, if valuation experts were sent here, the expense to the town for their services is estimated at from $12,000 to $14,000, and they would have no knowledge of Griswold's millions of dollars worth of real estate, except such as was gained after they took over the job. The whole revaluation cloud, which has caused such storms of protest in other towns, has a silver lining, when it is seen that with the town property raised in value approximately two millions the town tax will not need to be as high. In short, it is understood that the actual money paid by property owners as taxes will amount to no appreciable excess over what is due April 1st, under the present assessed valuations.

THREE BALTIC BROTHERS ARE FINED IN TOWN COURT

Three Baltic brothers spent 4 hours in the borough Bridewell, following their arrest by Traffic Officer Edward Blake, Sunday noon. The men were Henry, Armand and Edward St. Germain. All three were under the influence of liquor, when the car in which they were riding collided with a machine belonging to Zoel Marion, doing damage estimated at $25. Officer Blake had a lively chase to effect the arrest. In the town court Monday, Henry, guilty of reckless driving, was fined $100 and costs. Armand and Edward drew one dollar and costs each, on charges of intoxication. The Baltic boys produced the bullion and departed. Judge John T. Barry tried the cases. Attorney R. J. Dudkowski prosecuted for the state.

THE VOICE OF THE 1,200

That communication which was sent to the American naval conference delegates by 1,200 Americans, urging a reduction, not merely a limitation of armament, unquestionably represents the sentiment of many more people. There is a firm belief that there should be a cut in the navies, that less money should be spent for them and that there would be no relative lowering of protection if all of the countries participated.

The delegation will unquestionably welcome the expression from the American signers. They may, on the other hand, think that as many more are committed to limitation rather than to reduction, even though they have not heard from them in such a manner. But it is not simply what such a group, one way or the other, may want so much as it is what can be obtained. It isn't what such petitioners urge that is going to swing the conference, although the knowledge as to home sentiment is bound to enhearten the advocates who are representing this country.

It is not to be overlooked that it is not the demands of one country that are going to sway the conference. It will not be the ability of two countries to agree that will effect a complete understanding of the five nations. If three of the nations are able to reach an agreement it does not necessarily mean that the other two will adhere to the understanding, and it is quite evident that if an agreement is reached among a part rather than among all the five participating countries it will be of a different character than as if all were parties to the treaty. Not many among the leaders are going to actually reduce their navies if they know that two or more of them are going to engage in extensive naval construction.

Thus it is a case at London where the delegates must make their best effort and where they must strive for the best results. If it is possible to get an agreement for a reduction of navies, all well and good. It will be a long stride toward peaceful adjustment, but if reduction cannot be secured it would be folly for the delegation to refuse to participate in limitations. We have reason to believe that the American delegates will get the best possible naval treaty agreement at London and most certainly limitation would be preferable to nothing at all. It would simply be a shorter step ahead, but a step in the right direction. It is sometimes easier to demand what is impossible than to get what is needed.

LONGER SCHOOL HOURS

Someone is always bringing forward something new in regard to schools and their conduct. A principal in an Indiana school has advanced the idea of making the school day longer, giving the children the benefit of school room teaching and doing away with the home work.

It is the proposition of this principal that the school day should be from 8 a. m. to 5 p. m., which would be a decided extension from the hours in many schools. Because he has made the suggestion does not mean that it will be adopted, but there are things about it that may get more support from the parents than might be expected. Probably the teachers will object to longer hours, but from the standpoint of the parents it is urged that there is already a feeling that too much is expected from pupils in the way of home work. The children spend less and less time in school and are expected to make it up at home. Naturally they seek the assistance of their parents and they get various responses. Often the help which is given by the parents, even though the result is right, is foreign to the method that is employed at the present time. It is thus of slight help to the child to be given an answer that is obtained one way when he is expected to get and understand the solution by another method.

In support of the longer period in the school room it is contended that this would permit the teacher to give more attention to the pupils, to get her method across instead of leaving the children to the guidance of others. It is bound to make a favorable impression among those who have encountered situations where teachers have declared they were not going to waste their time trying to help those they regarded backward, even though that is the purpose for which they were hired to teach and when a few words of explanation would straighten out the whole lack of understanding.

We imagine the western principal will encounter plenty of difficulty with his proposition, and yet it is perfectly evident that he has been doing some thinking upon a subject that has been interesting others and it may bring a more favorable reaction than he anticipates.

THE HOWELL BILL

Enthusiasm often leads a person to exceed the bounds of good judgment. Such would seem to be the case with the proponents of the Howell bill, advanced in behalf of more effective enforcement work, which would provide authority to search private homes for illegal liquor in Washington.

In order that there might be a better understanding of the wisdom of such legislation it was submitted to the attorney general by the senate's District of Columbia committee and they got a reply to the effect that this would be resorting to more drastic measures than had been adopted throughout the country and its possessions. It would be a case of treating Washington differently than the rest of the country.

This is recognized as an effort to accomplish the drying up of the national capital, but it is the method of doing it that arouses criticism. At the present time it is possible to secure search warrants for homes if there is proof that liquor is being sold therein, but under the proposed law it would be possible to make a raid upon homes by merely indicating that someone thought that there was illegal liquor to be obtained there. It is the gossip feature of the bill that arouses so much opposition.

When the attorney general declares that such a law would arouse controversy with doubtful results he unquestionably recognizes the effect of such legislation. He realizes that it would be a case of putting the law to a test and carrying the test through the courts and it is to be remembered that American citizens have been given to understand that a man's home is his castle and not subject to search and invasion just because of hearsay or flimsy gossip.

Thus the proposal gets a body blow before it really gets started. The opinion of the attorney general may not be the means of abandoning such a course, but it furnishes good and sufficient reason for weighing carefully the points that he has raised and hesitating about seeking such a discriminatory and probably unconstitutional law.

HORSE SENSE

Occasionally we encounter the statement that the horse is disappearing. Horses are by no means what would be called rare these days, but they are seen far less frequently than 25 years ago. There are enough of them, however, to make it necessary to get them acquainted with the ubiquitous automobile and the occasional trolley.

This week there was the interesting spectacle of a horse that cared nothing whatever about an automobile or a string of them, but he was decidedly suspicious of an electric car. This was displayed to such an extent that the person handling him decided that, even though trolleys may be decreasing, it was time to get him acquainted with the fact that there was no more harm in an electric car than in an auto and led him up to the former so that he might look it all over thoroughly, rub his nose against it and gradually come to the conclusion that it was a contraption over which he should have no concern.

It didn't appear that the animal's attitude was due to the fact that it was a horseless carriage, for the fleet of autos which gathered during the performance failed to cause a jump or a snort on his part, but the still electric was an object of fear. Just where the horse had been that it had had an opportunity to become thoroughly reconciled to the auto without getting equally well acquainted with the trolley car is unknown but it was interesting to note that the horse was ready to do all sorts of stunts at the sight of what is on the toboggan like himself, but utterly ignored the vehicle that has done more than anything else to depopularize both the horse and the electric. It didn't seem like good horse sense.

AMBASSADOR WILLYS

Up to this time the United States has never had an ambassador in Poland. Alexander P. Moore was selected for that post but sickness and death interrupted his taking the office.

Now the appointment has been given to John N. Willys of Ohio and it is recognized that President Hoover has not only selected an able representative but one who can be relied upon to do credit to his country and to the office. There can be no surprise that Poland quickly announced that he would be acceptable as ambassador. Mr. Willys has been a successful business man and manufacturer and one who can be depended upon to render high grade diplomatic service. His choice is bound to be recognized with approval in this country as well as in Poland.

Attention cannot fail to have been given to the fine type of citizens who have been named by President Hoover for diplomatic service. They are men who are calculated to effectively interpret the position of this government at the various leading capitals and to deal with all phases of the problems arising between the nations. They are men who have a thorough grasp of financial and economic matters and through their services better relationships should be assured if such is possible.

It is only natural that Poland should be appreciative of the fact that the Warsaw legation has been advanced to an embassy. It has reason for being equally pleased that men of the type of the late A. P. Moore and John N. Willys were selected to administer the duties of that office. Men of such high standing and who enjoy the confidence of government and people have from the first been chosen by the president when opportunity for making appointments came. He has shown that he knows the importance of good men in posts of responsibility.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Windy March, the month for kite flying and nature's tree pruning.

It is impossible to read the accounts of doings at the training camps without knowing that spring is on its way.

The man on the corner says: Perhaps you have gotten the idea the season is a bit early, but this is March all right.

If the parrot disease is forcing people to buy monkeys, isn't it well to be on the guard against a lot of new monkey-shines?

It would seem strange to the rest of the world, and probably China, if a war of some kind wasn't to be started or fought in the far east.

When Canada legislates against the clearance of liquor shipments for this country there will be a chance to see whether Canada is any more successful keeping it in than we are keeping it out.

WASHINGTON AFFAIRS

(Special to The Bulletin)

WASHINGTON, March 3.—Perhaps one of the most unusual matters brought to the attention of a Connecticut member of the house for a long time was a letter received by Floor Leader John Q. Tilson, asking him to take up with the treasury department the matter of salvaging a cargo of gold, supposed to have been on board a British ship that sunk in New York harbor during or just prior to the Revolutionary war.

The letter was from Simon Lake, of New Haven, a recognized inventor, submarine expert and engineer of repute.

Lake believes he has an invention that will locate the treasure, and asked Tilson to take up the matter with the treasury department in order to secure protection from snoopers and those who would "butt in" on him. Col. Tilson has placed the request of Lake in the hands of the treasury department but has as yet received no response.

It seems, according to Lake's letter, that such protection had once been given to a would-be salvager, and Lake merely asks that it be extended to him. The protection which he desires to have passed on to him was granted many years ago, as Lake recalls it, and to some person with whom the Lake family was acquainted, or in some way connected.

The name of the sunken vessel was The Hussar, and the gold was brought from England to pay the British soldiers over here.

Senator Norbeck, of South Dakota, who seldom cracks a smile, was moved to a genuine grin, when he sat listening to the testimony on the Star Spangled Banner, before a sub committee of the house judiciary committee, and watched the expression on the faces of the men, sitting in judgment.

The Norbeck smile did not relate to the aspersions on the words of the anthem; it related to the "tune" as he called it.

Apparently none of the sub-committee are trained musicians and their unmoved facial expressions as they listened for an hour or more to "tests," by hand and voices; to terms such as too wide range—too high; too low, unsingable on account of such and such qualities, or acceptable on account of exactly the reverse qualities, led Senator Norbeck to whisper into my listening ear: "They probably feel exactly as did General Grant when questioned about certain military music. Grant is quoted as replying: 'I know two tunes: one is Yankee Doodle and one isn't.'"

"What about yourself, Mr. Senator?" I queried. And Norbeck merely chuckled, so I assume he, too, comes into the "two tune" class.

Beyond making a favorable report on the bill to give the national anthem congressional sanction, nothing yet has been done. But all the same, the Star Spangled Banner is the official national anthem whether or not congress acts, for under the 1916 executive order of President Wilson it became official and will so remain unless formally rescinded, a step that probably will never be taken.

President Hoover has set another precedent, and this one seems to meet with very general approval. It is asking assistant secretaries of a department to attend cabinet meetings, in the enforced absence of the secretary himself.

As a result there are two substitute members at the regular cabinet meetings, while Secretary of State Stimson and Secretary of the Navy Adams are attending the conference in Paris.

Assistant Secretary of State Cotton and Assistant Secretary of the Navy Jahnke represent those departments at all cabinet meetings and take over temporarily the social official rank as heads of the departments.

Up to the incoming of the Hoover administration it has been the custom of presidents to keep in touch with the departments, under similar circumstances, with the acting heads, but not to include them in cabinet meetings.

The new method is said to be very satisfactory. Vice President Curtis attends every cabinet meeting, but as a "looker-on" only, he takes no part in the discussion, so it is said. Of course, no one but the president and the cabinet and vice president are present, so if Mr. Curtis was consulted, the world at large would be none the wiser.

Senator "Pat" Sullivan, of Wyoming, who is filling a vacancy caused by the death of the late Senator Warren of Wyoming, is lamenting that his state did not have a special election and thus cut down his term of service to the three months limit, which he had expected, when he took the office early in the winter.

Senator Sullivan is longing for freedom from daily sessions and the confines of city life now spring and summer is approaching. "Senator Pat" dearly loves a life in the wilds; he longs for his big house, its big grounds and the home-coming of "the children," as he continues to call his family of "grown-ups." That big house has always been open to the children and their friends—here they come in summer or winter, bringing with them any of their comrades they choose. The open hills, the open country and the open house is Senator Sullivan's standard of American home life.

The call of the wild and the call of the home run side by side in the heart of the Senator Pat, whose delicious Irish brogue is in no way lessened by his life at the capitol.

It will take a strong rope and a hitching post to keep Wyoming's junior senator tied up to the senate after a genuine Washington summer is at hand. Senator Sullivan has declined to be a candidate for election, his present service comes by appointment, and though he enjoys it and its power and prestige, he wouldn't take a six-year term if it were offered him on a platter.

New England potatoes vs. Idaho potatoes bid fair to be a bone of contention in the national house of representatives restaurant. Congressman Snow, of Maine, has got his dander up because Idaho potatoes are featured as a specialty on the house bill of fare, and, moreover, printed in good sized type and red ink, whereas Maine doesn't figure at all. Just plain "potaties" at five cents less an order being their only mention.

Snow has spoken right out in meetin' about it. He says that unless Maine gets in as a specialty, in as big type and red ink, he will raise cain till he gets Idaho potatoes off the list as a specialty.

He calls it propaganda, and says the "murpries" from Maine won't take second place, if he knows it.

Senator Copeland, of New York, stood his ground against Brookhart when the latter was asserting that the west is in more dire distress than New York ever could be, through poverty and privation. The debate related to those suffering from unemployment and hunger.

Copeland finally closed the debate with this: "Poverty in New York is worse than in Iowa. Out there you can go and kill an old rooster and get food that will maintain life. In New York, poverty hasn't anything to feed on unless it takes a bite out of the sidewalk."

THE LOST VACATION

The morning was hot. Mr. Carew was cross. Maryanna arranged a pile of notes beside her typewriter and sighed. "Only two more weeks until vacation." Then with unprecedented vigor she began the task of copying. This year's vacation held a magic meaning because the trip that she had dreamed of taking for so long would become a reality. Yes, she could endure Mr. Carew's worst tantrums with a smile. Jimmy Lathrop breezed into the office and paused beside her desk.

"Hello, Maryanna."

Maryanna was glad to see Jimmy again. Often he used to take her out to dinner or to a show. She had enjoyed those evenings, and Jimmy had seemed to enjoy them too. Then for no apparent reason, he had stopped asking her for dates. The firm finally transferred him to the road.

"Will you take dinner with me tonight?" asked Jimmy, as if the habit had never been broken.

Maryanna smiled her answer. Mr. Carew appeared with a menacing look, and Jimmy immediately vanished.

"Take this telegram," snarled Carew, and Maryanna reached for her pencil and pad of clean paper. "John Holcome, General Products company, Des Moines. Big change. New manager. General shift. Does proposition of last spring still hold?"

A pall fell over Maryanna's spirits. "New manager." That meant that Carew was losing his job. "General shift." That concerned the present employes. She saw her vacation vanish, saw her little pile of spending money, hoarded away for this gala occasion, dwindle and disappear under the pressure of room rent, food and clothes.

"What's the matter?" asked Blanch Kirby, a file clerk, at noon when she found Maryanna beside her locker, daubing her eyes with a handkerchief.

"Nothing," lied Maryanna, and flung miserably out of the office. Unconsciously her feet turned in their familiar noonday haunts. Beside a window in which exclusive sport costumes were usually displayed, she paused. Today, a bridal gown occupied the space. Maryanna sighed and passed on, thinking, "I can't even have a vacation. I'm going to be fired."

At the next corner she bought a newspaper and then entered a cafeteria, where she nibbled a sandwich and scanned the "help wanted" column of the paper.

Disconsolately she walked back to the office. All afternoon the door of Mr. Carew's private office was closed, but the murmur of voices within seeped to the outer room. Toward closing time, the door opened, and two strange men and Jimmy came out of the private office. The strangers walked ahead. Jimmy stopped a second because Maryanna's desk.

"Carew's gone," he whispered, "and they're given me his job."

Suddenly a wild, crazy feeling took possession of Maryanna. She had never thought of Jimmy's being made manager. Jimmy would not fire her. Of course not. Wasn't he taking her out to dinner that evening?

Across the table, Jimmy prodded his food with nervous little jerks. To the radiant Maryanna, he finally said, "I want you to quit your job."

Suddenly the air in the room seemed to smother and choke Maryanna. The scene which had been so gay lost itself in a dizzy blurr. She tried to steady herself by holding to the arms of the chair in which she sat, and her finger nails bit tenaciously into the varnish. So that was it—he had only asked her to dinner to make the telling easier. Jimmy was firing her. She was losing both her job and her vacation. She tried to speak, to rise, but she could command neither motion nor voice.

Then in the maze of this new endeavor, Jimmy's words filtered through to her understanding. "I could not ask you before on the salary that I was getting, and I never thought I'd like to have my wife work. They're sending me to Europe this fall, and we can make that opportunity a wedding trip, only I want you to marry me much sooner if you will, tomorrow, next week. Tell me, darling, will you? Do you care? Will you forfeit your job and your vacation for me?"

And a bewildered but happy Maryanna whispered in return, "Under the circumstances, I'd rather lose my job and my vacation than anything else in the whole wide world."—Exchange.

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, March 3—Secretary Stimson seems to have been well advised in planning for his London naval conference pilgrimage, although he hardly could have expected that a French cabinet crisis and a Japanese general election would come within the conference period to slow things up.

Stimson clearly was never optimistic as to the speed that could be made. He has the means and the habit of "doing himself well," as the Britishers say.

Watches Waistline

When he came to Washington to be a member of the Hoover cabinet, he promptly acquired by purchase one of the show places of the city as his residence.

Similarly, when plans for the London peace pilgrimage were worked out, it developed that Mr. Stimson had leased an out-of-town place over there. He said himself that it had been selected with an eye to adjacent golf courses.

The secretary is at that age where he dare not take his attention off his waistline. His young manhood was much devoted to pastimes that involved active physical exercise. That he has no intention of permitting the London pow-wow to interfere with his program for limitation of secretarial girth, is quite clear.

And the proof of it comes in letters from London saying that on various days during the let-up, while the French delegation figured out where the Paris political upset had left it, Mr. Stimson with other Americans devoted his time to golf.

Less Press Shy

If London cables are to be credited, Mr. Stimson also has been doing some constructive thinking about state department organization.

He is described as planning to recall Minister Hugh Wilson from Switzerland for appointment as an assistant secretary primarily charged with setting up and maintaining departmental contacts with the press. Wilson has been doing that for the delegation in London.

Also, he's about the only career diplomat of experience in that line, for he served under Secretaries Hughes and Kellogg as chief of the state department press section.

The interesting thing about the reported new deal is the indication that Mr. Stimson's attitude toward the press is changing. He seemed press-shy when he first took over at the state department. Now he is considering raising the press angle of his job to the dignity of an assistant secretaryship.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Beneath the Silvery Moon

Mr. Editor: We have now reached the month of March. It is the fag end of winter; and I wonder if the young folks have been out to a sleighing party in a big bob sleigh with a couple of good horses, plenty of blankets and with lots of straw in the body of the sleigh. Out somewhere in the country we used to go in different directions, perhaps Jewett City or Voluntown or Baltic, for there were many places where we would get the call; some place where there was an alluring prospect of having a good time, with dancing as the principal item. I wonder how many can give an idea of the many different dances of those early days. Usually there were 12 numbers and then repeat—the so-called grand march, then perhaps a waltz, schottische, polka, lancers, Virginia reel, quadrilles and contra dances. These were given over and over, and as a grand finale as the minstrel men would say, we would have a dreamy waltz of Home Sweet Home. Those were the days of real dances. And how we would enjoy the trip to the place we were going with singing. Snugly tucked into the sleigh, we didn't give a thought of the distance, for it seemed all too soon when we arrived there. And what a wonderful moonlight night, not a cloud in the sky! The silvery moon looked as big in the sky as a great big disc of silver. And the wonderful music of those bells over the glistening snow through the silent frosty night rang out the chimes in the times when the boys and girls were young and husky. What wonderful rosy cheeks the girls had, for they had been painted by the icy fingers of Jack Frost, who was on the job and was working overtime, and they seemed as happy as the waves that danced on the sea.

But on this particular night we are due at Whiting's hall in Jewett City, and we of course must warm our fingers before the big pot-bellied stove. What a contrast as of today when one enters some of the many dance palaces. Then the floors were waxed to give a semblance of smoothness and now in some of the night clubs of today with all their tawdry finery it never gives a return of real pleasure that we used to get in those country halls of long ago. The difference in the cost then and now; for then you would get all you wanted for no more than a dollar, and now you have a cover charge and you even get a check for the water you drink. Then one would get a real feed, for looking into the kitchen you would see the cook busy with the oysters that were being gotten ready in a big wash boiler on the stove. Then you received an honest return for your money and now the whole thought is to "gyp" you. It is done in a fine, scientific style, nothing to eat, lots of show and plenty to pay. Soon, all too soon, the evening's pleasure is over, and then to all a happy good night, or, to be more correct, a good morning. Then back into the sleigh. What scrambling to get to your place in the sleigh, or was it to get near to the girl? Then for a ten-mile ride back to your home and we must leave each girl at her own door. When you arrived at the door of your own girl and you try to kiss her good bye how the crowd would tell you to break away, and all the time they were looking for the same opportunity. I am telling your story, not mine; of course not. Then off we go, and we hear the sleigh bells jingle. As the sleigh runners crinkle on the snow with a soft and musical sound, you all join in and sing that song that apparently everyone knew and it seems as though it was saved for sleighing parties only—From Aunt Dinah's Quilting Party I Was Seeing Nellie Home. Then you knew emotion and a happiness you had never known before. As the song rises, and with it your spirits, you look toward the eastern sky and you can see the heavens glorious with the crimson and gold that heralds the coming of another day, for the night is nearly done, and so you move along. Someone has started to sing that old song that means everything in our lives, Home Sweet Home, and so you go happy and care-free. You breathe the clear air with a little tang in it. With the moon just leaving behind the western hills, the last good night is said. All this forever sings itself in memory; those splendid boys and girls who for a few brief hours have lived but a short remove from heaven. What happiness was ours as we traveled in the moonlight in the long ago. All this is just the mocking echoes of departed youth.

C. H. "DAD" SHAW.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORY

Peter Cannot Forget

Your memory may be poor and yet
Some things there are you can't forget.
—Peter Rabbit.

Curiosity is a most provoking thing. It will not let you forget when you want to forget. Peter Rabbit never went over to the Green Forest that he didn't remember what Whitefoot the Wood Mouse had told him about his winter home. Just the sight of the edge of the Green Forest would remind Peter of Whitefoot's secret and immediately arouse Peter's curiosity. He wasted a lot of time hunting for that

The first one Peter asked was his cousin, Jumper the Hare home of Whitefoot's. Sometimes he saw Whitefoot, but more often he didn't. When he did see Whitefoot it was always near the place where he had met Whitefoot when the latter had told him about that home.

Now, many pairs of eyes are better than just one pair. At least, that is what Peter Rabbit thought. "If I can't find Whitefoot's home myself, perhaps someone else can," said he. "The thing to do is to ask questions."

The first one Peter asked was his cousin, Jumper the Hare, who lives in the Green Forest. "Cousin Jumper," said Peter, "do you happen to know where Whitefoot the Wood Mouse is living this winter?"

Jumper scratched a long ear with a long hindfoot. "No, I don't, Peter," said he. "Now you mention the matter, it occurs to me that I haven't seen Whitefoot all winter. I do hope nothing has happened to him. I am rather fond of the little fellow."

"I can set your mind at rest on that score," said Peter. "Nothing has happened to him. Anyway, nothing had happened to him up to a few nights ago, for I saw him then. He was over on the very edge of the Green Forest."

"That explains it," said Jumper. "I seldom go over to the edge of the Green Forest. It must be that he has moved over there."

"Do you think so?" cried Peter. "I hadn't thought of that. I have always thought of Whitefoot as living in the Green Forest, so I supposed he had simply wandered a long way from home."

"You may be certain he hasn't done that," replied Jumper. "Whitefoot never wanders very far from his home. You may be sure that his home is not a great way from where you saw him. I am glad to know that he is alive and all right."

"Oh, he was very much alive and quite all right when I last saw him," said Peter. "He was looking unusually well. And he told me that he has one of the best homes he has ever had."

"Didn't he tell you where it is? Or didn't you ask him?" inquired Jumper.

"Oh, I asked him all right," replied Peter, "but he wouldn't give me so much as a hint. I suppose it must be in a stump, or under a stump, or in a hollow log, or in some old home of Drummer the Woodpecker. I shall have a good look over there now."

"It may be under ground, you know," said Jumper. "Sometimes Whitefoot makes his home under ground."

YOUR INCOME TAX

Business property kept in repair may be the subject of a depreciation allowance. The allowance for depreciation is intended to cover the estimated lessening in value of the original property, due to wear and tear, decay, etc., which in time will require the abandonment or replacement of the property, in spite of ordinary current repairs. The cost of incidental repairs, which neither materially add to the value of the property nor appreciably prolong its life, may be deducted as a business expense, provided the plant or property account is not increased by the amount of such expenditures.

If, however, the repairs are of such a kind as to make good the depreciation, for example, a new floor or a new roof, the cost is not deductible. The amount expended by a taxpayer during the taxable year for improvements, replacements, or renewals of a permanent nature is a capital expenditure, and may not be deducted from the gross income for such taxable year. The amount so expended should be charged directly to the property account or to a depreciation reserve account, according to how depreciation is treated in the taxpayer's books of account. A prorate portion thereof may be deducted as depreciation each year of the life of such improvement.

YOUR HEALTH

THE IMPORTANCE OF DIET

By Max Einhorn, M. D.
New York.

(From Gorgas Memorial Institute)

Diet comprises all substances necessary for the upbuilding and upkeep of the living organism. These are usually designated as foods and drinks. A great variety of plant and animal material serves this purpose. While it is possible to live on animal foods alone, or on vegetable material, with the exclusion of animal matter, the best diet consists of a combination of these two classes of foods. All nutriments contain proteins, carbohydrates, fats, some mineral salts and vitamins in different quantities. The amount of food necessary can be calculated for each individual and varies with the weight of the person in question and the amount of work done.

In health and disease practically the same nutriments are required, the only difference being their consistency, liquid and semi-fluid forms being preferable in disease.

Inasmuch as it is impossible to cover the entire subject of diet in short space, I shall give a few axioms which can be considered helpful.

1. In health our sensations (hunger, satiety, thirst) are correct guides to the amount of food and fluid needed. Not so, however, in disease, for here the natural safeguards are frequently lacking. For this reason the physician must take charge of a correct regime for the quality and quantity of nutriment of his patient.

2. Dietary fads are never beneficial and sometimes lead to the development of conditions endangering life. A one-sided diet may be used with benefit for a number of days, but never for a long period of time. Artificially manufactured, easily assimilable food preparations and dietary regimes, consisting of liquid and pureed foods, with the exclusion of nutriments in any other state, are applicable for a week or two, but not advisable as a steady mode of living.

3. An insufficient diet is always harmful. It undermines the body in health, and quickly leads to destruction when the body is invaded by disease.

4. Overnutrition can create metabolic disturbances and lay the foundation of diseases (gout, chronic arthritis, corpulence, diabetes, etc).

5. In chronic conditions an adequate diet must be given, containing food material of all the three nutritive groups (proteins, carbohydrates and fats) in sufficient quantities to protect the organism from any loss of its tissues. None of the three elementary groups mentioned should ever be omitted entirely. The diet should resemble as much as possible the normal.

6. In acute diseases of short duration give small quantities of food, but plenty of fluids (lemonade, orangeade, plain water, mineral water, weak tea). Two to three quarts of liquid must be ingested daily.

The science of nutrition forms the basis of the art of healing. Diet, correctly applied, is the physician's best ally in helping him to preserve health, prevent and combat disease, and frequently prolong life.

From Sept. 1929 until Feb. 17th a total of over $4,269 has been deposited in school savings by pupils of Rockville and vicinity, as announced by Kenneth M. White, director of school savings for Rockville Savings bank. Vernon pupils have saved $2,132.22, Ellington $1,126.41, Somers $775.34 and Tolland $104.17.

OBITUARY

Andrew H. Breed

Following a long illness Andrew H. Breed, well known heating and plumbing contractor, died at 5:30 o'clock Monday morning at his home, No. 180 Broadway. Mr. Breed was born in Norwich, July 18, 1849, the son of Edward and Harriet Lee Hebard Breed, and was a descendant of New England ancestry dating back to the early Colonial period. Attending the common schools until the age of 18 he shipped on the steamer City of Norwich, running between Norwich and New York. Mr. Breed was advanced to the post of assistant engineer and was transferred to the steamer City of Lawrence after running on that boat for five years.

Mr. Breed continued in the capacity of assistant engineer for seven years, and then was employed for two years in the works of Thomas Drummond at Thamesville. He next entered the employ of the Norwich Belt company, at their tannery in Greeneville, and for six years had charge of the machinery there. His next position was as chief engineer of the "Julia," which ran between Mystic, Fishers Island and New London, where he remained for a year.

In company with Joseph P. Monaher, Mr. Breed established a plumbing,

Mr. Breed was united in marriage with Hannah E. Sweet on Sept. 23, 1874 and to this union were born four children, two of whom survive him as follows: A son, Edward, and a daughter, Mrs. Frank W. Holms.

Mr. Breed was a member of the republican party and was twice elected to the court of common council. In 1901 he was elected a councilman and in 1903 an alderman. He also served as chairman of the school board of the West Chelsea district for a time.

In the death of Mr. Breed Norwich loses one of its most valuable citizens and a person who has had the welfare of the city at heart. Of a genial and pleasing personality he easily made lifelong friendships, and was highly respected by all who knew him.

The news of his passing was learned with profound sorrow by his numerous friends and acquaintances and the sympathy of the community is extended the bereaved family.

COMMON COUNCIL ADOPTS ORDINANCE GOVERNING LOCAL SALE OF MILK

Following lengthy arguments, pro and con, the court of common council, at its March meeting, Monday evening, unanimously adopted a new city ordinance governing the sale of milk in Norwich. By the provisions of the new ordinance all milk, sold in Norwich, must be produced by tuberculin tested cows or be pasteurized.

With the spectators chairs all filled and a number of persons interested in the ordinance forced to stand, the meeting was called to order at 8:07 o'clock by Mayor Lee Roy Robbins. After the new ordinance, which was introduced at the April meeting of the council, had been read by City Clerk Weston C. Pullen, Mayor Robbins declared the advertised hearing open for arguments. The mayor announced that those opposed to the ordinance would be heard first.

Attorney Telley E. Babcock, representing farmers whose herds have not been tuberculin tested and who are engaged in the sale of milk in the city, opposed the provisions of the ordinance. He stated that pasteurized milk tastes to him as if it were medicated, and that it loses its freshness in the process. He called attention to the fact that milk, in being pasteurized, is heated to a temperature of 145 degrees, for a period of 30 minutes and that cream is heated to a temperature, three degrees less, for the same period of time. He stated that pasteurized milk is not as palatable as fresh milk.

With regard to tuberculin tested milk, Attorney Babcock stated that the tuberculin test is not a sure test. He called attention to the fact that the local milk supply is under the supervision of the local milk inspector, who not only inspects the milk but also inspects barns and milking appliances.

He inquired whether health conditions locally necessitated the adoption of the ordinance. He went on to state that there have been no local fatalities due to the milk supply. Mr. Babcock questioned the validity of the ordinance. He inferred that local milk consumers were satisfied with the milk inspection provisions that have been in force.

Mr. Babcock explained that if the cows are tuberculin inspected the consumers would be compelled to pay an increased price of 5 to 10 cents a quart for milk. Unless the state can take up this matter in a universal way, it seems to me, he said, that there is no necessity for passing this ordinance, he said. If it is good for Norwich, why not for the state of Connecticut? he inquired. He advocated a state law, rather than a local law. I hope you will refuse to pass this ordinance, he said.

Mayor Robbins asked Attorney Babcock, that if the ordinance were passed, if the price of milk would be 5 to 10 cents more a quart. Mr. Babcock answered that he had been so advised by the farmers. He went on to say that the farmers with tubercline tested cows are selling milk at a loss.

Mayor Robbins called attention to the fact that there are two groups selling milk in Norwich, one group represented by Mr. Babcock, and the other group who have tuberculin tested cows. The mayor inquired whether the latter group are selling their milk at a loss.

Theoretically, yes, answered Mr. Babcock.

James Butler, of Preston, said that he has been selling milk in Norwich for 25 years. I am still selling milk to some of my first customers, he said. I don't believe that a person can contract bovine tuberculosis from drinking milk, he said. I don't believe there is any protection through tuberculin tested cows. He explained that he has 162 customers and that only 11 would prefer milk from tuberculin tested cows. Therefore it wouldn't pay me to have my cows tuberculin tested, he said. I would lose a lot of money. It seems to me that the only man who wants to put this through is Dr. (Clarence G.) Thompson.

Mr. Butler stated that he has been leaving fresh milk to two veterinarians and a local physician, who he said gave up pasteurized milk in preference to his milk. All of them are satisfied with my milk, he said.

Mr. Butler said that there doesn't seem to be a ghost of a show of getting cattle tuberculin tested for a long time. He said that one of his neighbors had applied to the state to have his cattle tuberculin tested and received a letter to the effect that it would be a long time before the work could be done, as there were applications on hand a year old. In answer to a question from the mayor, Mr. Butler said that if tuberculin tested cows were a sure test, he would be the first man to have it done.

Mayor Robbins asked for a show of hands of those against the ordinance. The resulting show of hands was meager.

State Health Representative Heard

The mayor then stated that the hearing was open to those in favor of the ordinance. Dr. Clarence G. Thompson, city milk inspector, who proposed the ordinance, introduced Dr. Millard Knowlton, of Hartford, representative of the state department of health. Dr. Knowlton said that the city of Norwich is to be congratulated for taking up this matter as a protection for the health of the city. He went on to say that it was not long ago that Norwich had an outbreak of typhoid fever. There were nine cases and one death, due to the fact that there was a carrier in the family of one of the milk men. If the milk had been pasteurized there would not have been these nine cases and one fatality, he said.

Dr. Knowlton gave illustrations of children who became victims of tuberculosis as a result of drinking milk that had not been pasteurized, or produced by tuberculin tested cows. He spoke of other diseases that are caused by milk not properly treated.

Dr. Knowlton cited instances in cities where outbreaks of diseases have been stopped through pasteurized milk. "I want to commend you for your action in requiring greater safeguards of your local milk supply," he concluded.

"Is it true that there is any unpleasant taste to pasteurized milk?" asked the mayor.

Dr. Knowlton answered that there is if the milk is heated more than pasteurization requires. There is a cooked taste, he said.

"If the milk is properly pasteurized you cannot detect any difference in taste?" asked the mayor.

"You couldn't tell the difference," answered the doctor.

Larger Cities Have Ordinances

Dr. Knowlton explained that practically all of the larger cities of the state have ordinances similar to the proposed ordinance, in answer to a question from the mayor. These ordinances require milk from tuberculin tested cows or pasteurized milk, Dr. Knowlton said.

William Warner, of Hartford, showed the trend and idea of the consuming public in regard to pasteurized or tuberculin tested milk. He gave numerous statistics regarding tuberculin tested cows and said that in 28 of the largest cities of the United States, 97 per cent of the milk used is pasteurized. He said that Commissioner Johnson had told him that by either October or next January that he would have sufficient money to have the cattle in this section of the state tuberculin tested.

Mayor Robbins wanted to know how many cities in the state have ordinances similar to the proposed local ordinance. Mr. Warner answered that all of the larger cities have such ordinances. Willimantic, Rockville and Danbury have none, he said, but the latter two are thinking about adopting such ordinances.

"Have you any idea of the percentage of cows tested," was another question asked by the mayor.

County Agent Walter T. Clarke, of the New London County Farm bureau, in answering this question, said that 87,000 cows in the state, about 77 per cent, and in the county, 43 per cent of the cows have been tested.

Dr. Hugh B. Campbell, superintendent of Uncas-on-Thames, said that any effort to minimize the most terrible scourge, tuberculosis, would be worth while.

Believes in Pasteurization

Elmer Browning, of this city, stated that he has been selling tuberculin tested milk for the last two years and that he had recently purchased a pasteurization plant, meaning to pasteurize all of his milk. I certainly believe in pasteurization, he said.

Dwight A. Beebe, of Boston, who has been engaged in the milk business for 25 years, said that in Vermont the farmer even used pasteurized skim milk for their calves. He believed there would be only a slight increase in the price of milk, if pasteurized under present methods.

Mr. Butler asked Dr. Knowlton if the children he spoke of had died from bovine tuberculosis. The reply was that Dr. Knowlton did not know.

Mayor Robbins then asked for a show of hands of those in favor of the ordinance. There were about 25 who signified in this manner that they are in favor of the ordinance, this number including a dozen milk men.

Hyman Bass, of Thamesville, opposed to the ordinance, said that the milk sold in the city today is very pure. The milk shipped to Boston and New York, has, of necessity, to be pasteurized, because it has to travel a long distance, he said. The milk sold here, he added is delivered immediately after milking.

At the close of the hearing at 9:20 o'clock the council recessed to the mayor's office where they were in executive session until 11:45 o'clock. Reconvening at that hour the mayor asked the city clerk to read the ordinance as proposed with a slight change as suggested by Mr. Warner. The change is to the effect that pasteurization shall be according to law, rather than by specifications as provided by the Connecticut Milk Regulation board. The ordinance was then adopted.

Petitions Received

The meeting then proceeded to the transaction of regular business. Petitions were received and referred as follow:

From Roger Worthington, asking an estimate for the construction of a catch basin, change of grade, etc., on Palmer street. Referred to the public works committee.

From John A. Cunningham, for a street light on Summit street; referred to the police committee with power.

From Mary J. Connor, injured in a fall on Washington street, February 17th. She asks for damages of $250. Referred to the corporation counsel and finance committee.

Traffic Ordinance Changes

The following changes in the local parking and traffic ordinances were proposed by Alderman Frederick J. Ortmann, chairman of the board of police commissioners:

The ordinance was received and action was deferred until the April meeting of the council, at which time there will be a public hearing.

Named To Zoning Board

Mayor Robbins announced the resignation of Max Hanover as a member of the zoning board of appeals because of ill health. The mayor then announced the appointment of Alexander M. Pasnik as Mr. Hanover's successor to serve out the unexpired term which expires August 31, 1932. The appointment was approved.

The mayor's appointments of Henry F. Parker and William A. Norton as members of the board of park commissioners to succeed themselves for terms of three years, from April 1st were approved by the council.

Alderman Maurice Looby announced that the public works committee declined to accept Mohegan park road as a city street.

The police committee reported that in response to petitions, electric lights have been installed on Dunham street and on Union street, opposite the telephone exchange.

The monthly reports of the city treasurer and street commissioner were received and accepted and the following monthly department bills were approved:

MUCH INTEREST DEVELOPS IN PLAY WRITING CONTEST

Unexpected interest has been shown in the second New England health playwriting contest for high schools, according to an announcement made Monday at the office of the state tuberculosis commission in the capitol, under whose direction the competition is being conducted in this state. Approximately 40 cities and towns in Connecticut have indicated interest in the contest, which is open to all high schools, junior high schools, private and parochial schools of the same grade. With nearly a month remaining for schools to submit one-act health plays dealing with some phase of community or individual health, the commission feels confident that the Connecticut high schools have a very good chance of winning one of the three prizes offered by the New England conference on tuberculosis, at Boston. Prizes of $100, $50 and $25 will be offered in the New England contest, while awards of $25, $15 and $10, will be made in the state competition.

Plays will be received at the office of the commission at the capitol until April 1st, and will be considered by a committee of judges consisting of Dr. Helen R. Miller, of West Hartford, William M. Harris, of Waterbury, and a representative of the commission. The best play selected by this committee will be sent to Boston for consideration in the larger contest.

NORWICH-TAFTVILLE SOLICITORS ARE TOO INSISTENT AT NEW LONDON

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, March 3.—Harold Holmes, 33, of Norwich Town and Wilby Dufault, 26, of 71 Norwich avenue, Taftville, salesmen, were arrested this afternoon by Automobile Patrol Officer Clarence Martin and all because Holmes went to the residence of the officer during his absence and used objectionable methods by which he hoped to secure magazine subscriptions. Holmes is charged with breach of the peace and violation of the vendor's license law and his bail was fixed at $100. Dufault is charged with violation of the vendor's law and bail in his case was fixed at $25. Both men will be in the police court tomorrow.

Holmes and Dufault were in the vicinity of Bayonet street about noon and in making a canvass of houses of that section of the city the former went to Martin's house. Mrs. Martin appeared at the door in answer to the ringing of the bell and when she opened the door, it is claimed, Holmes inserted his foot in the opening, at the same time offering his subscriptions. When informed that Mrs. Martin was not interested in subscribing, Holmes, it is alleged, forced his way into the house, declaring he desired to "get warm." Once inside the house, Holmes again endeavored to sell his subscriptions and, it is claimed, started to caress Mrs. Martin. The latter ordered Holmes from the house, also informed the salesman that her husband was a police officer. Holmes left and joined his colleague. A short time later Martin arrived at his home and was informed of Holmes' conduct. The officer instituted a search for the two men and found the pair on Vauxhall street, where they were arrested.

Stolen Bus Got By

A bus of the Shore Line Transportation company was stolen in Saybrook Sunday night and this morning it was found in Westerly, abandoned. The bus passed through New London and officers were on the lookout for it as were state police officers in Groton, but the driver succeeded in taking such routes as to avoid detection.

MARIAN LEWIS' MISTAKE—INVITED WRONG GENTLEMAN

Marian Lewis, colored, proprietress of a resort at 110 Potter street, but three doors from the police garage, was in the police court today charged with conducting a disorderly house. Pearl Ring, 19, colored, of Yonkers, N. Y.; Eva Jones, 32, colored, of New York, and Harold Gawthorpe and Cecil Hughes, both white and sailors, were charged with frequenting. The Lewis woman's case was continued to Thursday next when sentence will be imposed. She has been convicted of conducting a disorderly house or a house of ill repute six times within 15 months. The Ring woman was fined $25 and costs, for it was her second appearance in court within a month on the same charge. The Jones woman was fined $10 and costs, as was Gawthorpe, who has been before the court on a previous occasion for the same charge. The count against Hughes was nolled as it was his first appearance in court. Probation Officer Richard W. Mansfield was passing through Potter street Friday night and one of the Negresses gave him a cordial invitation to enter the resort, so Saturday night a watch of the house was made and when Gawthorpe and Hughes entered a raiding squad was formed. When the officers entered the house the three women and two men were seated in one of the living rooms. Gawthorpe tried to make his escape by running to a rear entrance and Hughes attempted to escape by crawling through a window. Both were intercepted and locked up, with the three women.

Andrew Pedro, city laborer, was sentenced to ten days in jail on a charge of breach of the peace, but execution of the sentence was suspended. Pedro was arrested Saturday and within 24 hours after his case on the same charge had been continued until March 31.

Frank Sistare, 32, of Fishers Island, charged with interfering with an officer, was fined $10 and costs. Sistare was at the pier of the Fishers Island Navigation company Saturday afternoon when the body of Jabez B. Ladd was found floating in the Thames river. While Automobile Patrol Officer Augustus Ray was securing the body until the arrival of Medical Examiner Charles Kaufman, Sistare continually interfered with the officer and his acts resulted in Sistare's arrest. Sistare had been drinking, but could not have been arrested on a charge of intoxication for he was fully possessed of his faculties.

Alex Thevered, sailor, was charged with breach of the peace and intoxication and was fined an aggregate amount of $15 and costs. He was arrested at the Coffee Pot, Main street restaurant, Sunday morning.

Cosmos Michael, 36 Truman street, was charged with violation of the state motor vehicle law in passing an automatic danger signal. The case was continued to Thursday next.

Antone Roderick, 9 Cliff street, Stonington, charged with passing an automatic danger signal, corner of Crystal avenue and Main street, was fined $5.

Herbert Lebree was charged with begging and intoxication and was fined $20.

A dozen other cases of intoxication were tried as a result of the efforts of the police to rid North Bank street and vicinity of a batch of men who loiter about that section of the city, drunk. One man was fined $10 and costs and the others were given suspension of judgment.

Wounded By Frank Lipka

Patrolman Edward Riordan resumed duty Saturday after having been absent from the force several months. Riordan was shot by Frank Lipka, gunman and robber, when the officer intercepted Lipka on Broad street at a time when the former was retreating from the city after having committed three robberies, one a hold-up. The wound the officer received in the leg has disabled him since that date.

COUNCIL'S RETRENCHMENT POLICY DOES NOT SUIT ALL

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, March 3.—At the city council meeting this evening it developed that there would be considerable objection to the adoption of the appropriation ordinance as submitted to the council. The ordinance calls for the appropriation of $1,713,877 for expenses of the city the ensuing year. Objection was made also to the elimination of $27,000 for public works and $4,000 for the public library.

Councilor May strenuously opposed the elimination of the money for public works to pay for the employment of idle men. He also objected to the abatement of $4,000 for the public library, quoting library appropriations in the cities of Bristol, $10,000; Danbury, $14,500; Middletown, $15,000; Norwich, $6,500; West Hartford, $16,000, as against New London's $4,000. These others are cities of comparable size to New London. He read figures showing the cost of maintenance of the library. He said that in these times of idleness people visit the library more frequently and that if they could not get good and healthful books they would get bad ones.

Councilor Fox alluded to the statement as propaganda and said the money was not for books, but for salaries. He declared that the trustees of the library must realize that they have to make sacrifice this year and said the taxpayers make a greater sacrifice in foregoing the appropriation. He said the council had done everything possible to keep the taxes down and that the payment of the taxes was a great burden upon many.

Councilor May resented the reference to propaganda and said his statements were facts and facts only.

Mrs. Emily C. Spiers sent a communication which was read, objecting to the cutting off of the $4,000 for the library. She said the money was well spent and that it was spent for the educational improvement of its patrons, women and children. The matter was referred to the finance committee, having the preparation of the budget.

City Engineer Waters presented a statement of a plan for improvement of the water service to accommodate the Coast Guard academy. It showed that the academy would use 175,000 gallons of water daily and that the city must provide additional service and a new reservoir, also more pumps, increasing these to four, it must have an additional supply main. The estimated cost of the pipe would be $14,000 and the total needed for the work $30,000.

The director of law met with the members of the council after the meeting and went over the matter of the status of the coast guard proposition, explaining the situation up to this time.

The secretary of the zoning board of appeals asked for the privilege of erecting a four-car garage on two family lots.

The board of school visitors, having been invited to meet with the council in the council chamber, reported that they had not come to an understanding yet, but would reach one later.

Thomas S. McGinley put in a claim for $682.36 for liability insurance on the ferryboat during the lease of Charles Willard, of Groton. He claimed it protected the city during that time. The matter was referred to the director of law.

The board of school visitors, trustees of Bulkeley and W. M. I. will meet with the council as a committee of finance Wednesday. Councilor May objected to this and said that the school trustees should meet with the committee on education, of which he is chairman. Councilor Fox pointed out that this was a matter purely of finance and should go to the committee on finance. That was the action taken by the council.

Tax Collector Manwaring made his report, showing $104,000 in uncollected taxes to March 1.

Eight building permits were granted.

The council was in session an hour and a half, 28 minutes of which were consumed in the reading of minutes.

Mrs. Esther Lampert, of 202 North Bank street; Mrs. Robert Menzie, 119 Riverview avenue; Mrs. John Kelly, 163 Pequot avenue; Floyd Grove, Syracuse, N. Y.; Aldrich Manley, 609 Main street; Alfred McNulty, 89 Howard street; Mrs. Hugh Smith and infant daughter, 14 Crocker street; Miss Florence Estey, 20 Methodist street, patients at Lawrence Memorial hospital, were discharged Sunday and today.

ALTHOUGH LADD HAD $1800, LESS THAN $6 FOUND ON BODY

No new developments resulted today in the investigation of the police as to the suicide of Jabez B. Ladd, watchman in the employ of Palmer Bros., Washington street, whose body was found floating in the Thames river Saturday afternoon. Money he is known to have withdrawn from two banks cannot be accounted for. It is known that Feb. 27th, two days before Ladd's body went into the river, he withdrew $1050 from the Savings Bank of New London. The police are in possession of the bank book, showing that such withdrawal actually was made. It is also known that he withdrew his entire account at the National Bank of Commerce the day that he was last seen, 3:30 o'clock the night of Feb. 28, and the amount withdrawn from that bank was $745.40. In spite of the fact that Ladd withdrew about $1800 from the two banks he had less than $6 when his body was taken from the river and no trace of the money can be found. A day or two before Ladd met his death and but a like time from the issuance of a marriage license to the watchman and Mrs. Minnie E. Lewis, 20 Nameaug avenue, some incident occurred that interfered with the marriage ceremony for they were not married although the license was issued. Detective Sergeants Nelson Smith and John Cavanaugh are working on the case. Ladd's son, a resident of the middle west, will arrive in New London Tuesday or Wednesday and it believed that he will be able to throw additional light on the intentions of his father that may also bring about results in determining what became of the money. At one time, Ladd had more than $4000 in the Savings Bank of New London, but with the withdrawal of the $1050 only $1.76 remains there.

STONINGTON TOWN MEETING DECIDES ON 20-MILL TAX

(Special to The Bulletin)

STONINGTON, March 3.— At a town meeting, with about 500 present, a 20-mill tax was laid Monday night. Selectman Fribance was moderator and Town Clerk Elias B. Hinckley read the call.

When action was called for on the levying of the tax, James Ryan, of Pawcatuck, presented a motion for a 20-mill tax. Amendments to this were offered by Henry A. Stahle for a 23-mill tax and by Bourdan A. Babcock for 22 mills. When the Babcock motion was presented to the meeting on a vote it was declared lost and the original motion of Mr. Ryan was passed.

Former Selectman L. C. Purtill asked for the reading of the statute which requires a tax levy sufficient to meet the budget. By many it is thought that the tax levied will not produce sufficient revenue to meet the town budget requirements by something like $15,000. If this prove the case next year's budget figure will have to include this year's deficit and next year's tax levy will have to be correspondingly larger. Following much debate the meeting adjourned, after a 45-minute session.

MORE CALLS FOR TOWN AID THAN EVER BEFORE RECEIVED

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, R. I., March 3.—Oliver P. Crandall, director of public aid, appeared before the town council meeting Monday, and asked that the council vote that receipts from the Westerly town farm, at this time a $300 yearly rental, be transferred to the use of his department. He declared that never before in his connection with the department had there been so many calls for assistance, especially from young and able-bodied men who declared that they were unable to secure work and that their families are in want. The council voted this action, although it was recommended that at the beginning of the next fiscal year the receipts from the various sales in town departments be turned into the general town treasury, as recommended by Town Solicitor John Ferguson. This practice has not been followed by the various town departments and Town Clerk Everett Whipple stated it would cause a deficit in the Town Hall account, as the revenues had been applied on that account.

The town council held its March session Monday with President Horace E. Burdick presiding. Ernest E. Saunders appeared before the council with reference to the acceptance of a highway. Referred to highway commission.

Pigs killed by dogs, of which there were three, recently in Bradford, were voted paid for; Falco's pig, $15, and that of Capalbo, $12.50. For the auditing of the town accounts and the closing of the town books and submission of three typewritten reports by Wall and Co. of Providence, $375 was voted. Previous payments for similar work had been from $1000 to $1300 with extras and revisions.

Francis W. Gent was made a police constable without pay, upon recommendation of Chief of Police Thomas E. Brown.

Sanction was voted the action of Town Treasurer James M. Pendleton in his issue of town notes dated March 1, 1930, and due Sept. 1, 1930, in amount $50,000, to the First National and Old Colony corporation, Boston. Another bill that was voted paid was that for investigation on the town notes in attorneys' fees amounting to $90.

The report for February of Chief of Police Thomas E. Brown showed 7 arrests, as follows: Operating automobile after license had been refused, 1; revelling, 2; intoxication, 1; assault, 2; larceny, 1.

The February report of Superintendent of Health Dr. Samuel C. Webster showed 12 cases of contagious diseases; chicken pox, 6; diphtheria, 1; measles, 1; scarlet fever, 4; typhoid fever, 1.

Building Inspector Thomas Wills reported permits requested and granted for 8 frame buildings, 1 brick and stone, and 11 additions, a total of twenty. He made 32 inspections of building operations.

When petitions for milk dealers' licenses were brought up, it developed that there had been a milk depot on the Connecticut side of the river for which much milk came from what was thought to be uninspected sources and which eventually found its way into Westerly.

Milk dealers' licenses were granted: Walter L. Fiddes, Thomas J. Bannon, A. M. Cottrell, Thomas L. Burdick, A. Vuono, Terminal Restaurant, James O. Lynch, Alfred Lepikko, James Schofield, E. D. Myrick, Frederick Cottrell, J. T. Edmond Co., William L. Kenyon, Louis Silver, Charles H. Murphey, L. M. W. Foster, John Casalo, F. B. Duguid, Ralph I. Main, F. W. Clarke, E. M. Woods, Quality Lunch, James B. Crowley, C. D. Havens, Chester N. Main, Harvey C. Perry, Lottie M. Church, Vincenzo Vita, Wilfred Gardner, W. C. Gavitt, John Carey, Lyle C. Gray, Oscar Niemi, Clifford A. Langworthy, William Miner, James Birkbeck, Antonio De Fanji.

Farquhar Smith and George B. Utter, representing a committee, appeared and asked that the council vote that the New England Fire Insurance exchange of Boston be asked for a re-survey of Westerly that the present rating of Class C might be brought up to Class B. The council so voted.

The following statement was presented for the committee, which includes, besides those who appeared Fred S. Opie, Clarence A. Vars, Max Novogroski and Henry Walton:

The committee appointed at the mass meeting held in the Pawcatuck fire house has engaged Frederick H. Graves, an insurance consultant. It is expected that Mr. Graves will make arrangements with certain well recommended insurance companies, who are permitted to do business in Rhode Island and Connecticut, to come to Westerly and offer a lower rate on any insurance which may be brought through their companies. On the other hand, the committee feels that every opportunity should be given local insurance men to secure rates which will be more beneficial to the people in this community. We are, therefore, asking for authority to ask for an investigation by the New England Insurance exchange. We are doing this on advice of the officials of the exchange, who came to Westerly recently and met with the committee. It seems to the committee that working through these two channels is the proper way to lower the rates for this community.

Joseph Sisco appeared in behalf of Mrs. Marietta Furcolo, widow of Pasquale Furcolo, praying that a lease of town land, formerly the Norwich-Westerly Electric railway right of way lying between Pleasant street and Pierce street, be granted at a nominal rental. The council so voted, the land to be used for garden purposes, also to be fenced on both streets.

The large draft horse which disappeared from the barn of Judge Ledyard S. Anthony, on the North Stonington-Ashaway road was found the past week end on the farm of George Cottrell on the Bradford road, where it had been for several days before being caught by Mr. Cottrell. In a shipment of 22 head of horses received Saturday from Nebraska by Mr. Anthony, two horses whose death occurred in transit, were taken off at Buffalo, N. Y., and one died before removal from the car in the Westerly freight yard. The horses are thought to have been injured internally while en route here.

Matti Unkuri, of Bradford, charged with operating an automobile on Main street, Bradford, Saturday while under the influence of liquor, was arrested Saturday night by Patrolman Leroy H. Norman, brought to Westerly and locked up. He was held by Chief of Police Thomas E. Brown for arraignment in special session of the Third District court before Judge Oliver H. Williams, charged with drunken driving.

Over the week end, Connecticut state police from Groton barracks, Officers Arthur A. Whitmarsh and John H. ONE-ARMED NICK O'HERN PROVES POOL CHAMPION

Nick O'hern is rated the best pool player in the fishing village. He has only one arm, but how he can make that pool cue talk! He lost his arm in a railroad accident out on the west coast a number of years ago, while trying to get back home by freight. He slipped between the cars and lost his left arm. But he can do anything with that arm.

A pool match was arranged at the Sardine club room table recently. O'hern's rival was Long Shot George Deveau, who knows every trick on the green cloth. The match was for the championship of Noank with a large loving cup and $25 in gold to the winner.

A crowd of 800 fans pushed their way into the hall to see the rivals in action. Referee Carl Ashcroft explained the rules—both feet must be on the floor. A new dime went high into the air and came down heads, which meant One-armed Wonder O'hern got first shot and his arm was steady as an oyster stew. Deveau pulled off some fine shots that made the crowd cheer time and again. One was a bank shot the length of the table to the far corner pocket, and made the yellow ball. The crowd went wild when the janitor, Leland McGown, got after them for throwing up their hats, and said, "Hold your wind and when the match is over, do your stuff!" Long Shot Deveau was biting his finger nails when Sure Eye O'hern was getting his 45 balls without a miss, going strong as a steeple jack in the air. But when he came to the 49th shot, Never Fall O'hern missed for the first time in the game. Making a run of 48 was not so bad and pleased the crowd.

Putting on the heavy oil, Long Shot Deveau got swinging the cue, like a drum major at the head of a band. He was pulling those long shots like picking oranges in sunny California and had a run of 37. The next was a double-bank side shot, and Referee Ashcroft claimed he had both feet off the floor and wanted to call a foul. But the crowd said, "Get your glasses!" The one-armed wonder smiled and said, "Let it go!" So much smoke was in the room that the referee could not see the players and that might have been his mistake. But the young pool cue twister made the side shot, the best the crowd had seen in many moons. How they cheered him—so much noise that one picture on the wall fell to the floor. If World Champ Greenleaf was here, he could take a lesson on that shot.

Deveau picked the ball out of the bunch and told where it was going. A good eye he had to judge the distance but, pulling like a one-lung auto trying to make Fort Hill on high, he missed the 42nd shot. But he sure was making the one-armed sharp, O'hern, step to win the match, it was a 100-point game. Deveau took his seat on the side to watch his rival tear a few off on the green. The crowd was watching a real battle, where shots will go down into history. O'hern was all smiles, with a few points' lead and his hair all combed in the middle. Referee Ashcroft's eyes were sore from the smoke but you could not stop the crowd. Cremo cigars and Old Gold smoke rings were floating around the ceiling, large as an auto tire.

The one-armed player got under way again and was pulling some hard shots to make a good run. A funny one was pulled when his rival, Deveau, claimed that O'hern did not name the side pocket shot but Referee Ashcroft said he heard it all right—must be on account of so much noise—more like a boiler shop. Deveau excused himself for the mistake. Cross-Fire O'hern had to stop at his 47th shot, missing an easy sucker shot in front of the pocket. The score read, 95 against 42. Still the small man, Deveau, had a fighting chance to win; so all was set again. Never-Give-Up Deveau got into action and the crowd said, "Come on, and win! Pull that soup bone in shape; Shoot them balls around the green!"

One Shot, the Noank wonder, pulled off for a backward shot the whole length of the table and did not look at the pocket but a picture on the wall, and it went in clean. That is where your eye can judge the distance; but the noise again from the roaring crowd was heard for one-half mile away. Time and again, Long Shot Deveau had the hair standing on a bald-headed man. But trying to get a long shot to the right hand corner, he failed and made a run of 48. That made One-Armed Wonder O'hern the winner, 95 to 90. A great match to watch it was, with many thrills and laughs. So O'hern is the champion of the village, getting a large loving cup and $25 in gold, until the next pool players sign on the dotted line for a chance at the championship.

Both players shook hands, meaning no hard feeling, but good friends. Sandwiches of head cheese and peanut butter, with coffee and Store Hill cookies were passed around. At a late hour the crowd went home, well pleased with the battle. In New York you would pay $2.50 a ticket and here nothing, to see the only one-armed player in the village do his stuff, steady with the cue as the hands of a city clock.

What he can do with that one hand! Open a clam, by putting the clam between his knees, and clean a fish as good as any fisherman. With a rifle he can shoot an apple off the head of Gordon Lane, using a pole to steady the rifle. He can tie his own necktie, row a boat, etc.

O'hern said he will go in a circus this summer and travel over the wide open spaces to see the world. He can thread a needle and do other stunts. But he will say with a smile, 'It sure took me a long while to learn to do them all!"

"FIRST A SHADOW, then a sorrow"

(Henry Wadsworth Longfellow, 1807-1882)

"Coming events cast their shadows before"

AVOID THAT FUTURE SHADOW*

By refraining from over-indulgence, if you would maintain the modern figure of fashion

Women who prize the modern figure with its subtle, seductive curves—men who would keep that trim, proper form, eat healthfully but not immoderately. Banish excessiveness—eliminate abuses. Be moderate—be moderate in all things, even in smoking. When tempted to excess, when your eyes are bigger than your stomach, reach for a Lucky instead. Coming events cast their shadows before. Avoid that future shadow by avoiding over-indulgence if you would maintain the lithe, youthful, modern figure.

Lucky Strike, the finest Cigarette a man ever smoked, made of the finest tobacco—The Cream of the Crop—"IT'S TOASTED." Everyone knows that heat purifies and so "TOASTING" not only removes impurities but adds to the flavor and improves the taste.

"It's toasted"

Your Throat Protection—against irritation—against cough.

*Be Moderate! . . . Don't jeopardize the modern form by drastic diets, harmful reducing girdles, fake reducing tablets or other quack "anti-fat" remedies condemned by the Medical profession! Millions of dollars each year are wasted on these ridiculous and dangerous nostrums. Be Sensible! Be Moderate! We do not represent that smoking Lucky Strike Cigarettes will bring modern figures or cause the reduction of flesh. We do declare that when tempted to do yourself too well, if you will "Reach for a Lucky" instead, you will thus avoid over-indulgence in things that cause excess weight and, by avoiding over-indulgence, maintain a modern, graceful form.

FEBRUARY PROVED TO BE ONE OF THE SLACKEST MONTHS IN BUILDING IN YEARS

February proved to be one of the poorest months for building activities of any month in the past ten years. During the past month only eight building permits were granted by Fire Marshal Henry R. Taft for work which calls for n expenditure of only $8,000. Of course these permits are for new work and do not include work that is being done in the city on projects now in the process of construction.

The permits issued during the month are as follows:

New Frame Garages	3
New Frame Henhouse	1
Alterations to frame buildings ..	4
	8
Estimated cost.............	$2,945

During the past week there were four permits granted for new work in the city. Also there were three applications for building permits received which will be granted this week. The permits issued last week were as follows:

To Charles A. Ahlberg to build a veranda on the present house at 147 Hickory street. The veranda will be 27x4 feet and will be of frame construction. The estimated cost is $100.

To Mike Dapolito to build a frame one-car garage in the rear of No. 45 Baltic street. The garage will be 8x18 feet with stone and concrete foundation and floor. The estimated cost is $500.

To Emil O. Zahn to alter present frame building at 13 Gilmour street into a dwelling house. The building will be 22x34 feet and will have five rooms and bath. The foundation will be of stone and cement and the superstructure of frame The exterior finish will be in clapboards and composition shingles. The interior will be finished in hardwood and plaster. The estimated cost is $1,500.

To Meyer Blumenthal to alter the present frame garage on Hamlin street. The estimated cost is $300.

There was considerable progress made on the foundation of the Norton Memorial gymnasium at the Norwich Free Academy by Contractor W. S. Spencer. The forms for the foundation have been removed on three sides and the work of erecting the superstructure will start within a short time.

At the Norwich Inn Peck-McWilliams Co. has made good progress and a number of additional rooms have been finished during the past week. With work progressing as rapidly as at present there is no danger but that the Inn will be ready to open by the last of May.

Contractor P. F. Sweeney has practically completed one house on Fanning avenue and another is well along having been closed in.

REAL ESTATE SALES AND MORTGAGE LOANS

During the past week there were nine sales of real estate in Norwich, an increase of five sales over the corresponding week in 1929. The mortgage loans for the respective weeks were $45,466 and $25,350.

In New London during the past week there were four sales of real estate, a decrease of three sales from the same week a year ago. The mortgage loans for the respective weeks were $49,800 and $69,086.

STATE BUILDING PERMITS

Construction activity in this state is at a low ebb as indicated by the totals of building permits issued during the past week in the leading Connecticut building centers. As reported elsewhere in this issue the number of permits issued during the week was 174. These called for construction work estimated to cost $601,189. A year ago, during the corresponding week, the total of permits was 220. Estimated construction costs amounted to $648,041.

NEW LONDON

Continued good weather resulted in a decided impetus to local building operations during the past week. Indications in general were that the worst of the winter weather is now a matter of record and that much work that has been held up because of the uncertainty of temperatures can now go forward without serious danger of losses from frost.

The residence being built for Donald J. Hardenbrook at Oswegatchie has been covered and favorable progress is reported on the job this week. The structure is of frame construction and will contain 13 rooms besides four bath rooms and one extra toilet and a three-car garage. The exterior walls are finished with and split shingles painted gray and the roof is covered with green shingles.

COLMAN STREET BUGALOW

Gildo Minucci of 75 School street has submitted an application with Building Inspector Gunn for permission to erect a bungalow at 296 Colman street, where he has already completed several bungalows in the past few years.

According to plans of the proposed bungalow it will have an 18-inch stone foundation 26 by 42 feet. It will be one story high with six by eight inch girders and two by eight inch joists and cement fire stops. The roof will be of the A type. The house will contain six rooms besides the bath and sun parlor. The dimensions of the rooms are 12 by 12, 13 by 14, 13 by 12, 13 by 11, 12 by 11 and 12 by 9. The sun porch is to be 14 by 7 feet. The estimated cost is $4,500. The application will be acted on by council at its next regular meeting Monday night.

MANSFIELD

The plans for an infirmary building, a power house, a laundry building and a dormitory building to be erected at the State Training school here are to be completed ready for figures next week. The structures are to be of fireproof construction with semi-fireproof roof consfrdction for all buildings except the power house. The appropriation for the work is $430,000.

Plans for a school building to be erected at Storrs, for the town of Mansfield have been completed and will be ready for figures the coming week. The building will be of tapestry brick, 62x100 feet, one story high, with an asphalt shingle roof. It will contain five classrooms and an assembly hall. There will be linoleum covered floors and vapor heating. The estimated cost is $50,000.

BUILDING PERMITS

H. B. Prentice, dwelling and garage, Woodlawn road, $9.600.

Aaron Agrin, frame dwelling, Thames and Morton streets, $8,600,

N. M. Treadway et al, frame dwelling, Sander street, $14,000; garage, $600; garage, Dell avenue, $600.

Gildo Minucci, frame bungalow, 296 Coleman street, $5,500.

Number of permits for the week, 8; estimated cost of buildings, $38,950.

COLCHESTER

Work on the construction of an addition for a new store on the Lazinsk block on Main street, has been started for C. Lazinsk.

CONSTRUCTION CONTRACTS IN STATE EXCEED DECEMBER MARK

January construction contracts awarded in Connecticut showed a pronounced increase over the December, 1929, total, according to F. W. Dodge corporation. They amounted to $3,238,800, against $4,671,500 for contracts let in the preceding month, an increase of 12 per cent.; compared with the January 1929, total, the past month's figure showed a loss of 55 per cent.

The month's total included the following active classes of construction expenditures; $1,591,600, or 30 per cent. of the total, for residential buildings; $1,135,000, or 22 per cent. for educational buildings; $643,000, or 12 per cent., for public works and utilities; and $604,700, or 11 per cent., for commercial projects.

New building and engineering work reported as contemplated in January amounted to $10,839,100, against $12,084,000, the amount reported in the corresponding month of 1929.

BRASS PIPING ALWAYS MEETS RUST TEST

A drop of water is an innocent-looking thing—clear, transparent, apparently empty. Yet it is not clear, for a high magnification shows it to be filled with vegetable and animal matter, as well as gases and minerals of various sorts, which may not affect the purity of the water for drinking. Generally, these are to blame when we are astonished to find reddish-brown water gushing into the bathtub or drinking glass. The discoloration, of course, is due to the formation of rust in supply pipes made of corrodible metals. Brass is one of the few metals which are proof against corrosion and rust, and is therefore the logical material for hot and cold water piping in the home.

"Water is one of the most dense and complicated of substances," said Archibald Henderson, noted writer on science topics, in a recent article. "If a drop of water of the usual sort were magnified enormously, we could get the scale of the innumerable objects which it contains. For instance, if a drop of water were a hundred miles in diameter, the molecules flitting about through its interior would be nearly in inch long."

If such magnifying of a drop of water were possible, a scientist would be able to point out to the home builder the factors which are instrumental in the final destruction of corrodible metals, to explain how this occurs, and to make clear why brass pipe is not subject to their action.

"Suppose a drop of water were a hundred thousand miles in diameter. Then one of the darting molecules in its interior would be, say, 40 feet in diameter," continues Mr. Henderson. "They are darting hither and thither, with jerky and spasmodic motions; if we were mounted on one, we should find it more difficult to keep our seat than if we were on a bucking broncho. In order to see more than this we should have to magnify the drop of water until its diameter should be greater than the distance from the earth to the sun!"

BURGLARPROOF COAL CHUTE IS RUST AND TROUBLE-FREE

Rolled steel coal chutes meet the modern need for a neat, attractive and lasting chute or window. According to the maker they assure trouble-free service and require no maintenance or repairs for they are impervious to rust and indestructible.

Made of copper-bearing rolled steel, they will not splinter or crack, nor are they fragile and liable to breakage. Joints are electrically welded. All hardware and parts are parkerized. No lintels are necessary as a specially reinforced boot carries inside masonry. An automatic spring latch makes them burglar-proof. A removable hopper is easily attached.

SPRING ADVANTAGES OF AUTOMATIC HEAT

The first robin winging northward on the breath of spring heralds other things than the approach of warm weather. To physicians and public health authorities it means the annual epidemic of colds and attendant ills, while to the furnace tender it means that maintaining a uniform indoor temperature becomes more difficult because of the sudden changes of spring weather. These shifts will sometimes send the thermometer on a spring day zooming upward 20 degrees or more after a cold morning, and drop it with equal suddenness in the chill of evening. The indoor temperature too often rides the upward crest before the hand-operated heating plant can be shut down. These quick changes in indoor temperatures, health authorities say, account for a large number of the spring colds. If your heating plant is automatically controlled and functions without attention at a change of weather, there is little to worry about from the outside changes. Without automatic heating equipment an extra degree of care and attention should be given to the furnace in the spring to minimize the danger from sudden shifts of weather.

POPULAR TIME FOR BOILER CHANGES

If you are planning to modernize your heating plant as soon as warm weather sets in instead of waiting until the first wintry blast reminds you that another cold season is at hand, you may be interested to know that thousands of other home owners have the same thought. Statistics gathered by the United States department of commerce indicate that the popularity of spring as a season for modernizing the heating system is increasing The psychological impulse behind the movement seems to be discontent and dissatisfaction with the old heating system after a winter of drudgery and dirt. The faculty of automatic heating systems for supplying hot water in the summer months also has influenced many home owners to make the change in the spring. A recent report of the department of commerce showed that the sale of oil burners alone last March took a 33 per cent jump over the preceding month.

LUMBER USE DECREASING

According to the United States department of agriculture, the greatest total consumption of lumber in this country was in 1907 when we used over 45,000,000,000 board feet. Since the population at that time was about 87,000,000 this means that the per capita consumption was 520 board feet. In 1925 our population had increased to 115,000,000, but the total consumption of lumber had decreased to 37,500,000,000 feet, which gives a per capita consumption of only 325 board feet.

who declared that not only will the air be cooled, but it will also be conditioned, that is, humidified and purified, so that it will be more healthful and pure than the outside air in most cities.

VENITIAN SHADES HAVE ADVANTAGES

Mid-winter weather is by no means conducive to good thinking on summer equipments, yet shades will be the first need when "Old Sol" becomes inquisitive and ventures into the living room to see if it has been changed much since he was around last. The trouble with most shades is that while they do keep out the sun they also keep out light and air. And free circulation of air is what will be most needed during the summer months.

Venetian blinds are the logical solution for this problem. The principle of the shades, which is that of tilting slats of thin wood, makes it possible for them to break the glare and yet admit light and air. They are attractive, too, and will enhance the window or sun porch where they are used

Obtainable in the natural wood finish or in any one of a number of colors these blinds will prove a wise investment. They are easily installed without any bother or muss and their operation is simplicity in itself. Half three-quarters or the entire window may be shaded by merely pulling the cord and fastening it when the desired opening has been reached.

FOLDING DINING TABLE MEETS SPECIAL USES

It's done in the best of families, this matter of eating in the kitchen. Modern life, with its separate breakfasts, lone lunches, and often hurried suppers prepared by tired housewives, make the habit common. But the trouble is that in a great many small modern kitchens when two or three sit at the table there is hardly enough room to prepare the food much less serve it.

Here the folding dining set enters and saves the day. This equipment when not in use folds into the wall and protrudes only four inches into the room. When down the table and benches are capable of accommodating five persons comfortably and if there is no objection to being a bit squeezed seven might be seated.

Such equipment also eliminates largely the need for the kitchen work table, leaving just so much more floor space unencumbered. Table tops may be of porcelain, or the newer monel metal which is rust, stain and chip proof. The price is reasonable and in a short time any carpenter can have the unit completely installed and ready to use.

HELPFUL HINT TOWARD CONSERVING OIL SUPPLY

Here is an economical trick worth knowing when the home heated by automatic oil burning equipment is being "aired" in cold weather. If the customary room temperature is 68 or 70 degrees, set the thermostat control at 55 or 60 degrees before the windows are thrown open. Then the burner will not attempt to maintain the usual uniform indoor temperature in the face of the inrushing cold air. When the airing process is completed and the windows closed, set the thermostat indicator back to its former position. By doing this, no fuel is wasted during the airing.

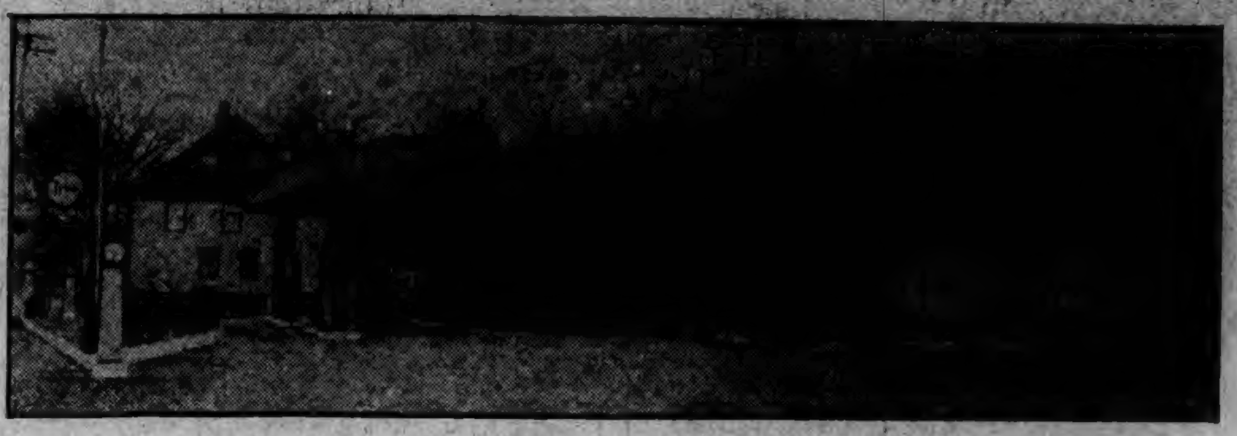
BAD LIGHTING AFFECTS HEALTH

Bal lighting, even so apparently harmless a thing as the glare from an unfrosted electric lamp used night after night, may materially affect the health and happiness of the individual, according to Winifred Hathaway associate director of the National Society for the Prevention of Blindness.

"The eye will often stand, apparently without strain, perhaps more abuse than any other part of the body," says Miss Hathaway, "but that does not mean that it is not registering its unhappiness. Many nervous disorders may be attributed to eyestrain.

"In the home the light must be adapted to the type of work or recreation for which it is needed; there must be an adequate supply of light; glare must be eliminated; the type of lighting should be in harmony with its surroundings, and the illumination should be well distributed."

ATTRACTIVE NEW STUCCO STATION OF THE IDEAL SERVICE STATIONS, INC.



One of the most attractive filling and service stations in Norwich is that of the Ideal Service Stations Inc., Bernard and Gilman, proprietors, at 646 Boswell avenue. The above photograph shows the improvements made in the station and the attractiveness of the place. Six years ago Bernard and Gilman opened a station in an old frame structure that was very unsightly but today have a station that has been taken as a model throughout New England.

The old building was renovated, part of it torn down and in its place was built the stucco and brick station. The station is 30x28 feet with a canopy 36x33 feet and a covered pit 30x30 feet. The ceiling of the canopy is paneled and finished in craftex of a blue and gold combination. The window frames are in copper and bronze finish as are the door casings and other trim. Only a short time ago a battery room was erected on the rear of the station.

The station is very modernly equipped with electric greasing, electric flushing and electric gasoline pumps. The work done by the proprietors of the station show what can be done in improving what was a very unsightly spot. With the coming of the spring weather landscaping will start and flowers, shrubs and rose bushes will be set out to enhance the attractiveness of the spot.

FOR GOOD PLUMBING CONSULT ONLY EXPERTS

Under date of April 28, the Chicago Tribune published an article written in editorial style and under the caption "Three Reasons for Installing Good Plumbing." It concludes with a strong recommendation that the home-owner who desires good plumbing and fixtures should "consult only experts whose reputation demands that their advice be sound," and that ". . . in buying good plumbing his first cost will be his last."

This great western newspaper is to be congratulated upon disseminating such common-sense advice to upwards of a million readers in various states. The article follows: "There are three outstanding reasons why, in new home building or remodeling old homes, the owners should exercise great precautions to secure good plumbing fixtures.

"Reason number one is that the family health is closely related to tese same plumbing features.

"Reason number two is that the good fixtures remain good—and good looking—during years of use.

"Reason number three is that poor, cheap, inferior plumbing fixtures do not last and in the end prove expensive to the owner.

"But how can I know the difference, some one asks.

"In several ways. Many cities—some 837, to be exact—and 15 states ave drawn up ordinances and passed laws which regulate the installation of plumbing fixtures. These laws, of course, cannot all be enforced, all of the time, but they exist and by dealing with master plumbers whose reputations are assured the home owner can rely on good installations even though he may live in a town where there is no such thing as a "sanitation city ordinance."

"Sewer gas and contamination of water supply are two specific dangers following in the wake of traps and vents poorly installed. Besides avoiding cheap traps, whose metal corrodes and wears away, pipes of poor quality should be avoided like the plague.

"A leaky joint will ruin a hall which may be placed below a bathroom. Leaks in soil pipes cause ground pollution sometimes. Leaky pipes, water or supply, will cause dampness in a house.

PROPHESY A TITLE OF SANITATION

"If one is building a house, good plumbing will cost only 10 per cent or less of the entire house cost and give perfect satisfaction. Indeed, so important are these plumbing fixtures that it has been prophesied that it will not be very long before a title of sanitation will be considered as vital to a house as a clear, legal title.

"As regards the plumbing fixtures that show, the best ones have good enamel, which does not chip easily, turn dark, or grow porous. Faucets do not drip water. Bowls and sinks of good material are not hard to keep clean and gleaming.

"No reason for the home owner who wants good plumbing and fixtures in his home to fear he will be 'gyped.'

"If he is determined to have good plumbing he will consult only experts whose reputation demands that their advice be sound—master plumbers, recognized firms, builders responsible and rated. And he can be assured, too, that in buying good plumbing his first cost will be his last cost."

RADIATORS NOW FINER AND MORE EFFICIENT

Radiators for steam or hot water heating systems tend, we are told, to be long, narrow, graceful and with widely spaced tubes. As is the trend with very nearly everything today the utilitarian heating unit has been beautified. Not only are these new radiators better looking than the old types. They are also more efficient. Unbiased tests made in the engineering laboratories of a great university have proved them to have a higher rate of heat emission.

Twenty-three types and sizes of these new radiators are available to the home builder. It is just as easy to obtain a very tiny one for the bathroom as it is to get a long low one to fit under a window seat. Varying widths ranging from four to seven tubes make it a simple matter to fit the radiator to the room. The wide spacing of the tubes make the removal of dust between them easy.

In view of the revival of carpeted floors the housewife who dislikes both the cutting of a high priced carpet and the bother of cleaning under radiators may desire a wall type radiators. These can be obtained in exactly the same sizes as the standing variety. Perhaps one thing most to the advantage of these new radiators is that they cost no more than the now "old fashioned bulky radiator.

CARE OF EVERGREENS

If it already has not been done, the soil around young evergreens should be loosened during the season of late fall rains. Due to foliage evaporation a plentiful supply of moisture must be stored within the plant and that this may be possible the entire plant must be surrounded by loose earth.

EMPTY CLEANER WORKS BEST

Do not wait until the bag of your vacuum cleaner is "heavy" before you empty it. It takes only a moment to empty it and you really save time in the end because the cleaner works much more efficiently on an empty bag and lasts longer. Incidentally you can fairly expect at least five years' service from a good vacuum cleaner.

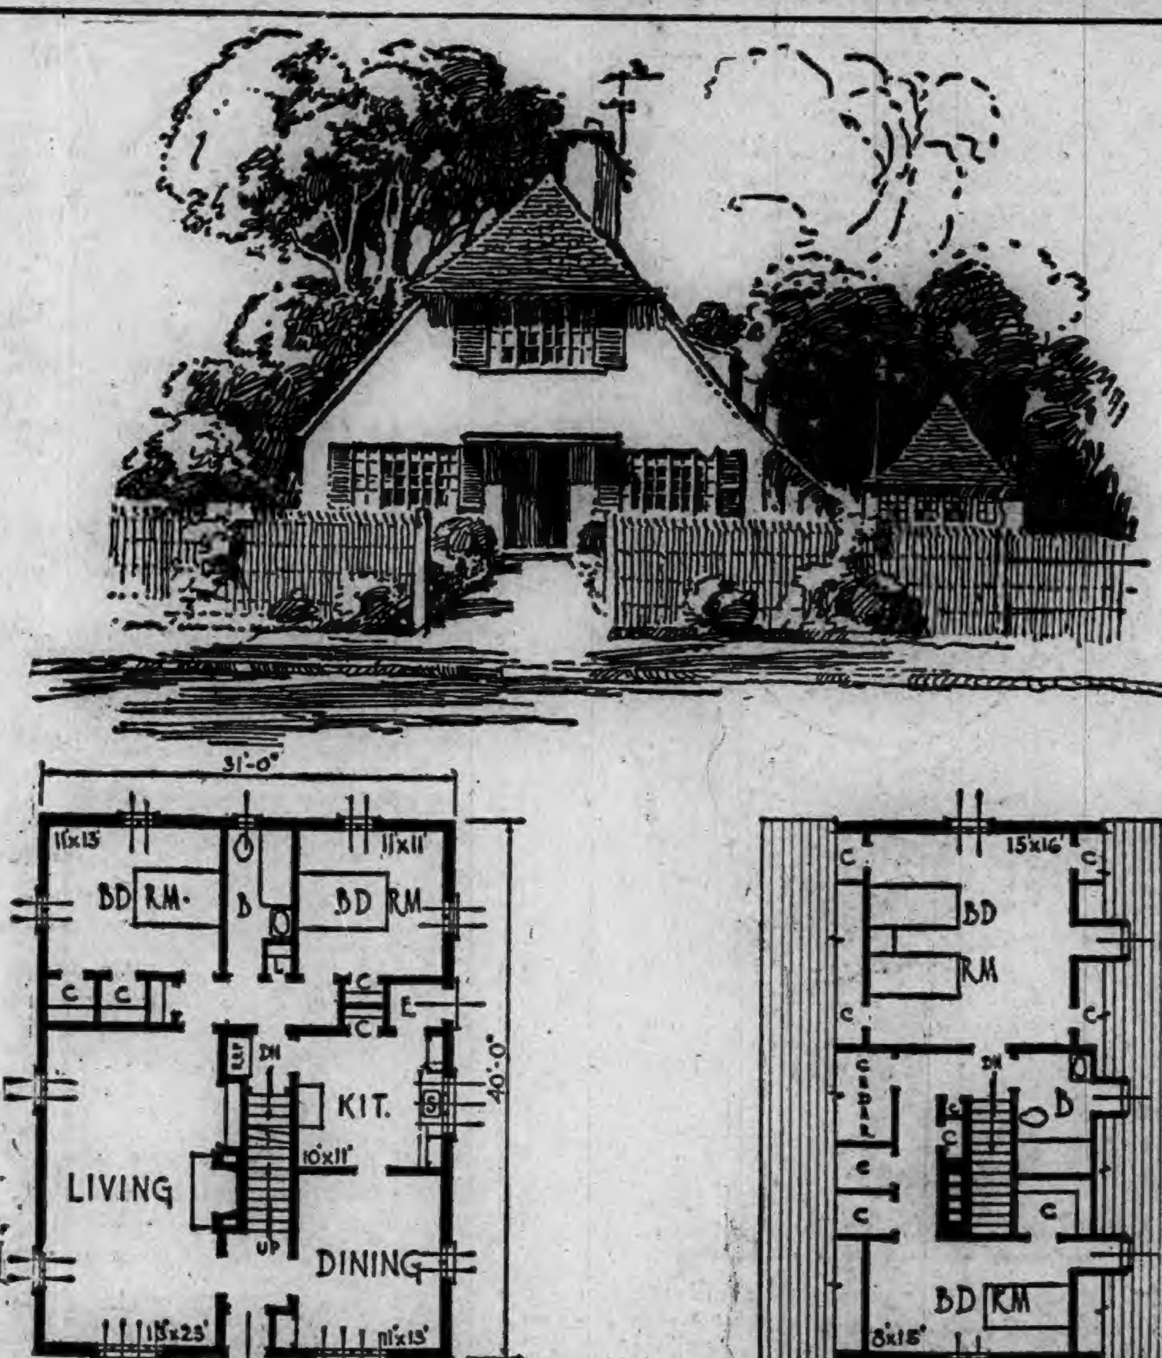
NOISE DEADENING DEVICE MAY BE PLACED ON VALVES

With people paying more and more attention to the subject of noise and how to prevent it, the introduction of an unusual sound deadening material which is easily applied to walls, floors and ceilings becomes a piece of news of utmost importance to the city dweller.

Noise is one of the most disturbing factors in modern living. We have all been annoyed by unnecessary sounds, and now scientists have demonstrated that many everyday varieties of noise are series shocks to the nervous system.

Most of this clamor cannot be prevented, but it can be deadened so effectively that home becomes a quiet liveable place. This is true for apartment, buildings, office buildings, hotels, hospitals, theaters and schools as well as for individual homes.

A LIGHT, AIRY BUNGALOW OF MODERN TYPE



Rakish lines and ample window space put in the unquestioned modern class this bungalow, which may be adjusted to lots from 50 to 100 feet wide.

The first floor comprises a complete dwelling in itself. Thus the house is ideal for the person who likes to think of two second floor bedrooms always available for guests.

If on a busy thoroughfare, the house may be enclosed with a woven wood fence.

Lines are kept low to tie in with surroundings.

The design is especially well suited, also, to elderly persons who want a minimum of stair climbing.

The material is stucco. Tile or wood shingles may be used.

The cost ranges from $6,000 to $8,000, depending on material and labor cost variations in different parts of the country.

PRE-SEASON PROSPECTS VERY BRIGHT FOR 1930 ACADEMY BASEBALL TEAM

The opening game four weeks away and the first practice only a matter of days, finds the Academy in a very optimistic frame of mind as regards its 1930 baseball team. It is the first time that the Wildcat student body and the large outside following have felt this way since Lloyd Jarvis and Johnny Greene, with a host of other veterans, were primed to put their act for the 1927 season.

Five 1929 regulars, Capt. Jack Marks, Ango Tombari, Buck La Croix, outfielders, Louis Greene, pitcher, and Hal Cummings, third baseman, graduated.

Hoping For State Title.

Academy rooters feel that it is not too much to hope for a return to state championship heights this year after a lapse of one season. They tasted this success in 1927 and 1928 and want more.

Most of the hopes for the coming season are based on a strong pitching staff composed of the mainstay of last year with at least four others who have earned their spurs either with the Academy or on local amateur teams. The catching department, with the three veterans holding over from 1929, will cause Coach Bingham no worry and the infield is slated to be almost as strong as the 29 quartet.

Only in securing a hard-hitting outfield will there be any chance for the local mentor turning gray over the 1930 outfit. The entire outfield of last year's successful team said their goodbye to the local school at graduation time last June and Coach Bingham will have to find a .400 hitter to replace Buck La Croix, in center, and two .350 hitters to put in the place of Capt. Jack Marks, in right and Ango Tombari, in left. If he comes within 25 points of each figure, the season will be a success.

Seven Lettermen Available.

The Academy will start practice with seven lettermen available. They are Butsy Weisgraber, pitcher; Bud Fontaine, Les. Crowell and Hack Pepin, catchers; Alec Arico, first baseman; Capt. Chubby Gibbs, shortstop; Harry Sherry, second baseman.

The pitching burden will no doubt be borne by Weisgraber, Pop Richards, Doc Versailles, who returned to school this year after a couple of years' absence, Boots Greene, brother of Johnny, the star of the 1926-1928 era, Johnny Caron, who pitched two no-hit games in the Junior league last year and was generally conceded as its premier boxman, and John Cotter, a southpaw, who has been a member of the squad for two season.

Johnny McKenna, Caron's battery-mate last season in the Junior circuit, and Billy McGuinniss, holding over from last year, will fight it out with the three veterans for the receiver's berth. Fontaine proved himself the heavier hitter of the bunch last year, batting .367 and he is a veteran of three years' experience.

Infield Seems Sure.

The infield is, at first sight quite a problem, but then it's not so bad when you look at it closer. Coach Bingham has only half of his regular 1929 cordon, Capt. Gibbs at short and Alec Arico, at first, but he also has two bright prospects coming up in Mickey Breen, third baseman and Walt Navick, second bagman, who have starred in the infield of the Junior league champs, the Taftville American legion, for two seasons. In addition there will be Sherry, a letterman, Whitmarsh, Riordan, Fitzgerald, the infield of last year's second team and a few other better than average prospects.

Among those who have declared intentions of making a bid for an outfield assignment are Chet Berghinzo, last year's football captain and a letterman in 1928, Ed Fischer, of last year's squad and one of the fastest men in school, Bob Geer, another holdover from 1929 and who can also do some fairly good pitching. These three may form the regular outfield on opening day, April 5, but then again, Coach Bingham may call upon one of his idle pitchers or catchers to fill a position.

Tough Schedule Outlined.

The team has one of the hardest schedules ever outlined for a Red and White nine, including 22 games and bringing practically all of the leading schools in the state here. The opening game, four weeks from Saturday, will be with the Richmond Radiators of the Industrial league.

BRUINS HAVE GOOD CHANCE FOR CUP

NEW YORK, March 3—(AP)—The Boston Bruins, in the course of their amazing career through the National Hockey league season, have outrun every prediction of victory and have smashed about all the records the league can boast.

Now there is only the question of whether they can maintain the pace long enough to repeat last year's victory in the playoffs for the league championship and the Stanley cup, emblem of the world's professional championship.

With their powerful team and their record of but four defeats and one tie in 39 games, it appears that the Bruins cannot be stopped. But everyone of their five prospective opponents has shown plenty of strength. The Montreal Maroons, who are expected to finish first in the international group, are the leading candidates although they lost three of their four games with Boston.

Boston has a fine aggregation of forwards, led by Cooney Weiland, Dit Clapper and Dutch Gainor. Behind them is a sturdy defense and Tiny Thompson, one of the best goal tenders.

Hockey's leading gate attraction, Eddie Shore, pairs with Lionel Hitchmon on the Bruin defense and these two offer one of the best reasons why Boston's opponents have scored only 86 goals.

MASKED MARVELS TAKE GAME FROM SHAMROCKS

The fast Colchester Shamrocks basketball team were defeated by the Masked Marvels of Colchester in a fast game in New Park hall here Saturday night, 33-25. The Marvels held the lead for the entire game. Polakevich starred for the Shamrocks with 13 points; R. Balchera featured for the opposition with 11 points. Both teams were playing in top form, the Shamrocks being handicapped by the absence of Goodrich. The summary:

McDonald is a native of Colchester and for the past several years has been directed athletics at Williston academy, Easthampton, Mass. He has generously presented a new basketball to the Shamrocks' team.

Manager Joseph Ezekiel Falk of the Shamrocks announces his team will play a return game with the Montville Aces in Colchester Wednesday evening. On next Saturday, March 8, the Shamrocks will play the Saybrook town team in Saybrook and on March 15 the Shamrocks expect to play a return game with the Manchester Co. G team in Colchester. Out of 34 games played so far this season the Shamrocks have won nine games.

TILDEN BEATS AUSTIN IN STRAIGHT SETS

MONTE CARLO, March 3—(AP)—Bill Tilden, although 37 years of age, is still good enough to take on two of the greatest players in the world in successive days and beat them both in straight sets.

In the final of the Monte Carlo singles championship today he trimmed Henry Austin of England by scores of 6-4, 6-4, 6-1, demonstrating his superiority as decisively as he did in eliminating the Italian star, Baron H. L. De Morpurgo, yesterday.

The American champion's service again was a powerful weapon against Austin, the ranking English star being unable to break through for a set. The veteran also proved better able to adapt his game to the peculiar weather conditions. Throughout the match the courts were swept by a terrific wind which affected Tilden's fierce drives little but blew Austin's gentler return yards outside on some occasions.

The Englishman managed to take one more game than De Morpurgo did yesterday.

Tennis followers who saw the matches declared Tilden has never played better in Europe in recent years.

SPORTS COM. FIVE RETAIN ELKS CLUB BOWLING TITLE

The Sports Committee Five are still champions of the Elks club despite the determined onslaught of the Elks All Star team last night at the club alleys. The Sports Five withstood the gallant attempt of the All Stars to wrest the crown from their brows and although the Stars had the Sports badly staggering in the first string the champs rallied to take the next two games and total pinfall. The Sportsmen are still open for other challenges. Jimmy Osten was high scorer of the evening with a total of 331 and high single of 138. He was closely followed by Ernie Bean with a total of 330. ANN ARBOR, Mich., March 3—(AP)—Purdue university basketball team won the undisputed championship of the Western conference here tonight by defeating Michigan 44 to 28, in the Wolverines' last home game of the season.

PELOQUIN-JAMES BOUT TO BE HUMMER

Besides the feature bout in which Al Beauregard swaps punches with Johnny Vacca, bantamweight champion, on Friday night at Parish hall, there is a bout on the supporting cards that stands out as a hummer. This is the six round preliminary between Rene Peloquin of Danielson and Pat James of Providence.

James comes to Taftville Friday night with a mighty fine record of wins behind him and a reputation of being a very clever boy. James was bantamweight amateur champion of New England last year and reached this pinnacle through clever boxing coupled with a devastating right hand. Since quitting the simonpures James has has equal success and has piled up an impressive record, meeting and defeating some of the best 126 pound boys in Rhode Island and Massachusetts. That he will give Peloquin a busy evening is a foregone conclusion.

Peloquin is one of the most aggressive fighters that it has been the pleasure of the fans to see in many a day. Small of statue and handicapped in reach, Peloquin makes up for his deficiency with a fighting spirit that never gives up. He is the type of boxer that keeps boring in despite any attempt of his opponent to keep him off with long range fighting. In the last show Peloquin met and defeated a much better boxer than himself, in Romeo Dubois of New Haven. Dubois had an advantage of reach and tried to keep Peloquin off with a left jab but the Danielson boy tore in and eventually pummelled out the verdict. This boy, James, from Providence, will have to have more of a punch than Dubois if he is going to take Rene over the bumps. He is reputed to be a boy who likes to swap punches and if he is, the fans can depend on seeing one sweet slugfest for six rounds. Peloquin is no mean little hitter himself and when he lands his blows carry something of a sting to them.

This bout should prove a very nice appetizer to the main attraction which is going to be one sweet little scrap. Beauregard reported last night that he would have no difficulty in making the bantamweight limit for Friday evening and that he was going out to win in short order if possible. The Taftville boy has his eye on the New England title and he is out to knock the props off of Vacca's throne [illegible] attempt.

Hear Ye, Hear Ye. Robinson Crusoe was the guest of the city last night.

Believe it or not that's the straight fact and to prove it his name graces the city register that is kept at the police headquarters.

However, his address instead of being some island off the coast of South America is Kansas City, Kan., and his age is 68 instead of being some 300 odd years. From this it was gleaned that he was not the original Robinson Crusoe.

Capt. Tommy Murphy was seated at the desk at headquarters last night when in walks a man with white whiskers and a little stooped. The man politely inquires if he can get a night's lodging. The captain assures him that he can and starts to register him.

"What is your name?" asks the captain. "Crusoe, Robinson Crusoe," replies the man. The captain's pen stops in mid-air. "What did you say it was?" asked the captain. "Robinson Crusoe," repeats the venerable gentleman.

"Well, well, that's a rather noted name," says the captain. "Yes, it is," agrees Robinson, "but I'm no relation to the original Robinson Crusoe, I come from Kansas City and I'm 68 years old and I've never been shipwrecked."

"Where's Friday?" asks the captain. "Oh," smiles the venerable gentleman, "Friday will be here later in the week."

DEAF TEAM WINS FROM BACON ACADEMY

The Bacon academy basketball quintet was defeated by the American School for the Deaf team of West Hartford in an exciting game in the School for the Deaf gymnasium in West Hartford Saturday evening by a score of 36-19. The West Hartford boys showed their superiority throughout the entire game, holding an easy lead over the Bacon outfit during both halves. D. Horwitz and Levine starred for Bacon with 6 and 5 points, respectively, while Krason and Demars featured for the opposition with 12 and 7 points respectively. This was a return game, the West Hartford boys having defeated the Academy outfit 40-20 in a game in Colchester on Feb. 1.

Two games were lost to American School for Deaf, one game lost to Nathan Hale high school, one game lost to Woodstock Academy and one game lost to Wethersfield high school. One game was won from Nathan Hale high school, one from Woodstock Academy and two games were won from Lyman Memorial high school. In addition to these school games, the Bacon quintet defeated the Phi Delta Nu team of Norwich. D. Horwitz was the high scorer and outstanding star of the Bacon outfit for the season.

CARNERA KAYOES CLARK IN THE SIXTH ROUND

PHILADELPHIA, March 3—(AP)—Primo Carnera, Italian heavyweight sensation, continued his knockout record tonight by sending Roy (Ace) Clark, towering Philadelphia Negro, to slumberland in the sixth round of their 10-round fight at the arena. Carnera weighed 272 pounds, Clark 234 1-2.

Clark was the Italian giant's eighth straight knockout victim since the "Ambling Alp" began his American ring career a few weeks ago.

Although going the way of Carnera's other opponents, Clark won the distinction of being the first of Primo's foeman to stand up under his crushing punches beyond the second round.

The curiosity to see the mammoth Primo in action was so great that the arena was sold out, with the exception of about 3,000 admissions, a week ago. The place was jammed to capacity and several thousand fans were turned away. Unofficial attendance was 10,000 and receipts about $33,000. Carnera's share, it was said, would be between $10,000 and $12,000.

Carnera scored his knockout in the sixth after he had floored Clark in the fourth for counts of nine and eight. Up to the finish the battle had been comparatively even, although Primo's advantage increased as the fight went on.

In the fifth Clark bounced two hard rights off Primo's left eye, and it was tightly closed and swollen to the size of an egg when they resumed hostilities in the sixth. Between rounds the club physician indicated that it might be necessary for Carnera to quit, but the Italian shook his head and shouted, "No, no."

Neither fighter wasted time and both began swinging from the opening bell. Clark landed the first punch, a left to the head, followed with a right. Carnera stabbed Clark with a pair of lefts and then got in a jolting right before they clinched.

Carnera was wild in the early part of the second, but soon found the range and Clark took some stiff punches to the head and body. The Ace's blows ha dlittle effect on the Italian.

Primo jarred Clark with rights and lefts in the third and twice rushed him to the ropes under a barrage of blows. His ruinous rights to the body made Clark wobbly.

Clark went down twice in the fourth, once when they were punching away at close quarters, and another time from a right to the jaw. He was punch weary when the fifth began, but slipped over two rights that caught Primo on the left eye. Carnera grinned and sent Clark reeling across the ring with a right to the head.

BENEDICTS PROVE BETTER MEN THAN BACHELORS; GIRLS LOSE OUT

The Benedicts demonstrated the effects of home training and defeated the Bachelors in the annual Married and Single Men's basketball game at the Y. M. C. A. court last night. The Benedicts won by the decisive score of 36 to 28, the margin of victory coming in the last half of the game.

It was in the second half that the Married Men showed the truth in the old adage, "early to bed and early to rise." For the first half those endowed with single blessedness kept pace with their more mature opponents and the half ended with the count standing 18 to 17 in favor of the Benedicts. Then came the second half and here it was that late hours and lack of home-cooked food told. The Benedicts gradually forged to the front and the Single Men faltered by the wayside. Anyhow, it was a great game and the attendance greatly enjoyed the keen rivalry that was manifest throughout the encounter.

In the girls' game the W. M. I. team of New London nosed out the Norwich girls by three points, the score being 29 to 26. Miss Allen of the New London team was the high scorer of the game with 20 points.

FAST WRESTLING CARD FOR QUAKER HILL FIREMEN

The Quaker Hill Firemen have planned an all-star card of four wrestling bouts to be held on Tuesday evening, March 11, at the Quaker Hill Firemen's hall. The feature bout brings Steve Passas of Providence against Tiger Lewis of Hartford in a two-fall match. Another star bout is between the veteran Bill Collins of Central Village and Tony Perrone of Hartford. This bout is of 45 minutes duration and one fall is necessary for a win. There are two other bouts on the card to be announced.

EVANS PLEASED WITH SHOWING OF HIS CLUB

NEW ORLEANS, La., March 3—(AP)—Billy Evans, general manager of the Cleveland Indians, arrived at training camp here today to give the boys the once over.

Evans expressed himself as pleased at the workout and cast a speculative eye at the big pitching recruit, Belve Bean, who was in the throes of an effort to master a slow ball to mix with his speedy ones.

"He ought to be quite a pitcher when he gets this slow one down," was Evans' comment.

JEWETT CITY BILLIARDISTS TRIM THE PALACE CUEISTS

At the Palace bowling alleys last night the Jewett City pocket billiard three-man team won easily from the Palace representatives, 300 to 205. The results of the match were: Arremony beat Schultz 100 to 92; Miller beat Johnson 100 to 72; Baker beat Morin 100 to 41.

ROPER TO RESUME SPRING FOOTBALL TRAINING SESSIONS

PRINCETON, N. J., March 3—(AP)—Spring football training will be revived at Princeton university this season following the Tigers disastrous campaign of 1929. Coach Bill Roper, in sounding a general alarm for football material, said the spring sessions would be held for three weeks beginning March 17. Fundamentals of kicking, blocking, charging and tackling will be stressed, the coach said.

Reds in 1st Practice

ORLANDO, Fla., March 3—(AP)—Thirty players, including eight members of the Peoria club, assembled on Tinker field here today for the first practice of the Cincinnati Reds training season with the probability that eight more men will report tomorrow. Despite the weather, which was cold for Florida, the veterans showed a willingness for work equal to that of the recruits. Dan Howley, new manager, was the first to don his uniform and led a practice session that lasted more than three hours.

Boyd Reinstatea

PROVIDENCE, March 3—(AP)—James E. Dooley, president of the Canadian-American Hockey league, announced tonight that he had lifted the suspension on Yank Boyd, Boston hockey player, who was given a match penalty in Springfield, Saturday. His action came after receiving a report of the referee's, who stated that Boyd was not the aggressor in the Springfield fight.

Plainfield Claims Another Goal.

The management of the Plainfield Soccer team states that his team lost to the J. B. Martin team by a score of 4 to 3 instead of 4 to 2 as reported in yesterday's paper.

Scott Signs 1930 Contract

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, March 3—(AP)—While the New York Giants had morning and afternoon workouts here today in efforts to keep warm, Jack Scott, veteran right handed pitcher took occasion to sign a contract for 1930. Old Jack has been at the camp all along but he couldn't seem to reach an accord with Manager John McGraw on the question of salary until today.

Because of the chilly weather today's workouts were nothing to rave about. Freddie Lindstrom was expected to put in an appearance but failed to show up.

Rough Weather For Pirates

PASO ROBLES, Calif., March 3—(AP)—Holdouts, Charley Horses and other baseball training worries have begun to dim in the mind of Jewel Ens, manager of the Pittsburgh Pirates, before a greater worry—rain.

Rain cut deeply in today's practice program and the monthly forecast from the observatory at San Diego indicated strong possibility of much rainfall throughout the training period.

Pool Match at Hickey's

The billiard fans of this city will have a chance to witness an interesting game of pocket billiards Wednesday night when Baker, the champion of Jewett City and twice conqueror of Al Benson will play Harold Plympton of Hickey's five at Hickey's billiard parlor. They will play a special match of 125 points, the winner to receive a suitable reward given by the proprietor.

New Bowling Record

EAST ST. LOUIS, Ill., March 3—(AP)—What may be accepted as a new world's all events bowling record was made yesterday by Pat Spencer, of Highland, Illinois, in the eighth annual Southern Illinois Bowling tournament. Spencer turned in a score of 2067. The A. B. C. record is 2014, rolled by Barney Spinella of New York in 1927.

All Seats Are Sold

CINCINNATI, March 3—(AP)—All seats have been sold for the opening National league baseball game here on April 15 between the Cincinnati Reds and Pittsburgh Pirates, it was announced today by Sidney Weil, president of the Cincinnati club.

NEW HAVEN, March 3—(AP)—A cup which will be awarded annually to a member of the Yale boxing team, has been donated by Frank S. Butterworth, Sr., former Yale football player, the Yale Athletic association announced tonight.

The cup will be awarded on the basis of sportsmanship, courage, skill, hitting power, and value to the team.

PLAINFIELD PROS CLASH WITH BOSTON WEDNESDAY

The Plainfield Pros tackle the Boston Whirlwinds on Wednesday evening in the fifth game of the season's series at the Plainfield Community house. This game is one for blood as each team holds two wins to its credit. When these two clubs meet there is always plenty of basketball for even the most rabid fan. For the preliminary attraction the Buddies clash with the Radio Five of Danielson in the third game of the series between these two clubs, each having won a victory. The Radio Five is the only team to defeat the Buddies on their home floor this season.

The preliminary game will start at 8 o'clock and the main attraction will not go on until 9.15 or 9.30 to give the Plainfield people a chance to attend church.

PLAINFIELD WINS THREE GAMES FROM MOOSUP TEAM

Last night at the Plainfield volleyball court the Plainfield team was returned a victor over the Moosup team in one of the hardest fought matches ever witnessed on that floor. The Plainfield boys took three out of the five games played, but not without stiff opposition. The scores were 9-15, 15-11, 14-16, 15-11 and 15-11.

2ND GAME OF SHYMA-A. N. SERIES TONIGHT

Lester, c	F. Finn or Murphy, c

Murphy, c	Peltier, rg

The Shymas basketball team will endeavor to even the count when they clash with the Army-Navy team in the second game of the series for the championship of the village at the Parish hall, Taftville, tonight. The fans who saw the first game saw one of the best games of the season and also witnessed one of the best basketball teams in this section of the state in the Army-Navy team. According to report this same club will again take the floor in an attempt to clinch the series but Manager Sullivan claims that the team that he will put on the floor for this game will be as good if not better than the Army-Navy. The game has the fans of this section all worked up comparing the two lineups which seem to be evenly matched and without a doubt the fans will flock to the Parish hall to witness this affair.

Manager Murphy, of the Army-Navy team will bank on the same lineup to finish up the series which will be practically all of the Y Seniors who are amongst the leaders in the state league. Yerrington of the Y Seniors and formerly of Springfield college, will play at left forward with Jones as his running mate. Either Lester or Murphy will be at the tapoff position while the backcourt will be taken care of by all Taftville boys who have been performing this season under the banner of the Y Seniors, Les Pingree and Enos Eccleston. These boys are considered on the par with the best guards now playing in the state league. Coleman will be held in reserve. He played with the Army-Navy and the Taftville Crescents a few seasons back.

Against this array of basketball talent Manager Sullivan has banded together a team which in the opinion of most of the fans will even up the series. The Shymas have been practicing hard for this game and feel sure that they will again break into the winning column. In the forward position the Shymas have secured without doubt the best pair of forwards in the eastern part of the state in Mondi Normandin, former Emerald star, who also performed with the Plainfield Pros and later Danielson Town Team, and Roy Dessinger of the Plainfield Pros.

These boys were running mates on the Plainfield team and should team up to perfection, giving the Army-Navy guards plenty of trouble before the end of the game. At the center position will be either Pete Finn or Jim Murphy while Lemieux, Rabbit Gauthier or Jerry Peltier will take care of the visiting forwards. There will be no preliminary game, a whist party preceding the game which is without a doubt the biggest attraction staged this season.

SCORE OF IMPORTANT INDUSTRIALS AND UTILITIES DOWN 1 TO 5 POINTS

NEW YORK, March 3—(AP)—The stock market turned distinctly reactionary under the pressure of heavy selling at times during today's trading session, but professional operators for the advance made vigorous efforts to stem the tide, and were partially successful.

Losses were in the majority at the close, however, a score of important industrials and utilities ending the day 1 to 5 points lower.

Rails held fairly steady, the oils gave a better account of themselves than they have of late, and the tobaccos and several low-priced specialties were bid substantially higher. Steel shares, however, were conspicuously heavy. The bullish enthusiasm for the amusement stocks appeared to have waned for the moment at least, and several important utilities gave up part of their recent advances. Trading was in the largest volume since the last abrupt break in the market, which occurred Feb. 20, and was particularly heavy when the market was declining. Transactions aggregated 3,634,260 shares. The index of 90 leading stocks, however, declined only 6-10 of one point, compared to 3 4-10 Feb. 20.

Business news and analyses appearing over the week end were not of a character to clarify the rather murky outlook for the near future. The market appeared to reflect speculative uncertainty with the beginning of the new month, a month in which the trends of spring business usually appear in fairly clear outline. The statement by Secretary of Commerce Lamont that he expected business would return to normal within two months, was somewhat reassuring.

On the other hand trade reports indicating that the steel business had lost a little of the vigor of recent weeks tended to inspire caution. The National City bank, in its monthly survey of economic conditions, pointed out, furthermore, "that business in general has lagged behind the steel industry," and concluded, "the situation still lacks balance, and it is not clear as to how soon full recovery can be expected."

U. S. Steel lost more than 4 points. Gulf States was depressed more than 6 by abandonment of the merger negotiations with American Rolling Mill. Rolling Mill is selling on a higher earnings ratio basis, and a favorable exchange offer had been hoped for by many Gulf States stockholders. Bethlehem Steel lost 2 points.

American Telephone sold up more than a point to a new peak price for 1930 at 243 1-4, in response to publication of its annual report, showing the Bell system the first $4,000,000,000 commercial enterprise in the world, and earnings on American Telephone stock of $12.57 a share on the capitalization of Dec. 31. The stock soon reacted, however, and closed with a net loss of a couple of points. American Water Works lost 2 and Standard Gas 3 points. Electric Power and Light, and Columbia Gas, however, reached a new high for the year and closed with small net gains, while American Power and Light sold up 5 points to a new peak and closed up 4.

Such recent favorites among leading industrials as American Can, Eastman Kodak and Westinghouse Electric lost more than 2 points each, and Johns Manville nearly 4. Auburn Auto lost nearly 5, and Radio, Radio Keith, Paramount and Warner Bros., a point or so.

Merchandising shares were firmer, Montgomery Ward rallying a couple of points. Among the lower priced specialties, Commercial Solvents, the Curtiss Wright issues, Eureka Vacuum, and Oliver Farm Equipment reached new high levels for the movement. Oils were firmer in response to more favorable California production figures.

A further break in wheat futures was not unexpected in view of the smart rally from the recent lows, but contributed to the unsettlement on the stock market. Closing prices were 3 5-8 to 4 3-8 cents lower. The modification of the farm board buying plan was regarded as a dominant factor in the wheat market.

Corn lost about a cent, and cotton futures declined 55 to 85 cents a bale.

Credit conditions were easy, with call loans at 4 per cent at the loan post, and available at 3 1-2 per cent outside. Foreign exchanges generally sagged, which led to further talk of a lower rediscount rate to prevent any disturbance of London's gold supply. Sterling cables reached $4.85 7-8, a new low for 1930. The Spanish peseta was further depressed, reaching a new low level at 11.96 cents. Some of the far eastern exchanges were buoyed by the Chinese plan to impose an import duty on silver.

COTTON

NEW YORK, Mar. 3—(AP)—Cotton figures closed steady, 11 to 17 points lower; spot quiet; middling 15.00.

Treasury Balance.

WASHINGTON, March 3—(AP)—Treasury receipts for February 28 were $3,988,894.77; expenditures $5,390,816.54; balance $54,262,505.12.

Stockholders of the Hazeltine Corp. have been asked to approve an increase in the authorized capital stock from 200,000 to 800,000 shares. The annual meeting of the corporation will be held at Dover, Del., on March 11.

THE CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, Mar. 3—(AP)—Strong selling resistance developed in today's curb market when efforts were made to extend the recent recovery in prices, with the result that the general list displayed considerable irregularity at the close. Strong buying support was apparent for several of the public utility, natural gas and oil issues, but several points of weakness also developed in these groups, as well as in a scattered assortment of other issues.

Electric Bond & Share was marked up to a new high at 104 3-4 and then eased to 102 3-4 for a net loss of 3-4. Cities Service moved up 1 1-4 points to a new high at 35, and maintained its gain. Cleveland Electric Illuminating, on a few sales, moved up to a new high at 84 1-2. American Light & Traction jumped 3 1-2 points on a few sales but American & Foreign Power warrants, American Gas & Electric, American Superpower, Middlewest Utilities and Northern States Power A lost ground, the recessions ranging from fractions to nearly 2 points.

A sudden revival of activity in the oil shares probably was influenced by the reported reduction of 75,000 barrels in the daily average of crude production in California last week. Gulf Oil ran up more than 5 points and retained all but a point of its gain. Humble, Illinois Pipe Line and Indian Territory advanced 1 to 2 1-4 points, the last named mounting to a new high for the year. Plymouth Oil was an exception, dropping 2 points to a new 1930 low at 24 and then recovering half its loss.

City Machine Tool moved up 2 points to a new top at 24, presumably on publication of the annual report showing earnings of $4.78 a share last year. Atlas Stores, Cleveland Tractor, Fanny Farmer, Pines Winterfront, and Starrett corporation also attained new high prices.

Glen Alden Coal dropped 2 points to a new 1930 low at 110. Mangel Stores, Metropolitan Chain Stores, Paramount Cab, Safeway Stores second warrants and Walgreen also sold at new low prices.

The brisk demand for the natural gas stocks was prompted by merger reports involving several of the leading companies. United Gas and Memphis Natural Gas were pushed up to a new high level, and American Natural Gas and the Arkansas Natural Gas issues recorded moderate gains.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, Mar. 3—(P)—Suffering a maximum fall of 5 cents a bushel today, wheat future delivery contracts recovered but little of the loss and the market closed shaky. The chief unsettling influence appeared to be action of the federal farm board's allies in putting an end to payment of a fixed price for purchases of country run wheat at terminal markets. Unyielding dearth of export demand for wheat from North America counted also as a weight on the market, with visible and invisible domestic supplies estimated today to be fully as large as a year ago.

Wheat closed unsettled, 3 1-2-4 1-2c a bushel lower than Saturday's finish. Corn closed 1-1 1-2c down; oats 1-8-3-4c off, and provisions unchanged to a rise of 2c.

For at least the time being modification of buying plans on the part of government sponsored trade bodies was generally construed as a bearish market influence, although in some quarters the modification was referred to as merely withdrawal from a weak salient. Friends of higher prices were handicapped because the farm board loan basis does not at present apply to the 1930 domestic crop, and so gives little if any support to July and September wheat contracts as distinguished from March and May. In this connection, a noticeable development was that the severest break in prices today was on July wheat.

Contributing to the general weakness shown from start to finish today by the wheat market here was the fact that Liverpool quotations went down grade regardless of price advances Saturday on this side of the Atlantic, and notwithstanding a decrease in the amount of wheat on ocean passage to Europe. Besides, foreigners were credited with selling here. On the other hand, future delivery purchases for farm board allies here and at other leading markets were not of sufficient volume to operate as a counter-balance. A decrease of 1,894,000 bushels for the week in the United States wheat visible supply was virtually ignored, and so likewise was an estimated falling off of about 39,000,000 bushels in farm reserve stocks of domestic wheat as compared with a year ago.

Corn and oats gave way with wheat despite estimates that with the exception of 1925 the present stocks of corn on farms are the smallest since 1919.

In provisions the hog market strength more than offset the influence of grain weakness.

Closing bids and offers: Wheat Mar. (bids) 1.04 3-4; May 1.09 1-2-3-4; 1.8 3-4-1.16; July 1.06 1-8-1-4, 113 1-2-3-4; Sept. 1.07 1-2-3-4, 114 1-8. Corn, May 86 1-8-1-4, 87 3-4, 7-8; July 88 1-8, 90; Sept. 88, 90.

BOND MARKETS

NEW YORK, Mar. 3—(P)—Dullness characterized the trading in all groups of bonds today. The general undertone was firm, but inquiry was light. Rails averaged a trifle higher.

The money markets were plentifully supplied with funds. Time accommodations eased in the shorter maturities, while call loans held at the renewal figure of 4 per cent. However, the demand for money of either description was small. Bankers expressed the opinion that interest rates would be virtually unaffected by the income tax payments on March 15.

Transactions in government bonds were inconsequential, suggesting a quiet Saturday rather than a full five hour session. Gains matched losses in the net changes, running close to one-sixteenth of a point in either direction. Although the terms of the mid-month treasury financing have not been announced, it is believed in some quarters that the government will finance entirely with a low-coupon certificate, postponing an additional offering of the discount bills. The maturing Treasuries bear 5 1-8 per cent interest.

French Republic 7s finished with a flourish, rising to 116 3-4, a new high for the year. The 7 1-2s were more active, but failed to move appreciably. Belgium 8s advanced a point. British 5 1-2s moved within the unusually wide range of 1 3-8, but closed at the bottom, 102 5-8, for a small net loss.

Two of last week's favorites again led the convertible group. American Telephone 4 1-2s touched 162 1-4, a high for the year, at the peak of the stock's strength and then steadily declined for a 1 3-4 point net loss. The other active issue was the Parmelee Transportation 6 which also made a 1930 record price of 86 3-8. The close was at the top and represented a gain of 1 7-8. Missouri Pacific 5 1-2s rose a point.

Investment rails gave a rather dull performance. Nickel Plate "A" 5 1-2s, Missouri Kansas Texas prior lien 5s, Northern Pacific prior lien 4s and Great Northern 7s were firm. Pennsylvania 6 1-2s touched 109 and then slipped back for a decline of 3-8. Canadian National 5s lost 7-8. Erie 5s moved narrowly on the announcement that the road was planning a $50,000,000 long term issue of the same coupon, to be held in the treasury until favorable terms were obtainable. Ulster & Delaware 5s, stamped, slumped more than 3 points to a new 1930 low.

The industrials eased. Armour Real Estate 4 1-2s sagged to a minimum for the year. Republic Iron & Steel 5s lost a point, but Lorillard 7s advanced by the same amount to score a new high at 100. Goodrich 6 1-2s and Goodyear 5s were firm.

Several utilities attracted attention while the upward movement in stocks of that group was under way. International Telephone 5s were the favorites, but made no gain on the day.

Specialties were featured by a rise of nearly 3 points in the Pathe 7s without warrants.

The American & Foreign Power company's $50,000,000 bond issue is being offered tomorrow. The securities are debentures 5s with a 100-year maturity and will be sold at 90. Proceeds are to be used for retiring current indebtedness and other corporate purposes.

Other new offerings scheduled for Tuesday include a $6,000,000 issue of Louisiana 5 per cent highway bonds, maturing 1931 to 1950, priced to yield 4.50 percent.

NEW YORK, Mar 3—(P)—A review of the amount of foreign government and corporate financing in the United States last year showed the total aggregated $757,000,000, lowest since 1923. Canada accounted for $375,925,000, and 28 per cent of the corporate issues offered. Sweden was second with $79,581,339, and Chile third with $77,000,000. Germany, with $42,100,000, was fourth. Following four years of uninterrupted increase and a record high in 1928, the decline in Latin-American government issues to $66,000,000 in 1929, was a noticeable feature of the year.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Broadway Theatre

After taking a healthy rap at what the highbrows term "birth-control" and what others call by various names not so dignified, that famous and vividly realistic talking picture, "Her Unborn Child," has its final showings at the Broadway today. No picture shown locally for many months has excited so much comment, telling as it does a story of deep human interest with nothing erotic to commend it to those in search of a thrill. Tomorrow's tremendous double-feature program, however, is packed with thrills from start to finish, offering as it does two gigantic features, the first, Richard Arlen in "Burning Up," a 100-mile-a-minute story of the dirt tracks, and the second, Betty Compson, with Jack Oakie and a big cast in "Street Girl," classed as "Rio Rita's" only rival in the field of musical comedy. "Burning Up" tells the story of "Suicide" Larrigan, a fearless and reckless race driver whose only passion is his roaring engines until dainty Miss Mary Brian waves the checkered flag in a race of hearts. The gambling ring, alarmed at Dick's prowess, determine to "put him on the spot" in a fixed race, resorting to a crackup at racing speed to finish him as a contender. The picture radiates speed and more speed every minute, and the race scenes are guaranteed to get you yelling as though you were at a real race. Francis Macdonald, Sam Hardy, Tully Marshall and Charles Sellon have featured roles in the cast.

In the companion picture, dainty Betty Compson provides a thrill of a different sort in her first starring work, "Street Girl," in which with Jack Oakie, Ned Sparks and Johnny Harron, she presents a clever picture of New York's "Little Hungary" with its exotic cafes and tinkling Hungarian orchestras. Miss Betty's deft handling of her violin will surprise. Doris Eaton and the Radio beauty chorus of 100 girls, and Gus Arnheim's famous Cocoanut Grove Ambassadors orchestra add beauty and color to the many beautiful scenes, and with the inimitable Oakie and the veteran Joseph Cawthorn, plenty of comedy is assured.

Palace Theatre.

A shipload of horror leavened only by love. This is the background to "The Ship From Shanghai," one of the pictures on the new double feature bill which opens at the Palace tomorrow for a three-days' run. The other feature is "Strictly Modern," a whimsical satirical comedy in which a writer of popular novels attempts to apply the principles of her heroines to her own troubles with love in real life.

The stars of the "Ship from Shanghai" are Conrad Nagel, Kay Johnson, Carmel Myers and Louis Wolheim. The story opens with the purchase in Shanghai of a yacht by the American millionaire Thorpe, who takes a party aboard for a cruise. Among the crew is a strange, discontented character named Ted, who ships as steward. Becalmed in the Pacific, and with food and water running low, the party discovers that Ted, chafing under the lash of envy, has stirred up a mutiny and obtained all the weapons aboard the ship. He then takes charge of the boat and openly defies all the passengers on board.

The crew deserts in a lifeboat after Ted has taken charge of the water casks, leaving the crazed steward to rule the millionaire passengers, among whom are several women. Then comes a fierce typhoon that strips the boat of its masts, leaving it a derelict hulk in the grip of a madman. The women are faced with a grim choice, and as they wait and fear, the primeval nature of each passenger asserts itself. The veneer of civilization is stripped away until the vessel contains literally a cargo of beasts. Truly nobody can afford to miss this magnificent drama.

Dorothy Mackaill and Sidney Blackmer are starred in "Strictly Modern," which starts out when Aimee Spencer has a thorough understanding with her lover, Heath Desmond, on the eve of their marriage.

Today for the last time the Palace presents Richard Barthelmess in his latest and finest picture, "Son of the Gods," the story of a man who grew up under the impression that he was born of an alien race, and who suffered misery and shame on that account. He is supported by Constance Bennett.

A HISTORY OF CONNECTICUT INDUSTRY

Released by Manufacturers Association of Connecticut

The Curtis & Curtis Company, Bridgeport.

The Curtis & Curtis company, Bridgeport, Connecticut, was established nearly 50 years ago.

In 1880 William D. Forbes, M. E., was superintendent of the old Eaton, Cole & Burnham company, now the Crane company, who manufacturer pipe cutting and threading machinery for many years before that. Their machine was known as the lathe type of machine, which consists of an ordinary lathe with a hollow spindle large enough to put a pipe through—and a die on the tail stock.

Mr. Forbes conceived the idea of building a pipe threading machine which did not screw the long, heavy lengths of pipe into the die, but turned the light dies around the pipe, as is universally done when using a hand die stock, thus saving power, weight and cost.

Patents were granted Mr. Forbes on this invention in 1880 and, with a small amount of money supplied by Roderick P. Curtis, manufacturing was taken up in May, 1888, in a small room with a few men, under the name of Forbes & Curtis.

In 1887 Mr. Forbes sold his interest to Lewis D. Curtis and the firm became Curtis & Curtis. In 1900 the firm was incorporated under the name of The Curtis & Curtis company and in 1909 on the death of Roderick P. Curtis, Lewis B. Curtis bought his brother's interest and became owner of the business.

The first factory was built by the company in 1887 and enlarged from time to time until it now covers several times its original floor space. More than 30,000 machines of the Forbes type have been made and sold and are widely known and used all over the world.

The present officers are: Lewis B. Curtis, president, treasurer and general manager; A. M. Curtis, secretary.

POETRY FOR THE WIDE-AWAKES

My Mountains in America.

I am far from my country,
From the land that I love,
O mountains of America,
O my beautiful mountains!
Where the nightingale sings,
And the cactus-wren builds its nest;
On whose steep slopes,
Clad in eternal green,
The Indian hangs his cottage
Like a swallow's nest;
Where the poor man's home
Shines with cheerful fire,
Fed by liquidambear
With its aromatic resin,
And the choice wood
Of the cedar and aloe

Where are your murmurs,
And that sweet music
Of the thickly-crowded leaves,
Swayed by the soft wind
Where the wild roaring,
Repeated by the echoes,
Of the foaming torrent,
That through dark mountain passes,
Plunging from rock to rock,
Tumultuously flings itself?

Ah, if I could see that valley
Of magnificent perspective,
With its transparent lakes
In which the heavens are reflected,
With its blue canals,
With its flowery floating islands,
And its ring of mountains,
That hold on high the pine forests;
If I could see for one moment
The every-snowy summits
Of lofty Popocatepetl
And giant Iztaccihuatl,
Ah, how my soul would rejoice!
Ah, how great would be my happiness!

But I am far, far away
From that blessed land,
Where the flowers do not fade,
Where the icy north wind does not whistle;
Where the tree does not shed its leaves,
And shelters among its branches
Swarms of hummingbirds,
Which in their swift flight glitter
Like a lovely cascade
Of sparkling jewels.

There the sky is bluer,
Tehere the moon shines with fairer light,
And the glowing sun
Sends benignant warmth;
There the murmurous banana grove
And the crystal fountains
Offer the wayfarer
Coolness and rest.
There rocked my cradle;
There my beloved mother
Lulled me to sleep in her arms

Oasis of the New World,
My worshipped fatherland!
God grant that I may once more see you,
Breathe your fragrant breezes
Beneath your starry sky,
And hear the music of the birds
That song in your woods,
Mountains of America,
O my beautiful mountains!

Joaquin Gomez Vergara. Translated from the Spanish by Alice Stone Blackwell.

On the Death of Benjamin Franklin

(Born January 17, 1706; died April 17, 1790)

Thus, some tall trees that long have stood
The glory of its native wood,
By storms destroyed, or length of years,
Demands the tribute of our tears.

The pile, that took long time to raise,
To dust returns by slow decays;
But, when its destined years are o'er,
We must regret the loss the more.

So long accustomed to your aid,
The world laments your exit made;
So long befriended by your art,
Philosopher, 'tis hard to part!—

When monarchs tumble to the ground
Successors easily are found;
But, matchless Franklin! what a few
Can hope to rival such as you,
Who seized from kings their sceptred pride,
And turned the lightning's dart aside!

Philip Freneau.

UNCLE JED'S TALK TO THE WIDE AWAKES

There are a great many curious facts concerning bees which are not generally known. Scientists tell us that the bee has two stomachs and 1,000 eyes and also that a queen bee lays between 2,000 and 3,000 eggs a day. The hive colony is made up of a single queen bee, working bees and male bees known as drones. As many as 2,000 drones and many thousands of workers live in a single hive.

Drones do not sting but they make considerable noise while flying about. The smallest bees in the hive are the workers and each is armed with a sting. The queen bee lives to the age of three or four years. The worker's life is limited to from five to eight weeks, in which time she literally works herself to death. To hatch a drone requires several days more than it does to hatch a queen or worker. Bees cannot climb a smooth surface like glass, earthenware or tin. The eggs of bees are white, similar to polished ivory and are about the size of the period (.).

For several evenings before swarming a peculiar noise can be heard in the hive. It has been described as a kind of ring or sound of a small trumpet. It is said that when a bee brings pollen into the hive, it advances to the cell in which it is to be deposited and picks it off, as one might his overalls or his rubbers, making one foot help another.

Because of its thoughtfulness in providing for the future and for the care shown the young baby bees, the honey bee ranks among the highest of all insects. It is characteristic of bees that they can foretell an approaching storm. If a shower be approaching, they hurriedly fly through the air in a regular scramble for their hive.

It is said that when first hatched, the bee appears to have no desire to collect honey; she must first serve her apprenticeship in the hive before she decides to go out looking for pollen. For a while she remains at home, making herself generally useful in helping to do the housework of the hive, removing dead bees and foreign matter, attending the queen and feeding her, securing wax, building comb, and ventilating the hive.

When older she either joins the outside workers and spends the rest of her life gathering honey or is detailed to do sentinel duty at the entrance to the hive to prevent any intrusion from other bee colonies.

When the bees get ready to move to a new home, each bee fills her honey sack so as to be provided for the journey. After the cells are completed and filled with honey, they are allowed to remain open a few days, that the extra water may evaporate and the honey be properly cured. They are then sealed or capped over the wax.

A very curious thing happens when the queen bee is taken from the hive. The bees do not immediately notice that their queen is gone. They go on looking after their young and do all the ordinary chores of the hive. But after a short time there is much agitation within the hive.

A great tumult takes place. A strong humming noise is heard, the bees desert their young and rush wildly about. Evidently they discover that their ruler is gone and the bad news spreads like wildfire through the hive. When the queen bee is returned to the hive everything becomes peaceful again.

The bees know their own particular queen bee. Should their own queen be taken from the hive and a strange queen bee be immediately palmed on them, they know it. They seize and surround her so that she either suffocates or dies from hunger.

If the queen bee, however, be missing from the hive for a day or two a strange queen bee will be welcomed and allowed to rule the colony. It seems that when deprived of their queen the bees are thrown into great confusion; that they wait about 24 hours, hoping she will return; but after this the agitation stops and they are ready to welcome a new queen to rule them.

LETTERS WRITTEN BY WIDE AWAKES

Spanish Moss

Dear Uncle Jed: Our school sent for some free material and received it the other day. I am going to tell you about the Spanish moss, samples of which were sent us from Louisiana.

Spanish moss is a vegetable growth and takes its food from the air. It grows hanging from the limbs of trees, vines and any object from which it can suspend. Spanish moss is not a parasite plant, as is proved by the fact that it grows on dead limbs and wires as well as from live material.

Spanish moss is a semi-tropical plant and is seldom found more than 100 miles from the sea coast. It has great commercial value and is shipped in carload lots to automobile factories for use in cushion making.

This hangs in great garlands from trees and forms most beautiful drives and scenery.

We also received cotton in the ball and cotton seeds, bamboo, rice, and sugar cane. These, too, are very interesting.

RUTH COLLINS, age 12
Norwich, R. F. D. No. 6.

Social Service Work

Dear Uncle Jed: The upper grade pupils in our school have written to several concerns for free material in social study work. This week we received many interesting exhibits with a very good description of each one and its uses.

Among them the most interesting to me were rice, bamboo, cotton and sugar cane. These were large samples and gave us all a good idea of just how these things look when in their raw state.

DOROTHY RAY, age 12
Norwich, R. F. D. No. 6

Sugar Kane

Dear Uncle Jed: I am writing about sugar cane. Our school sent for some samples for social study work.

The stalks of sugar cane are reddish brown in color. Sugar cane is a variety of tropical grasses that contains saccherin matter. There are over 50 varieties but only six are used for commercial uses. Louisiana produces 94 per cent of all the sugar cane grown in the United States.

The annual production of sugar in Louisiana is about 300,000 tons. Besides the sugar there are 20,000,000 gallons of sane syrup manufactured. Sugar cane grows to a height of eight to 12 feet, and on to two inches in diameter. Bagasse, the fibre of the sugar cane, is used to make celotex. When the sugar cane is planted it is laid end to end in a furrow. The cane comes up from the eyes in the joints of the canes.

A Monkey

Dear Uncle Jed: I am going to write about a monkey and hope that you and the Wide Awakes will enjoy reading it.

Monkeys are animals whose forefeet are handlike. They are distinguished from the other animals. At a first glance it is evident that they are nearer related to man than any other animal. The monkeys have long, loosely hanging arms, with claws like fingers, their feet resemble their hands. They are good climbers and swing themselves from branch to branch; and bring down fruit from the topmost branches.

My School

Dear Uncle Jed: This is the first time I have written to you and I am going to tell you about my school. I am in the second grade and am eight years old. We start to school every day about 8.45. In class we study different things.

EDWINA YORSZ, age 8.

Caught Two Skunks

Dear Uncle Jed: I have written to you before, but not very lately. I thought you and the Wide Awakes would like to hear about the skunks I caught this winter. One dark muggy night I took the lantern and told mother I was going out for skunks. My nine-year-old sister wanted to come too. I said "come on if you're not afraid of skunks." Not far from the house, in a large lot, I spied something black on the ground. Sure enough it was a skunk. I hit it a couple times with a club and killed it. Sister wanted to kill it, too, so she hit it some more. It was quite large with white spots on its neck.

A week later I got another, only much smaller. I sold the hides and got $2.75 for them. I hunted for more, but they were the only ones I could find this winter. I will try again next fall.

The Christmas Baby

Dear Uncle Jed: This is my fourth letter. I am going to tell you about my little baby sister. Her name is Merilyn. She was born two days before Christmas. The morning she was born she cried and I thought she was an old sick hen. My big sister made me think she was two cats fighting. When I got up mother told me to come in the room and see what she had. I went in and what do you suppose I saw, it was a dear baby sister. I asked her if it was her own baby. I wanted a little baby doll for Christmas but instead I got a baby sister. But I liked it just as well. Don't you think that was a nice Christmas present?

Cat Named Mitty

Dear Uncle Jed: This is the first time I have written to you. We have a cat named Mitty. We call her Mitty because she has such large feet. They look like mittens. So we call her Mitty. Sometimes she jumps up and unlocks the door and walks in.

BILLY ROGERS, age 8.
Spring Hill.

Lincoln's Play

Dear Uncle Jed: My first letter to you will be "Lincoln's Play." The first part of the play depicts the children, mother and father sitting by the fireplace. The mother has a long dress and a long apron, the father is wearing a long coat and trousers. The mother is sitting by the table.

SOPHIE SZABLINSKI, age 10.
Norwich.

Walnut Hill Park

Dear Uncle Jed: I have written to you before, but I have decided to write again and tell you of Walnut Hill park, in New Britain. May be you have been there, if not, I hope you enjoy my letter.

Walnut Hill park is about the most interesting place I ever visited. In the center of the park stands a beautiful fountain of white marble. The water spouts out of red roses, which a little girl holds. Around the fountain small trees are planted, and roses arranged as to colors, adorn this fountain. Along the walks are growing asters, tulips, and maple trees. The fragrance of flowers and music of birds is a dream of paradise. Farther in the interior are the animals. Nearby is also a lake where the people go swimming or boating. There are boats like the white swans, on which I enjoyed a ride.

FRANCES NARUSIEWICZ, age 13.

Likes the Canary

Dear Uncle Jed: Birds are very pretty creatures and they are found in all parts of the world. The bird which I like best of all is the canary. There are many different colors but the color which I prefer best is yellow. I like the canary best, because they are house pets and its whistling makes the home cheerful.

I once had a canary which I called Joey. He was a prize whistler and had won many prizes at "bird shows." Very early in the morning he would begin to whistle very loudly and wake me up.

One day I could not see him in his cage and I wondered what had happened to him, so I went to his cage and there I saw him lying dead. He was nine years old when he died. I was very lonely after his death.

SUSAN LYNAS, age 12
Norwich

Had Many Rabbits

Dear Uncle Jed: I am going to tell you about my pets. I had about 80 rabbits all different sizes and colors. When anyone else entered the coop they all ran back but when I came in they all came to meet me, because they know I feed them. They like hard bread and clover. I fed them vegetables out of my own garden, especially carrots and cabbage. I never heard of rabbits eating onions but mine did.

Now I am going to tell you about another pet which I think you will be interested in. His name is Jim and so of course he is a crow. If you ever came to visit me he would call at the top of his voice, "Caw, caw." The funny part is when my mother hangs up clothes, he goes along, pulls the clothes pins out and the clothes drop on the ground. Then he will fly upon a roof and yell, "Caw, caw."

GRACE SYNDER, age 11

George Washington

Dear Uncle Jed: I am going to write you a story of George Washington. George Washington was born on a plantation in Virginia on Feb. 22, 1782. When a boy, he loved sports and games. He would play soldiers at war with his comrades.

Once his mother had a colt which she loved dearly but no one could ride him. So one day George and his brothers caught hold of the colt and George rode him and the horse could not throw him. At last the horse broke a blood vessel and died. When his mother heard the story she was angry but she forgave George because he was truthful.

When Washington was sixteen he was hired by Lord Fairfax to survey his land and when George and his comrade returned Lord Fairfax was pleased. The governor of Virginia made him public surveyor.

On July 3, 1775, George Washington was elected commander-in-chief of the Continental army.

After the Revolutionary war George Washington was elected president of the United States and served from 1789 to 1797. The whole United States mourned for him when he died, not because he was the first president, but because he was truthful and faithful to all.

MOOSUP

PATHOS IN THE CHANGES AT AMERICAN WOOLEN MILLS

John J. Lyons, who has been a very efficient boss finisher at the local American Woolen Mills, is now with the American Woolen Company mills of Webster, Mass. Mr. Lyons spends week ends with his family, which as yet lives in Moosup. James Gallows, some weavers and sewers, also men and girls, are at the Paco company, Danielson, and several are working as night weavers at Baltic. More of the mill houses are rented now than was the case six months ago.

William E. Johnson, the mills' master mechanic, under different management has been working for 49 years. The office force terminates its services March 8. The horses and stable equipment were offered for sale Saturday by the auctioneers, Witter Bros., of Danielson.

Ernest Lebeau, Clarence Read, Wilfred and Arthur Blair, Arthur and Joseph Plantier, Earl Young, Hube Larose, Ernest Deroches, John Loiselle, Joseph and William Harrell, former employes at the Moosup American Woolen company, are working nights at Baltic, driving back and forth by automobile.

EX-SERVICE MEN HOLD AN INSPIRING MEETING

Meeting of Ernest Godreau post, American Legion, was held Saturday evening with all ex-service men as guests. Eugene Glaude, John Compagnon, Daniel MacArthur, Fred Roberts, chairman of entertainment, and Ernest Lebeau, started in by washing the dishes. The dishes and tables were kindly loaned by Foyer Franco-American, having been transported by the Legionnaires, using Dan MacArthur's truck. Oyster stew, doughnuts, coffee and smokes were provided in abundance.

Commander John Cote called the meeting to order. Chaplain DeWolfe read the Legion prayer; Comrade Read, in absence of Secretary Berard, read the minutes. The commander reported a communication from Legion headquarters regarding the C. M. T. C. for this summer. The Danielson post wrote regarding the 40 and 8 meeting in Danielson March 9, with initiation and entertainment. Chef de Gare of Post 74 in Danielson, Arthur De Forest, was present and spoke of the 40 and 8. He said there would be a boxing bout and a wrestling match. He reminded the men that they had to do a good turn to the Legion to be eligible for the 40 and 8 and that this voiture is for all Windham county. The degree, when it was first initiated in Danielson, had the largest group ever put through, 96 being initiated. Joseph Burton, chef de train, spoke as one of the two first voyageurs in this vicinity. Past District Commander Zimmerman of Coventry post spoke on behalf of the increased membership drive of posts in Windham county. Putnam and Moosup have been pitted against each other for the largest membership gains. Thirty men are paid-up members in Moosup with prospects of 20 more. Joseph Burton of Killingly invited Moosup men to visit at Killingly. Burton told of a Negro Legion member who is one of the first to pay his annual dues. The chaplain and district commander spoke for the order, also George Brigham of Rockville and District Commander Charles F. Bats of Ellington.

19,813 WORLD-FAMOUS BEAUTY EXPERTS ADVISE PALMOLIVE!

"We advise Palmolive because of its safe, soothing cosmetic oils"

says

CARRIE B. FARNHAM

well-known beauty expert of NORWICH

"SOAP and water cleanliness is a basic part of all our home beauty treatments. But not any soap will do. We specify Palmolive." So says this beauty shop. And more than 19,800 beauty specialists, here and abroad, also specify Palmolive.

Why vegetable oils are best

There is a soothing, penetrating quality about a vegetable oil soap lather that searches down into the tiniest pores and frees them of the day's accumulation without hurting the fabric of the skin. As you know, the skin is very sensitive, and must be very carefully handled. Palmolive Soap lather cleanses without irritation. It leaves the skin soft and smooth, and in wonderful condition for your beauty expert's treatment.

Dangers to skin beauty

Unless the skin is thoroughly cleansed twice a day, dirt and dust and cream and make-up gather in the pores of your face and soon become hard little accumulations which develop into blackheads and pimples. These unsightly blemishes are a sign of neglect on your own part. Use the right soap, use the right cleansing method, and you are taking the best steps toward complexion beauty.

Palmolive is a pure vegetable oil soap. Its color is the natural color of palm and olive oils. The natural odor of these vegetable oils makes the addition of heavy perfumes unnecessary.

This is the Palmolive treatment

With both hands make a smooth lather of Palmolive Soap and warm water. Massage this gently into the skin, both face and throat, for about two minutes. Then rinse it off with warm water until you can actually feel the accumulation being swept away. Now, give a final rinse with cold water, even icy water. This is refreshing, and closes the pores, preventing too much dirt and grease from getting underneath the surface of the skin.

There is only one person truly qualified to advise you, and that is a trained professional beauty expert, who has spent time and study learning how best to care for your good looks. When she tells you to use Palmolive you have the highest possible authority, and 19,813 such experts, today, advise this vegetable oil soap. You will probably use it for the bath as well as the face. It costs only 10 cents a cake, you know . . . little enough to pay for a safeguard to beauty.

The beauty salon of Carrie B. Farnham has a staff of expert operators qualified to advise Norwich's smartest women.

This beauty salon with modern, scientific methods and a skilful, well-trained staff, advises its patrons to use Palmolive Soap. Such recommendation is authoritative.

"Your skin must be kept clean and free of irritation. The vegetable oils in Palmolive Soap are soothing, refreshing, penetrating. You should use this palm and olive oil soap twice a day to safeguard complexion beauty."

POETRY

When Mother Drives The Car

We've read for years and months and weeks
How Mother, from the rear,
"Helps out" the driver when she speaks
In accents chilled with fear.
We've had our fill of moth-blown jokes
'Bout Father's better half;
Too long she's been for writing blokes
The grist to grind a laugh.

But soon we'll have another sort
Of jibe to tickle us,
For Mother's come to be a sport;
She loves to drive the bus.
She has a notion in her dome,
For her the road was made;
She sings no longer, "Home, Sweet Home,
She's daily on parade.

With car parked hourly at the curb,
To heed her beck and call,
There's nothing much that can disturb
Her mind from spring to fall
No harsh words ever come to pass,
No distance is too far,
For Father buys the oil and gas
When Mother drives the car.

—L. N. Bull, in Detroit News.

1930 Model

There's a car that I'm backing, that's lacking
In nothing to make her the rage.
She has a speedometer
And a thermometer,
Also a gasoline gauge;
And the lines of her chassis are classy.
There's a spotlight, a stoplight, a clock;
She has balloon tires
And wheels made of wires,
A flower vase, a robe rail, a lock,
There's a fine motometer, a heater,
An ash tray, and vanity case,
A dandy typewriter,
A cigarette lighter,
And a compact to powder your face.
There's a cute pianola, victrola,
A shaker, four glasses, and flask,
A cat and canary,
She's quite sanitary.
I don't know what more you could ask,
I am sure if you bought her, your daughter
And son would be much gratified.
She has every allure
And I'm pretty near sure
That there's some kind of engine inside.

ADJOURNED TOWN MEETING LAID TAX OF 131-4 MILLS ON GRAND LIST

A town tax of 13 1-4 mills was laid Monday night at the adjourned annual town meeting in the town hall. With an attendance of about 25 the meeting was called to order at 8 o'clock by Selectman William S. Murray who stated the purpose of the meeting. Tyler D. Guy then presented a resolution fixing the tax at 13 1-4 mills and the resolution was quickly adopted. Adjournment immediately followed, the meeting having been in session approximately two minutes.

The tax this year is one quarter mill larger than the tax laid a year ago. The increase is due to the increased school appropriation voted at the annual town meeting last October. If there had been no increase in the appropriation for the town's schools the tax this year would have been less than the 13 mill tax laid last March. The grand list on which the tax is computed is $48,643,304.

LENTEN TALKS TO APPEAR DAILY IN THE BULLETIN

The daily suggested devotions of "The Fellowship of Prayer for 1930" will be published by The Bulletin throughout the Lenten or pre-Easter season, beginning Wednesday, March 5, and concluding Easter, April 20.

"The Fellowship of Prayer" is a movement conducted under the auspices of the commission on Evangelism and Life Service of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America. The purpose of the movement, according to the Rev. D. Charles L. Goodell, New York, N. Y., executive secretary of the commission, is to further the observance of the Lenten or pre-Easter season as a period for deepening the spiritual life and for increasing the consciousness of unity in worship among people of all the churches. The use of "The Fellowship" devotions privately by individuals and families, and publicly at services small or large, is earnestly commended to the Federal council's entire constituency comprising twenty-eight denominations with a membership of more than twenty million. In foreign countries many missionaries and members of the national churches will join in the "The Fellowship of Prayer."

The author of "The Fellowship" devotions for 1930 is the Rev. Dr. Jay T.

AUTHOR, "THE FELLOWSHIP OF PRAYER FOR 1930"

Stocking of Pilgrim Congregational church, St. Louis, Mo. The Rev. Dr. Stocking brought to his task a pastoral experience of 25 fruitful years and the collaboration of a committee representing the national superintendents of evangelism of the denominations.

This year the devotions have been prepared especially as anticipatory of the 1900th anniversary of Pentecost or the beginning of the Christian church, which will be celebrated by all denominations from Easter to Whitsunday in June. The general theme taken for the devotions is "Coming to Terms With Life."

"To adjust ourselves intelligently, understandingly and happily to life in its many aspects and with its changing fortunes is our unceasing problem," according to the Rev. Dr. Stocking. "To solve that problem is to master the art of living.

"Religion is an end in itself. But it is likewise a means to this end of good living. To seek and to use the help of religion in this divine undertaking of ours is the object of our Lenten meditations.

"The Christian religion is a way of life. Its interpretations are laden with peace, hope and power. As we reflect on the spirit and words of its divine Central Figure we shall see every new reason why He should be called the "Light of the World" and discover with increasing clearness that it is only through His view of men and of God that we have life and have it abundantly."

Law on State Seal

A measure will be introduced into the general assembly at the next session to correct the omission in the state constitution in regard to the state seal used in official documents. This line reads: "He (the secretary) shall be the keeper of the seal of the state, which shall not be altered."

DRY LAW DENOUNCED AS A MONSTROUS INHUMANITY

Crowds Cheered As Chairman Graham of the Senate Judiciary Committee Declared That Prohibition Had Never Been and Never Would Be Enforced—Wets Closed Their Hearing With Accounts of Conspiracy, Racketeering, "Drinking Drys" and Drunken Young Girls—Audience, Consisting Largely of Women, Applauded Testimony of Witnesses.

WASHINGTON, March 4—(AP)—A dozen anti-prohibitionists, including four aristocratic and energetic women, occupied the seventh and last day of appeal before the house judiciary committee for repeal of the eighteenth amendment with accounts of conspiracy, racketeering, "drinking drys," drunken young girls and crowded courts in arguing that the dry laws have failed.

Chairman Graham of the committee, a Philadelphia lawyer, aged 80, climaxed the day by denouncing prohibition as an inhumanity which had never been and would never be enforced. His stand, an amplification of that he took on the opening of the hearings, evoked cheers from the crowded committee room which were silenced by the pounding of his gavel.

Thus ended the presentation of testimony by opponents attacking the ten year old amendment, on the first anniversary of the inauguration of President Hoover, whose platform carried a strict law enforcement plank. On tomorrow friends of the prohibitory laws will commence their defense of them, and they also will be allowed seven days.

The drys will first present Dr. Daniel A. Poling, of New York, president of the International Christian Endeavor union. Former Representative Edward Keating of Colorado, and Patrick Callahan of Louisville, Kentucky, a business man, also have been named by Mrs. Laura D. Yost, president of the Women's Christian Temperance union, as among those who will appear.

Representative Linthicum, democrat, Maryland, chief of the unofficial house wet committee, today reviewed the testimony of the numerous previous witnesses who demanded repeal of federal liquor laws and restoration of state control. He cited the testimony of such men as Pierre S. Dupont, multi-millionaire industrialist of Wilmington, Delaware, and W. W. Atterbury, of Philadelphia, president of the Pennsylvania railroad, in addition to that by educators, lawyers, mothers, physicians, former government officials, and members of congress—and emphasized that none stood for the return of "the old time saloon."

Linthicum said he favored the Sabath resolution which would permit state control under federal supervision, the liquor to be dispensed in federal dispensaries only. He appealed to the Anti-Saloon league, which he credited with driving out the old saloon, to come to the front in the effort to drive out speakeasies.

From time to time the audience, consisting largely of women, many of whom stood for hours to hear the testimony, applauded the witnesses. Chairman Graham had to rap for order and Representative Moore, republican, Ohio, protested that the applause continued so long that members of the committee did not have an opportunity to cross-examine the witnesses before they left the stand.

Chairman Graham presented a protest from his personal physician, Dr. S. Solis Cohen of Philadelphia, against the limitation of medicinal liquor prescriptions to one pint every ten days even though the patient's life may depend upon a greater amount. Graham said the Volstead law provisions constituted a reflection upon the medical profession.

At the outset of the hearing, Graham had read into the record a letter from Walter W. Liggett. Liggett had charged before the committee that liquor could be bought by a stranger within 15 minutes in any town in Kansas.

The Kansas attorney general said in a statement to Graham that the writer's remarks were "false, libelous and untrue." Liggett reiterated his charges today and said his investigation had resulted in the dismissal of the Kansas snooping squad, which he said was composed of ex-convicts and bootleggers.

Dr. Stewart Paton of Baltimore, a Johns Hopkins university lecturer on psychiatry, testified that prohibition was not a sound method of preventing liquor consumption, and for that reason was having a disastrous effect on the young people of the country. He said under questioning that the moderate drinker has a greater expectancy of life than the teetotaler.

Mrs. Courtlandt Nicoll, of New York, secretary of the National Association for Prohibition Reform, said her organization was determined to get rid of "that arch-hypocrite—the drinking dry."

She said she had seen legislators of New York state cast a dry vote and later in the day "drink whatever they could obtain," adding that the legislatures of other states were no different.

Mrs. Nicoll challenged an argument which she said was advanced by drys that middle western states did not have the conditions she had found the east. "The women of the west tell a different story," she said. "One of them told me: . . 'We have the finest stills in the United States in Kansas. Garages back of the high school in my city are used by boys and girls for storing liquor and beer.'"

At the request of Representative Moore, republican, Ohio, she said the city in question was Hutchinson, Kansas, but declined to name her informant, saying she was a prominent woman sixty years old.

The other women witnesses were Mrs. Carrol Miller, of Pittsburgh; Mrs. W. W. Montgomery, Jr., of Philadelphia; and Mrs. Robert W. Lovett, of Boston.

The men witnesses were W. W. Ball, of Charleston, South Carolina, editor of the News and Courier; Norman Johnson, of New York; Noel B. Martin, of Lewiston, Idaho, a lawyer; Breckenridge Long, of St. Louis, a former assistant secretary of state; Henry H. Stroud, of Tulsa, Oklahoma, a former special agent of the justice department; and Dr. I. N. Hilton, of Washington, a former president of the American Pharmaceutical association.

Mrs. Miller said that powerful organizations of ministers "have decided they will dominate the government," and that the Methodist Temperance committee a few years ago declared itself "guardian of the prohibition law."

"Protestant leaders," she said, "are ignoring the acts of Christ to support a failing cause. This is one reason why youth is not taking the same interest in the churches."

"The drunken girl of 14 is for the first time an important and growing danger," said Mrs. Lovett, vice-chairman for Massachusetts of the National Association for Prohibition Reform.

"How can children resist temptations when their elders do not?"

She cited the safeguards that had been thrown around the present adult generation during its childhood and said it was essential that some such defense be erected around the children now growing up.

Mrs. Montgomery, president of the Molly Pitcher club, testified that "the 18th amendment is the only false note in the constitution" and it threatens destruction of the whole.

"The government," she added, "has honestly tried to enforce prohibition, but it never can without the sympathy of the people."

PROTEST FROM FORMER HEAD BOSTON POLICE LIQUOR SQUAD

BOSTON, March 4.—(AP)—Oliver B. Garrett, former head of the Boston police department's liquor squad, whose pensioning is the subject of a legislative investigation, today exchanged words with Attorney General Joseph E. Wardner and James McDevitt, assistant superintendent of police. The exchange came at the close of today's public hearing on the case, which was conducted by Warner and at which McDevitt was a witness.

When McDevitt, the last witness, left the stand Garrett introduced himself to Warner and said, "I want to know my rights."

"Rights," exclaimed Warner.

"Yes, rights," answered Garrett. "I want to protest. I don't think this is fair at all. This is Russia. All the stuff that has gone in is false. It's all one-sided."

Warner slammed his hand down on his desk and replied, "You're here every day. I'll conduct this the way I see fit."

Garrett left the hearing room and approached McDevitt. He shook his finger in McDevitt's face and said, "Why don't you be fair?" McDevitt did not answer and walked away.

GREAT DAM DEDICATED BY CALVIN COOLIDGE

COOLIDGE DAM, Arizona, March 4—(AP)—Calvin Coolidge, former president of the United States, today formally dedicated a great dam named in his honor, and in the same breath called upon the people of the southwest to dedicate themselves to the task of completing another great project—Boulder Canyon dam.

Speaking from the parapet of Coolidge dam, Mr. Coolidge plunged into a plea for unity in the southwest. He spoke for 20 minutes and climaxed the dedication ceremonies by breaking over the parapet a bottle filled with the waters of the Gila river.

"This dam and its waters do not need dedicating," the former president asserted. "It is the people gathered here who need to be dedicated."

Thousands of persons from Arizona and many from neighboring states heard Mr. Coolidge advise them to read a passage in the Bible, "Agree with thy adversaries quickly."

NEW YORK, March 4.—(AP)—Nine persons, including two women, were indicted by a federal grand jury in Brooklyn today for conspiracy in furnishing allegedly fraudulent visas and incidental papers to Polish citizens who thereby gained admission to the United States.

Among those indicted was Harry M. Hall, former vice-consul at Warsaw, Poland, who was dismissed on Feb. 12 last as a result of the visa investigations. United States Attorney Howard W. Ameli refused to reveal the present whereabouts of Hall lest some harm befall him.

The two women named in the indictments are Miss Heinie Fabrikanc, alias Horowitz, who is being sought by federal authorities, and Mrs. Masza Sznifer, who was arrested several days ago and released in bail.

The others indicted were Louis Horowitz, Morris and Louis Baskin, Moszek Faszynick and Leo Shapiro, under arrest in Brooklyn, and Moszek Iglicki, who was said in dispatches from Warsaw to be under arrest there. UNABLE TO LOCATE MISSING WESTERN AIR EXPRESS PLANE

LOS ANGELES, March 4.—(AP)—J. T. Barber, a rancher who reported sighting the wreckage of an airplane in the San Bernardino mountains yesterday, returned to Lake Arrowhead today with two deputy sheriffs. They had been unable to locate the ship, a missing Western Air Express transport.

Barber said he had been unable to find the canyon in which he claimed he had seen the wreckage through field glasses. The two officers said they made an intensive search of the area but saw nothing of the lost ship and its crew of three in any of the deep canyons.

Western Air Express officials immediately ordered resumption of the search of the mountains by airplane and for the time abandoned further attempts to locate the ship by land.

WASHINGTON, March 4—(AP)—The remarkable recuperative powers of William Howard aft today, carried him safely through another day of his serious illness.

He rested comfortably, sleeping occasionally. The physicians reported no change in his condition, which has improved steadily since the critical stages of last week.

While Drs. Francis R. Hagner and Thomas A. Claytor continued to warn against unwarranted optimism as a result of the gains made by the former chief justice, their official bulletin said:

"The condition of the former chief justice is unaltered since yesterday. He is comfortable and continues to take a moderate amount of nourishment."

With members of the family having returned to their homes temporarily, there were fewer visitors to the residence.

Dressed only in ordinary winter flying clothes but in an enclosed heated cabin, Captain Sergievsky drove his silver winged ship up through a hole in the clouds shortly after 1:30 p. m., above North Beach, Queens borough, and an hour and a half later dropped back down over Oyster Bay, an apparent new record registered on his barograph.

Today's record brings the United States one step nearer to the head of the procession in the peace time race for air supremacy, the score now standing Germany 43, United States 35.

Plea For Provisional Government In Haiti

Commission Hears Threat of Revolution On April 14 Unless Legislative Elections Are Held.

PORT-AU-PRINCE, March 4.—(AP)—The Hoover investigating commission today received its first concrete plan from the Haitian people for remedying the political ills Haiti has complained of and blames the American intervention in the republic's affairs.

George N. Leger, a native lawyer of high reputation, recommended that a provisional government be established at the earliest possible moment to rule the country until the election of deputies and senators to the national assembly. The assembly would later choose a president.

Leger's recommenadtion was backed by a warning from Justin Sam, leader of the League of Haitian Youth, that 10,000 young Haitians would join their elders in revolution on April 14 unless legislative elections were held. Mr. Sam also demanded that President Hoover issue a proclamation ordering the end of the Borno regime.

Mr. Leger, speaking in English, made a distinct impression on W. Cameron Forbes and the other commissioners.

Accusing the American authorities of having aroused race prejudice in Haiti for the first time in its history, he admitted that much material good had come out of the marines' occupation of the island republic. Roads had been built, sanitary conditions were admirable, and the national guard was well organized.

But, Mr. Leger insisted, the price paid for the material progress realized was beyond its value. He maintained that the United States was dominating, instead of helping, Haiti, and termed the choice of Brigadier General John H. Russell as American high commissioner "most unfortunate."

Specifically, he accused General Russell of having made a report stating that the Haitian people had "the mentality of a 7-year old child."

Seeing no possibility of electing a president by a plebiscite, because the people were not used to this method, he recommended that the assembly be chosen first.

SELECTING JURY FOR TRIAL OF LALONE AND MOULTHROPE

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., March 4—(AP)—Little or no progress was made today in the selection of a jury to try Roland Lalone and Watson Moulthrope, escaped Connecticut convicts, for the killing of City Detective W. D. Smith. At the end of the second day of the trial, only eleven of the more than 200 names on the original venire remained and Judge Daniel A. Simmons drew the names of 75 more veniremen who will come to court tomorrow morning.

Thirteen of the 20 challenges allowed the defense had been exhausted and only half of the state's twenty challenges remained.

A discussion of capital punishment, which the state will ask for the two young convicts, was the high light of the day.

Lalone and Moulthrope conferred frequently with their attorneys as the veniremen were questioned. Lalone's mother and sister, residents of Worcester, Mass., were in the courtroom yesterday and today, but were not permitted to talk with him while the court was in session. They chatted with him during brief recesses, however.

Although two days had been spent in an effort to get a jury, attorneys in the case would not make an estimate tonight as to when the task might be completed.

HOOVER APPROVES WHEAT STABILIZATION PROGRAM

Assertion Made By Chairman Legge of the Board—The Chairman Said He Would Not Oppose Senatorial Investigation, But Declared That Every Day of Investigation Would Mean Delay In Progress of the Work—Order to Halt Purchase of Cooperative Wheat Resulted From a Tremendous Rush of Wheat to Terminal Markets.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—(AP)—The farm board's wheat stabilization program continued to command interest today in Washington, with Chairman Legge declaring that President Hoover was squarely behind the board "at every turn in the road without reservation, whatsoever."

Scheduled to go before the senate agriculture committee on Friday to outline the board's policies, the chairman sai dhe had not acquainted himself with the text of the resolution by Senator Nye, republican, North Dakota, proposing a congressional investigation of the administration of the farm relief act. The committee postponed consideration of the Nye resolution today until the week-end.

Informed that the committee wanted the views of himself and Secretary Hyde before proceeding with the resolution, Chairman Legge indicated he would not actively oppose an investigation but said the board was extremely busy and that every day of investigation would mean delay in the progress of its work.

The order halting the purchase of cooperative wheat at prices equivalent to the loan schedule to cooperatives resulted, Legge said, from a tremendous rush of wheat to the terminal markets.

The purpose of the order was to prevent an embargo which threatened to develop on five terminal markets, he said, rather than to placate independent grain dealers who protested against prices to cooperatives that were from 10 to 12 cents above the cash market.

The chairman said the order had taken into consideration the protest of country millers, friends of the farm board, who were placed in an "unhappy situation" by the competition of flour from millers in the terminal markets where the cheap wheat was sold, their protest, he said, was "sound and reasonable."

Senator Nye said today after a meeting of the agriculture committee that he was convinced that the grain operators were seeking "to discredit the farm board and the farm relief act."

"Now is the time to go into this," he added.

The agriculture committee also considered today the resolution of Senator McMaster, republican, South Dakota, to authorize the purchase of $25,000,000 of grain by the government to be used in China famine relief and decided to hear on Thursday John Barton Payne, chairman of the American Red Cross, and John Van A. MacMurray, former minister to China.

Senator Nye was prompted in offering his resolution yesterday by what he understood to be a complete reversal of policy by the farm board and the National Grain corporation at the Chicago conference last Saturday, however, he said today he had received information from two of the leaders of the farmers' cooperative movement that they had made the motions resulting in the decision of the Chicago conference respecting purchase of wheat.

There has been little expression of sentiment from the agriculture committee on the Nye proposal pending the hearing of Secretary Hyde and Chairman Legge. The hearing of the government officers on Friday will be held in executive session.

Stafford Springs

At a well attended town meeting held in Warren Memorial hall Monday evening it was voted to lay a tax of 21 mills on the dollar on the grand list, as revised by the board of relief. This is an increase of 1 1-2 mills over the rate of a year ago. The total grand list is now $7,085,985, an increase of $38,951 over last year's list. At the meeting held last October a resolution was adopted providing that the town clerk prepare and have printed an alphabetical list of all taxpayers in the town of Stafford. Town Clerk J. Carl Converse said that this would be an expensive job, that it would take several months to prepare such a list and that it might be well if this vote were rescinded. After some discussion, it was unanimously voted to rescind the resolution passed at the October meeting. C. P. Bradway, a large property owner from West Stafford, was opposed to making the tax rate 21 mills. Alfred Bidorini, George J. Greendonner and Hugh Ward also spoke in opposition to increasing the rate. Judge William H. Heald, the presiding officer, explained that if the meeting did not vote to make the rate sufficient to cover the town budget adopted several months ago the selectmen might fix the rate. The resolution making the rate 21 mills was passed by a substantial majority. Rudolph Nothnick, who believes that the town is too extravagant in the management of its affairs, said that he had a remedy and wished to have a statement which he had prepared read at the meeting. As the statement dealt largely with borough affairs and matters which should properly be brought to the attention of the school board, the chairman ruled it out of order.

What Shall I Do for Gray Hair?

By ALICE STRAWN

I am often asked for a good way to restore gray, faded or streaked hair. While there are many preparations on the market for the purpose, I know of nothing better than a mixture of good old sage tea and sulpher. You can either prepare the mixture at home yourself, or as most women prefer, buy it already prepared and ready to use.

The correct recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, may be had in Wyeth's Sage & Sulphur Compound. All druggists carry it and since the cost is only 75c a bottle, there is really no need for any woman to go to the bother of preparing it herself. You would be surprised if you knew the number of men and women who employ Wyeth's Sage & Sulpher because its use is undetectable.

You simply moisten a comb or a soft brush with it and draw it through your hair, one small strand at a time. By morning the gray disappears and another application or two sees your hair beautifully and evenly restored to its full original color. There is no suggestion of that hard, dyed look that repels fastidious women. I advise any woman—or man—whose hair is turning gray to try Wyeth's Sage & Sulphur.

DANIELSON

ONLY $1300 IN ABATEMENTS ALLOWED BY BOARD OF RELIEF

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, March 4.— Figures filed with Town Clerk Frank T. Preston by members of the board of relief show that total reductions of only $1300 were made by them following their deliberations at sessions held during February. The gross reduction was $1400, but $100 of this amount offset by the finding of an unassessed house lot. The grand list as it now stands, after subtraction of the net amount of changes made through the board of relief, is $6,789,220. It is upon this sum, the budget of expenditures for the present fiscal year, less income, will be figured, and presented for consideration by the voters at the adjourned annual town meeting to be held Monday evening of next week. At the selectmen's office today it was stated that the prospective tax rate had not been figured out as yet but an estimate will be ready for the voters at the meeting mentioned.

Even the trappers and dealers in raw furs throughout this territory have felt the kick-back from the collapse of the stock market last fall. The answer to this seems to lie in the fact that a great many people who waxed affluent from their market trading operations when the going was good for the past two or three years have not been in a position to buy beautiful fur garments during the cold weather season now coming to a close. There being a greatly reduced number of buyers, there likewise has been less demand for pelts.

The territory hereabouts yields thousands of dollars worth of raw furs every cold weather season. It has the past few months, but selling them at good prices has been something else again. Mink prices have shrunk about one-third, one well known dealer in pelts said today, and there has been very little market for muskrat, usually one of the best selling furs that this countryside yields in quantities. The same situation has applied to fox furs.

On the whole, the raw fur market for the cold weather season of 1929-1930 has been the most unsatisfactory from the point of revenue of any of the past decade. Those who have heretofore created in large measure the market for fine fur garments have not been buying liberally. The situation seems to forecast lower prices for high grade fur garments next fall and winter.

A bit of savagery practiced on two dumb beasts was being investigated today by state officers of the Danielson barracks. Two dogs owned by Roscoe Ashley, resident in the East Franklin street section of Danielson, are the victims of human cruelty of such degree as has rarely been chronicled in this section of the state in many years.

It developed today that one of the dogs came dragging himself home last Saturday afternoon, pitifully mutilated. Sunday, Mr. Ashley's other dog came home, ruthlessly slashed in the same manner. One dog was so badly cut up that he had to be killed. The other remained alive this afternoon. Both dogs came from a territory in a certain direction from where they were owned and it was in that area that the investigation by state officers was underway today.

There can be no doubt that the dogs, both males, were the victims of some abnormal human being. They could not have been possibly injured as they were by mere chance in roaming about the woods and fields or in combat with other animals. Their injuries were gross and too unusual.

Boxing fans will troop forth from Danielson Friday evening, bound for Parish hall, Taftville, to watch the developments that the promising card, arranged for that night, will produce. Naturally, there is special interest in the fortunes of Rene Peloquin, promising Danielson protege of the square-circle, who will appear in one of the scheduled bouts. Rene has been going good of late, and much is expected of him in his Friday night appearance.

A fortnight hence the electors of the borough of Danielson will be called upon to name candidates for election to borough offices on the first Monday in April. For several years past the annual borough caucus has been a perfunctory affair, with hardly a corporal's guard turning out to have a say as to who shall be the nominees. Many observers of things political hold that this is a good sign, that the community is satisfied and appreciative of the administration given by its public servants. That may be true, but shrewd observers of things point out that such a somnolent condition leaves the doors wide open for an organized minority to seize control of borough affairs and bring about an administrative situation that might cause much turmoil. All of which, numbers of citizens point out, behooves voters to be at the caucus this year.

A comedy, Miss Molly, was presented this evening with success and under the auspices of the Wesleyan circle at the Methodist Episcopal church. On Sunday, representatives of various American Legion posts in this section of eastern Connecticut are expected to be present here.

PUTNAM

POLICE GRILL SEVERAL WITNESSES IN MURDER CASE

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, March 4.—The efforts of Webster police and officers of the state police barracks at Danielson, investigators of the Trudeau murder case at Webster, were today confined to the interviewing of witnesses who will testify in the case when it comes to trial sometime during May. According to police, several witnesses have been found who are to testify of hearing of Leon Trudeau's various threats to murder his wife, Cecilia. This evidence will be presented to the grand jury, when the state attempts to secure a true bill of murder against the husband of the murdered woman now being held without bail in the county jail at Worcester. Police are carefully shielding the identity of all state witnesses in the case.

While Massachusetts authorities are satisfied that the crime was committed in Wilsonville, this state, the fact has not been definitely established and from all appearances Trudeau and his sweetheart, Miss Lena Wieczek, Worcester girl being held as an accessory after the fact, will very likely go to trial in Massachusetts. However, Connecticut state police, who have concerned themselves with the investigation, are continuing their search of the deserted Wieczek farm in Wilsonville in search of new clues to substantiate the Connecticut murder theory. At a late hour this afternoon police reported that no new developments were forthcoming and that none are expected until Trudeau and Miss Wieczek appear in Webster district court Saturday morning. That the officials of the lower court will find evidence enough to order the couple held for a grand jury investigation is a foregone conclusion of the police.

CASE OF BOSWORTH IS CONTINUED FOR A WEEK

(Special to The Bulletin.)

PUTNAM, March 4.—After two days of re-writing warrants for the arrest of Burton D. Bosworth of East Woodstock, in which charges ranging from breach of peace to trespassing and kidnaping were incorporated, the officials of the town court of Waterford, in New London county, finally concluded that Bosworth had abducted his five-year-old son from the home of a guardian, and so a formal charge of abduction was filed against him when he appeared in court there Monday.

Bosworth was represented by Attorney Irving H. Miron of this city, who asked for a continuance of the case for one week. Bonds of $5,000 were furnished by Benjamin Bosworth, a brother of the defendant. Bosworth did not enter any plea.

Robert Bosworth, five-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Bosworth, is still in custody of his father, Attorney Miron said today. When asked where the child was residing, the lawyer refused to answer.

The Putnam taxi station in Union square, for more than a decade the outstanding forum, is no more. The home of the independent hackney drivers passed to the great beyond this morning when Earl C. Rogers, landlord of the Putnam Inn, completed razing operations within the taxi office that were part of his plans for the institution of a modern grill. Known to every man about the town as "the taxi station," the spot has perhaps given birth to solutions of more great problems of national interest than the seat of the government in Washington ever knew. In the hectic days of the summer of 1928 the democratic forces made the taxi station their headquarters and on more than one evening words flew thick and fast when a supporter of the G. O. P. cause ventured to cross its threshold. Problems of municipal interest have always reached a climax in the opinions of the group of debaters who selected a seat within the little rooms in preference to the comfortable chairs offered in the lounge rooms of the city's better known clubs.

Policemen and firemen and His Honor, too, have shared the benefits of the now past club and often times have "just stepped in to steal a smoke," to become engaged in the topics of conversation, and later awaken to the fact that time flits on. Newspapermen, young and old, have learned that much of the city's activities that furnish readable material were brought to the fore in the course of debates that arose within the chambers.

Yes, the taxi station is a thing of the past, much to the regret of those who made it a rendezvous for the purpose of passing an evening then and now.

The members of the Putnam fire department were hosts to more than 500 people Monday evening when the 30th annual ball, a brilliant and colorful affair, was held in the state armory on Harris street. The committee in charge and scores of dancers were in accord in adjudging this year's event the greatest success in the social annals of the department.

The huge drill shed of the armory, stripped of its military fixtures, provided a delightful setting for the hundreds of beautifully gowned women and the uniformed members of the fire department.

The music was furnished by Bob Macdonald and his band from Woonsocket, R. I. At 8 o'clock the musicians opened the programme with a concert which lasted until 9, when the dancing began. The committee, aware of the presence of members of the older generation, included a number of the old-fashioned quadrilles in the programme. The decorations were simple but attractive. In the center of a pine hedge were the letters "P. F. D." in electric lights.

While the 30th annual ball was adjudged a complete social success, the event in a financial way many times surpassed the expectations of the firemen. The committee responsible for arrangements consisted of the following members: Frank Dumas, general chairman; Elzear Guertin, Robert Ramspot, Edmund Keane, Vincent McEvoy, Frederick Dinsdale, John Ryan, Harry Sharpe, Walter A. Wehaton, Sr., Phillip Gagne, Merle D. Fish, Harry Morse, George A. Winterburn, Archi Bourgeois, Alvin Jarvis, Camille Beausoliel, Henry Guertin, A. J. Benoit and Frank Baker.

Funeral services for Mrs. Stephanie Bibeault of Main street were held this morning at St. Mary's church at 9 o'clock. A requiem high mass was celebrated by Rev. U. O. Bellerose pastor. She was 71 years of age and was a native of St. Dominick Canada. She is survived by her husband, Alexis Bibeault, of Main street.

The funeral of Mrs. Mary Hulda of West Thompson was held yesterday morning at 9 o'clock in the mission church of the Sacred Heart in West Thompson. A requiem high mass was celebrated by Rev. ADMINISTRATION'S FIRST YEAR

Inasmuch as the first year of the Hoover administration has passed it is inevitable that there should be references to its accomplishments. There will be those who will look at the past 12 months through critical eyes, eyes that see politically, and there will be others who will appraise the situation for what it actually is and give weight to the handicaps for which the president is not responsible as well as to the accomplishments. Furthermore, credit will be given for what was sought and would have been accomplished but for the obstacles thrown in the way.

The president can do just about so much and no more. He can point out the need of legislation but it depends upon the sweet will of congress as to whether he gets it. President Hoover has undertaken much in his first year. He has accomplished much but there is much which remains unfinished through no fault of his own. Under similar circumstances it would have been much the same in any administration because of the deplorable situation which has developed in the senate.

In order to hasten matters which needed to be gotten out of the way early, a special session of congress was called. That has ended but the work that it was asked to do is still hanging fire. It put through the farm board legislation but it is still dealing with the tariff, which should have been gotten out of the way months ago.

In behalf of international peace our delegates are at the London conference which was largely the outcome of the president's efforts and in connection with such matters as law enforcement and the outbreak at Haiti he has commissions at work that should accomplish something in due time.

There has been raised the question of dealing further with prohibition, which has occupied considerable time in congress and is destined to take much more, and there developed the stock market crash with its resulting effects upon business and industry. But these were not prompted by the administration. Nevertheless, President Hoover responded immediately to the unemployment situation and unquestionably got cooperation in a manner that prevented the situation from being much worse than it otherwise would have been. This was an instance which demonstrated the prompt response he has made to meet emergencies. It has been most unfortunate that those responsible for the political play in the senate were able to control the situation, but that can in no way be charged to the president. Not only he but business and the country has suffered from it. The situation was not of his making even though he was unable to unmake it.

The administration's first year has been filled with most commendable appointments, thus indicating the character of service desired. There has been leadership of the highest grade, a masterly and businesslike handling of the reins and even though there have been disappointments, though not because of blunders, it confirms the belief of the big majority that went to the polls back in November, 1928, that the right man for the job was elected.

SUBSIDIZING THE SHIPS

One of the things which this government has been endeavoring for years to do is to get rid of the merchant vessels which the war left on its hands. It has been a slow process but many of them have been acquired by private capital on the strength of legislation which it was believed would give the purchasers contracts for carrying the mail. It was seen that through such government business it would be possible to make the ships pay.

When it came to seeking those contracts after the acquisition of the vessels, it was found by the interdepartmental committee that there was nothing that actually authorized such awards. While it may have been the thought at the time the legislation was passed, it failed to get its place in the law. It was one of those cases where congress had failed to do what it should have done, according to the sentiment at the time. The result was that it was up to congress to straighten out the situation and make good the omission.

It has taken some time to get around to this task but favorable action was taken by the house last week. When the senate will act, if ever, no one knows, but it is legislation that seems justified in view of the understanding that was given to the purchasers of the ships before the deals were made.

As it stands now they have got the ships without the all-important contracts with which they expected to make the lines successful. The contracts mean that the government is going to give indirect aid to buyers of government vessels quite the same as it does to ship operators who build new vessels in this country.

In the bill there have been incorporated such provisions as it is believed will give protection to the government and the people and safeguard public interest. It must be shown that the ability is possessed to render adequate service and it is to be expected that due weight will be attached to that provision before any contracts are awarded.

Subsidies have never been looked upon with favor in this country and it is probable that only through the indirect method of carrying the mail that such could have been obtained at this time. The bill that is awaiting senate action is, however, only what is called for by the failure of the previous legislation to do as intended.

SOUNDING THE PEOPLE

Although prohibition has been in effect for over a decade it cannot be said to be generally accepted as a fixture in its present form or to be regarded as satisfactory. There are demands for modification, repeal and much better enforcement.

In connection with the discussions which develop concerning prohibition, much is said continually about what the people want and what they don't want, as if the fact was actually known as to what the verdict of the majority of the people actually is.

There are certain states where the people have voted on the matter, and there it is known to a reasonable degree whether the majority is dry or wet. Certain states are known to be one or the other because of action in the past, before the days of federal prohibition, or because of votes taken since that time in some instances as the result of the prohibition conditions. Just at the present time there is a resolution before the Rhode Island legislature calling for a referendum in November to determine if the 18th amendment shall be retained. Rhode Island is one of the two states that has never ratified the amendment, and therefore could reasonably be considered wet, but in spite of that there is the belief that an expression by the state is desirable.

Such votes may not be binding, but they nevertheless indicate what the people want and for that reason there is certain to be much interest in the national poll that is being taken by the Literary Digest, the magazine that accomplished such remarkable results in connection with similar polls concerning election results.

This affords an opportunity, like a referendum in a state, for the people to declare what they want. It shows the sentiment of the people, whether dry or wet, and for that reason it is a strange attitude that is credited to the drys when it is declared they are urging their followers to have nothing to do with it. It would appear to be an opportunity for both sides to rally their forces and get out a representative expression whether the vote is going to amount to anything or not. By such a manner it would be possible to let those who represent them understand what such representation should be.

OBSERVING LENT

Today, Ash Wednesday, marks the opening of Lent, the special time of penitence and the season of fasting leading up to Easter. It is a period that receives special attention in the churches, but Rev. J. Hollister Lynch declares that the modern mind inquires "What of it?" "Why should I keep it?"

He then goes on to say that "One answer is that any custom which has been helpful to millions of people during a period of 1900 years is worth trying. The useless disappears. Because Lent persists in many lands, among many diverse races, in spite of much opposition, indicates that it really is good for something, and can be helpful."

He further declares that we should try it "because we need it. We are Christians and we want to be better Christians. The observance of Lent is to help us. It is a time of intensive training." And then he draws an analogy between the spiritual training season and the training periods by those engaged in various sports, pointing out that "just at this time the members of the baseball clubs are in training for the summer's work. They are expected to keep in good physical condition all the year, but they need these weeks of special practice so they will be fit for good work when the season opens. The 'hold-outs' are not so well prepared."

Declaring that we keep Lent to be more Christ-like, Rev. Lynch says in keeping Lent "We pray more earnestly. We seek God's help for ourselves and for others.

"We worship publicly in church more frequently. We attend the usual services and also the special services provided. We are absent only for causes we think would be satisfactory to God.

"We practice self-denial. We go without certain kinds of food which we like. We do not eat candy. We stop smoking. We do not give or attend social dinners. We stop playing cards. We remain away from public amusements. We choose certain self-denials and we are faithful in observance. This will be hard. Self-denial ought to be hard.

"We study the Bible to learn what the will of God is for us and we try to do it. During Lent we are more than usually earnest and zealous and faithful. We try harder, much harder. We seek to quicken and to deepen our spiritual experience."

DISENCHANTMENT OF GLADYS

When the first petal falls from a hitherto perfect rose—when the first idea percolates into the consciousness of an adoring bride that perhaps her husband actually is not infallible—these are occasions fraught with sadness and regret. To look at little Mrs. Campbell who radiated good-will toward all concerned, nobody ever would pick her out as the one to introduce the first rift into the menage of the Heathcotes across the hall, but the hideous fact remains. She was.

Gladys Heathcote was making a cake in her perfect little kitchen all done in orchid, lemon-yellow and jade green. It was the sort of kitchen which would induce the most rabid man-hater to commit matrimony or a magazine advertising photographer to turn three handsprings and a flip-flap. Even the dishcloths had been dyed orchid and beyond that one can say no more.

Gazing at Gladys, in her lemon-yellow housefrock with its jade pipinge, proceeding efficiently amid mixing spoons, egg-whippers, bowls, flour and whatnot, the observer never would have dreamed that it was the first cake she had ever made all by herself.

She was making a Lady Baltimore cake and expected it to knock the girls flat when she served it at the luncheon for eight.

Gladys carefully folded in the stiffly beaten whites, spooned the batter into the layer tins and slipped them into the oven which was at exactly the right heat. Twenty minutes later when she blithely opened the oven door she stood petrified with amazement. All three layers were sizzling down in the bottom of their pans, so thoroughly fallen that there remained only a thin coating.

Somewhat dashed she went through the soul-wracking operation of scraping, washing, drying and re-oiling the pans, getting out all the apparatus which she had just washed and fresh supplies and then proceeded to make a second cake. She spoke each item out loud as she combined them into a cake batter. Nothing was left out. Everything was done right.

Triumphantly the pans again went into the oven. Twenty minutes later the same sight met her astonished eyes. The cake had gone boom once more. Gladys found herself slumped into the jade green kitchen chair mopping her eyes but she took herself sternly in hand. Half the trouble with tired housekeepers was nerves. She would have no nerves. Grimly she got out the things again and made a third cake.

She winked hard, but she did it. And it fell as had the others. It was now 12 o'clock and in somewhat of a panic Gladys telephoned the corner bakery for one of their angelfoods and the luncheon proceeded.

George Heathcote patted her perfectly arranged permanent wave that night—everything about Gladys was perfect which made her cake tragedy more poignant—and said he certainly would see about it. Something must be wrong. George was a scientist. He measured and he squinted and he figured on wrapping paper and he pondered over their green enameled kitchen stove while Gladys waited.

And then, turning to her he explained that it had not been her fault at all. There was a wire-do-funny running through the oven which did something electrically to the composition of the metal in the pans. Nobody could bake a proper cake in that oven.

"Of course," Gladys told Mrs. Campbell the next morning when that lady had run in for a minute, "of course, I am fortunate in having such a clever husband. George just does know everything! Why, any other wife would have blundered on for years with that awful stove and worried herself to death.

"H'm!" said Mrs. Campbell politely, regarding the recipe. "Let's try it again." She proceeded to mix and whisk things.

"B-B-But," stammered Gladys, "oh, you've spoiled it! You put in two of the heapingest spoonfuls of baking powder I ever saw—and everything says to use 'em level and a knife to level 'em off!"

"Does it?" murmured Mrs. Campell. "I don't know much about these new-fangled ideas. I guess all that ailed your cake, dearie, was that you didn't use enough baking powder."

And to the everlasting degradation of George Heathcote from the pedestal of bridegroom extraordinary, that cake emerged from the oven light as a feather and altogether perfect. It really was too bad when you come to think of it.—Exchange.

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, March 4—When Washington's birthday rolled around this year, the house took opportunity to pay a unique tribute to the veteran of veterans of congress, William Tyler Page, clerk of the house.

Who else in high place in the legislative mill can look back as he can to almost a half century of intimate association with the house?

Senator Simmons, dean in age and service on the senate side, was in the house in the 50th congress. Henry Allen Cooper of Wisconsin began his house service in the 53rd. But Page goes back to the 47th, in 1881, when Arthur was president.

He became a page in the clerk's office that year and "has since been continuously in the service of the house of representatives in many capacities," as his official biography states it.

Plans 1932 Celebration

Since creation of the Washington Bicentennial commission to prepare for adequate celebration of the birth of the first president, Page has been executive secretary of the commission.

In that capacity he was called on to address the house as part of the 1930 observance of Washington's birthday. That is a rare honor for the house to pay anybody not within the circle of its own membership.

So far as the Bystander knows, the president of the United States and the clerk of the house are the only non-members ever permitted to address the house in session.

It was Mr. Page's function to advise the house of tentative plans for the Washington bicentennial in 1932.

"Forty-five years ago today, as a page boy, I stood upon this rostrum and listened rapturously to two eloquent orations," he said. "The occasion was the dedication of yonder majestic shaft, Washington monument."

Few Remember It

That was in 1885, just a few days before President Cleveland was inaugurated for his first term. Only a handful of civil war veterans among congressional doorkeepers, or their colleague, Theodore Shuey, chief of senate reporters, possibly can share that memory with Page.

It was an amazing picture of a full year of celebration that Mr. Page outlined as tentatively planned.

Nor did he forget that a presidential election day would fall within the year. He called on "every qualified American citizen" to vote that day "in the spirit of Washington."

Stories That Recall Others

Club Life

Four little girls formed a club which had met for the first time. Blanch's mother asked her what kind of a club it was.

"Well," she said, "first we played a selection on the piano, then we discussed subjects and predicates. For the social part we played an old game called Consequence. Then before we adjourned we ate orange ice."

No Use

Neva, age seven, was sent to the barber shop to have her hair cut for a party in the evening. The barber, an inexperienced young man, failed to do it well. When evening came her mother called Neva to her and said:

"Neva, let me see if I can trim your hair a little to make it look better."

Little Neva answered: "It's no use, mother, I've already tried."

"The Quiet Place"

SCRIPTURE

Memory Verse: "Then was Jesus led up of the spirit into the wilderness" (Matthew 4:1).

Read: Matthew 4:1-11.

MEDITATION

We begin today our annual observance of the six weeks which Jesus spent in the wilderness. It has been called the period of temptation. But it was more than that; it was a period of preparation—a time of concentrated thought and calm meditation. Never were quiet hours more needed than they are today. "Whirl is king," is truer than when Aristophanes uttered the words. Our minds have been likened to a railway waiting-room where people bound hither and thither are assembled. It is hard for our distracted minds to attain unity of purpose and to select a destination. There is an old Russian custom according to which a person before starting on a journey sat down and spent half a minute in silence. We need daily quiet times that we may reduce life to order and reflect on whither we are going.

PRAYER

Eternal God, who dost reveal Thyself to those who earnestly seek Thee, let our hearts be still that we may hear Thee speak and may discern Thy wise and holy counsel for our lives this day. Amen.

YOUR INCOME TAX

No. 27

The cost of capital assets, such as building and machinery, less depreciation and salvage, may be deducted from gross income if their use in business suddenly is terminated.

Usually such assets must be sold or otherwise disposed of, in order to claim a loss. However, there is an exception. If, for example, property has been discarded by reason of some unforseen cause, such as change in the manufacture of a product to which machinery is especially devoted, or where new legislation makes the continued profitable use of the property impossible, the taxpayer need not have parted permanently with the property in order to claim a loss. But if use of property was abandoned because of depreciation or obsolence, the taxpayer must have parted permanently with it if a loss in claimed.

Loss due to the voluntary removal or demolition of old building, the scrapping of old machinery, equipment, etc., due to renewals or replacements is deductible. But if a taxpayer buys, as the site of a new building, land upon which an old building is located, demoltion of the old building is not considered a loss and therefore is not deductible. The value of the real estate, exclusive of the old improvements, is presumed to be equal to the purchase price of the land and building, plus the cost of removing the useless building.

YOUR HEALTH

The Small Child's Clothing

By Rosamond Praeger, R. N., Syracuse, N. Y.
(From Gorgas Memorial Institute)

A child's clothes are his constant companions. Twenty-four hours of the day they are influencing his growth of body and of mind. Those of us entrusted with his welfare should ask ourselves these questions: Are his clothes protecting him? Are they harming him? What are they teaching him?

The first function of clothing is to protect. The child should therefore have adequate warm woolen outer garments for cold weather, and rubber garments for wet weather. But his clothes must be planned to protect him from being over-warm, which increases likelihood of colds. Most houses in winter are as warm as a summer day. Indoor garments should accordingly be few and light weight. Woolen and rubber garments should come off as soon as the child enters the house.

Are his clothes harming him? There must be no tight bands to restrict circulation, no restraint to interfere with freedom of motion and growth, no friction causing irritation or pain. Children grow and clothes sometimes shrink. A garment which is correct when we purchase it will require watching. Cramps in the feet and legs from too short shoes, stockings or sleeping garments are often the reason why we have an unhappy, irritable child. Mental pain due to his clothes is harmful, too. A child should not be asked to wear clothes which other children ridicule or which make him extremely unhappy.

What are his clothes teaching him? They should be so constructed that he can learn to do for himself; simple, fastening in front, buttons and button-holes large enough for little fingers. By dressing himself in so far as he possibly can, he learns to use his hands and eyes, and to use them together. He learns to concentrate upon a real task, to exercise judgment in putting on his clothes correctly, and forms early the habit of doing for himself.

A child's clothes should teach him appropriatness, the right clothes for the activity before him, play clothes for play, a change to something fresh and clean for supper, night clothes for sleep. He can then forget his clothes and himself in the thing he is doing. Good taste is learned by experience with nice things from babyhood on. Every day let him see many beautiful things, and let his clothes teach him that every-day things may make us happy by being lovely.

RHEUMATISM

Rotten Row—And The "Liver Brigade"

Rotten Row is not a London tenement.

Londoners have taken great pains to enlighten the newspaper men, aids and stenographers attending the Armament conference on the subject of Rotten Row.

Rotten Row is a place to ride horseback; the most fashionable bridle path in London.

"Rotten Row presents the horrible example of a good French phrase gone wrong," says a bulletin from the Washington, D. C. headquarters of the National Geographic society.

"Because the French language was popular at court when William III ordered a road cut through Hyde Park to Kensington Palace, it became known as 'Route du Roi' or King's Road. Londoners soon democratized this high-sounding, aristocratic label into undignified Rotten Row.

"For one mile it stretches straight through spacious Hyde Park. Various reasons why riders continue to frequent it have been advanced; first, that it is a pleasant place to ride; second, that riders find it delightful to be looked at by envious throngs along the parallel pathways; and third, that the soft sand surface makes it difficult for unlucky riders to break their necks, legs, arms or collar bones.

"Equestrians take second place in Rotten Row on Sunday mornings when the sidewalks (foot paths, Londoners call them) are used for the church parade. Before and after church fashionable London, in Sunday best, strolls down Rotten Row.

"Riders appear in Rotten Row at all hours of the morning. The early rising riders, who gallop before breakfast, are called the 'liver brigade.'

"Rotten Row was an original Great White Way, a predecessor of Broadway. In 1695 the king ordered the whole length of it lighted with lamps. A young lady of the times left a description: 'on each side are Rowes of posts on which are glasses—Cases for Lamps which are for ye passengers.'

"Horseback riding and strolling in Rotten Row are merely two of the multitude of diversions offered Londoners in Hyde Park and the adjoining Kensington Gardens. While soapbox orators entertain crowds in one corner a band plays in another. The Serpentine, an artificial lake offers swimming and boating. Tea is served in the Ring Tea House while at the western end of the park area, in Kensington Gardens, innumerable nursemaids and children gather. Daily regattas in Round Pond excite small boy ship-owners more than the annual races at Cowes thrill their fathers.

"One of the best guidebooks to Kensington Gardens is James M. Barrie's 'The Little White Bird.' Barrie's Peter Pan, as his many admirers know, lived on the island in the Serpentine 'where all the birds are born that become little boys and girls.'

"Hyde Park, with Kensington Gardens, is about two miles long. Their area is about three-fourths the area of Central Park, New York. They are merely two of the numerous royal and private parks that have been made public parks. It is possible to walk two short blocks from the Thames, enter St. James Park, and then, except for two busy street crossings, saunter three miles through London parks undisturbed by the roar and confusion of metropolitan traffic."

The outcome of the battle tomorrow at the meetings of the stockholders of the Fox Film and Theatres corporations was clouded by cross-currents of developments today.

SWOLLEN RIVERS HAVE FLOODED SOUTHERN FRANCE

TOULOUSE, France, March 4—(AP)—The swollen rivers which have flooded southern France, subsided just in time today to relieve anxiety for 600 workmen who were marooned in a spaghetti factory at Villemur.

As the waters kept rising the factory appeared in danger of collapse and rescue appeared difficult. Then the torrential four-day rains ceased, and the angry streams receded.

It was the greatest and swiftest flood of a century in southern France. Twenty lives are believed to have been lost and the damage runs into millions of francs. Railroad communication over the whole region was suspended.

WANT TO LOOK YOUNG?

The secret of keeping young is to feel young—to do this you must watch your liver and bowels—there's no need of having a sallow complexion—dark rings under your eyes—pimples—a bilious look in your face—dull eyes with no sparkle. Your doctor will tell you ninety per cent of all sickness comes from inactive bowels and liver.

Dr. Edwards, a well-known physician in Ohio, perfected a vegetable compound as a substitute for calomel to act on the liver and bowels, which he gave to his patients for years.

Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets are gentle in their action yet always effective. They help bring about that natural buoyancy which all should enjoy by toning up the liver and clearing the system of impurities.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are known by their olive color. 15c, 30c, 60c.

DRINK WATER TO HELP WASH OUT KIDNEY POISON

If Your Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers You, Begin Taking Salts.

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire urinary tract. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a mild, harmless salts which helps to remove the body's urinous waste and stimulates them to their normal activity. The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from it 500 grains of acid and waste, so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Drink lots of good water—you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help clean and stimulate clogged kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in the system so they are no longer a source of irritation, thus often relieving bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to help keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this; also keep up the water drinking, and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache.

Including among its officers many civic leaders and socially prominent women of the state, the Connecticut branch of the Women's National Organization for National Prohibition Reform has been formed following preliminary meetings of small groups in various cities and announcement has been made of the progress in the development of the state organization. A campaign for members has been started and a majority of the eight county leaders have been named.

Sabin, of New York city.

CONTACT CLUB HEARD TALK ON NURSING

An address on nursing was given Monday noon at the weekly meeting of The Contact club by Miss Grace E. Anslow, superintendent of nursing at the W. W. Backus hospital. There was an attendance of about 25 at the meeting which was presided over by Ernest O. Rodier. In her address Miss Anslow said:

Every one of us at some time in our lives feels that he would like to try the other fellow's job. Today I am attempting the other fellow's job—as members of successful business houses and all successful salesmen—I rather hesitate to stand before the Contact club in the position of salesman and yet, although with much fear and many inner qualms I am going to be intrepid enough to attempt to sell you "the opportunities in the field of nursing." I believe today there is a real scientific approach to salesmanship. I personally know nothing about it—but I do know that when a salesman approaches the lay person, there is just one thing which is simply dominant and that is his absolute faith in his product. My only qualification for a salesman is faith in my product—the nursing profession.

Nursing for many years was considered a sort of isolated profession—we can no longer consider it as such—its close relationship and contact with other professional groups and the public have developed an interest in the profession, which we feel can only develop and progress through our own efforts to stimulate this interest of others in us, or in your language, I think you say breaking down sales resistance? Every year we have young women entering the profession of nursing who are asked the same question, Why nursing, what opportunity have you in nursing? A very fair question indeed, and I venture to say, these young women cannot always give a fair answer. The usual answer is, I think I would like to do nursing, an inner urge, the desire to give service to others, one which carries so many of them on to greater and greater heights in their profession. But we would like young women to know that although we appreciate this inner urge and think it is most necessary in nursing, we also have splendid opportunities in the profession for developing this urge. The student after entering the school very soon learns of these opportunities. I am most interested today in telling you of these opportunities in the hope that you may help us to sell these opportunities to those of your friends in Norwich who are interested in nursing.

The oldest branch of the nursing profession is the private duty field. Many of you I am sure are acquainted with private duty nurses — how many of you realize that even though nursing is the oldest profession for women in the world, modern private duty nursing is only about 70 years old. Florence Nightingale about 1850 was quite disturbed with the kind of nursing and types of women of that period undertaking the care of the sick, one cannot wonder if one recalls Martin Chuzzlewit and our old friend Sairey Gamp; and after much struggling and opposition opened what was called the first modern school of nursing at St. Thomas' hospital, London, England. Miss Nightingale's idea was primarily to teach young women the art of nursing and to send them out as teachers and executives. Miss Nightingale was partly successful in this attempt but the world was not quite ready for such reformation in nursing. It is true that hospitals grew in number and all were having schools of nursing, but not all students graduating were going into the executive field, but many were going into the private duty field. Miss Nightingale with her wonderful ideas and ideals had brought about a great reformation in private duty nursing; the best of our students were entering this field. This branch of nursing steadily developed and progressed so Dr. May Burgess, in her admirable book, Nurses, Patients and Pocket Books tells us, from 157 women graduating into this field in 1880, to 17,522 in 1926. Did I hear someone say over-production? You are right, but only in parts of this country—we have no such thing as over-production in Norwich. Because of over-production in certain parts of the United States and because of economic conditions, strange to say nurses must live and especially so, when not working and, again, to quote Dr. Burgess, the private duty nurses according to her latest statistics were only working seven months out of the twelve, the nursing profession realizing the public must be given service when it demanded it and to have nurses ready for this service started what is known as hourly and group nursing for private duty nurses. Hourly and group nursing has been attempted so far by professional registries, hospitals, and in some instances by public health organizations. In both types of nursing the graduate is on the staff of the organization which is employing her and while she is given the opportunity to give that kind of service which she desires—namely private duty, it also ensures the graduate a living wage.

In closing may I say that I know of no other profession for women which offers a greater opportunity and greater variety for a useful career than the profession of nursing.

Bosworth and his wife, the latter a resident of Waterford, are estranged and Mrs. Bosworth has petitioned the court for divorce, which action Bosworth is contesting. Last Thursday, Bosworth drove to Waterford in his Pontiac automobile and went to a residence where his little son had been entrusted to the care of a neighbor. The case was continued to Tuesday next. Percival was driving on the approach to the Thames river highway bridge yesterday afternoon, being headed for the submarine base. A truck was parked at the approach to the Coast Guard academy and when Percival's auto reached the motionless truck, the driver attempted to drive around it. Percival's auto was traveling at a high rate of speed and when guided to the left side of the truck, it crashed against the rear of a car driven by Yering traveling in the opposite direction. After caroming off the Yering automobile, Percival's machine continued across the highway and through a heavy wooden fence. Yering made complaint to State Police Officer Donald Brown and the submarine base man was arrested.

Old doctor's idea still helping Elderly People conquer constipation

DR. CALDWELL made a startling discovery shortly after he graduated from medical school back in 1875. He found great numbers—especially older men and women—suffering from constipation, who were taking harsh laxatives and purgatives. So he concluded that many things people take for constipation do more harm than good, and physicians of today are of the same opinion.

This thought made Dr. Caldwell conduct a search, and out of it came the prescription which has made him famous. Over and over he wrote it, when he found people bilious, headachy, out-of-sorts, weak or feverish; with coated tongue, bad breath, no appetite or energy. Its action was so thorough even in the most obstinate cases, and yet so gentle with women and children.

The product you get from your drug store, today, when you ask for Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is put up exactly in accordance with this prescription. It has become the world's most popular laxative. It is a pleasant tasting mixture of fresh herbs and other ingredients that [illegible] it is a real corrective for constipation for men, women and children.

After a thorough examination as to help employed and their pay at the Bay street restaurant during the past summer season, also returns from the renting of rooms at the Watch Hill restaurant, Mr. Ferguson asked for two weeks' continuance for a careful examination of the figures secured and this was granted. The auto was confiscated and placed in the Grills' garage to get it off the state highway. A fine and costs of $22.95 were imposed.

PAWCATUCK FIREMEN HOSTS AT ANNUAL COMPANY FEAST

Pawcatuck Fire Department Co., No. 1, held its annual banquet in the Libert ystreet headquarters Tuesday evening when a full course turkey dinner was enjoyed by the members and their guests.

One hundred members of the company, Pawcatuck Fire district officials, fire police and guests, including Westerly Fire district and fire department officials seated themselves at U-shaped table in the large apparatus room from which the trucks had been run outside. Music during the dinner was furnished by an orchestra, John Dolan and Oscar Seidel, violins; William Lord, saxophone; Victor Richards, drums, and John Roach, piano.

Later the waiters joined for several chorus numbers. The waiters were company members who occupied a center table later in the evening. At the head table were Charles Connors, foreman of Pawcatuck Fire Co.; Joseph Purtill, chief engineer of Pawcatuck Fire district; John Shea, Francis O'Connell, former Chief Engineer Pierce Morrison and Francis J. McMahon, Henry A. Stahle, the district clerk; Dr. William A. Hillard, District Moderator A. G. Martin, Treasurer William S. Crandall, the Stonington Selectmen John Fribance of Mystic, Joseph Vargas, Stonington, Arthur P. Babcock of Westerly; former Selectman L. C. Purtill, Westerly Fire Chief George E. Egger and Assistant Engineer Robert Bonner and George McKenzie.

Capt. Charles Connors introduced as toastmaster Chief Engineer Joseph Purtill, who called as the first speaker Stonington's Representative Henry A. Stahle, the former chief engineer. The latter recounted his 35 years of experience attending the annual banquets and congratulated the company and district officials on the fine showing of their new building, apparatus and equipment after a year's use. Chief George E. Egger, of Westerly, spoke of the cooperation that existed between the companies on both sides of Pawcatuck river, with the hope that they would continue to pull together.

Moderator Albert G. Martin contrasted previous conditions in firefighting in the district with those of the present day. Selectman John Fribance stated that the fire department's dependence was placed upon the younger men, through whose activity lower insurance rates were gained and a low fire tax made necessary.

Dr. William A. Hilliard reviewed the activities of the fire department. One of the oldest members to attend, Elmer E. Babcock, recovering from recent illness, congratulated the company on the loyalty of their members through so many years. Other speakers were Foremen Wills and Stedman of Westerly department the fire district treasurer, William Crandall, ex-Chief Francis McMahon, Martin Devine and Thomas Donohue. Among members of the committee in charge were Thomas L. Donohue, Francis O'Connell, Edward Marozoni, James Kane and Daniel Keegan.

JEWETT CITY

FANNING LIBRARY ANNEX TO BE BUILT BY E. E. GILBERT

At the annual meeting of the trustees of the Slater library, held Monday afternoon, it was voted to award the contract for building the David Hale Fanning annex for the Slater library to Earle E. Gilbert. Agreeable to the specifications of Mr. Fanning's will, the building is to be completed by the close of January, 1931. The material will be granite, and the cost will be within $75,000, the amount bequeathed by Jewett City's benefactor. A few alterations and improvements are contemplated on the present building, which, with the new section, will insure a modern library of excellence. The donor's provision for a children's reading room is to be carried out, according to Mr. Fanning's plans. The present order of architecture is to be maintained, and the arrangements for reading, study and research are to be the best that can be provided. The fact that Lewis M. Carpenter has taken up his residence elsewhere, automatically removes him from the board of trustees. To fill this vacancy, Earle E. Gilbert was chosen the fifth member of the board. The other officers re-elected are: President, Dr. George H. Jennings; vice-president, Edward A. Faust; secretary and treasurer, Arthur D. Tripp and Alex McNicol; librarian, Mabel Wilcox.

W. L. Harrington of Greene, R. I., clerk in charge, railway mail service, running between Boston and New York, was a caller at the home of E. H. Hiscox, Monday. The latter ran for many years in Mr. Harrington's crew on the Shore Line night line.

Vocal and instrumental selections will be a part of the program, with games in charge of Miss Mary Lewis.

The A. D. Tripp company, in the course of improvements at their yards on Mathewson street, are paving the approaches to their big scales and the sections over which the teaming is done to reach the coal pockets and lumber storage. The work is being carried out with stones of the field, which are being carted from stone walls on the Phillips farm, owned by Mr. Tripp. A man who saw the work going on Tuesday, called attention to the hundreds of miles of stone walls that line the back country roads and checkerboard Griswold farms. No farmer today ever thinks of such a thing as dividing a lot or enclosing his orchards by means of stone walls. Everywhere in these outlying districts they are to be seen. Built with infinite labor, extending up hill and down dale, these stone boundaries mark the onetime industry of local farm owners, now a memory of the past.

NAME OF HUNTINGTON PROMINENT IN CALIFORNIA

The Ross tourists had reached the Hotel Constance by Feb. 18, and Mr. Ross wrote as follows: The name Huntington is very prominent in southern California. In Norwich, sixty and more years ago the family name of Huntington was also prominent. S. Alpheus Gilbert, "Charley" R. Butts, president of the old Norwich Savings society, and of course, Attorney J. P. Huntington will remember when the name Collis P. Huntington began to be known in the west, especially in connection with the C. P. R. R. In fact I have heard the "C. P." used as Central Pacific Huntington. Today, in southern California is Huntington beach, thousands of oil wells here; Huntington hotel in Pasadena is one of the finest; Huntington drive, one of the fine streets, reaching the center of Los Angeles; Huntington park is open to the public five days a week, or, if a person can not come on a week day he will be welcome on Sunday.

It is of this park, 207 acres, the Henry E. Huntington library and art gallery, I wish to tell you.

To give you some idea of this park art gallery, etc., I asked a police officer how many officers were on duty at one time. His reply was "between 50 and 60. Today," he said, "there are 52."

It has been found necessary to issue tickets (free) to the public and about 500 or a few more are used every day.

To go back a little and tell you who Henry E. Huntington was. (He died a year or two ago, in 1928, I think.) He was born in 1850, at Oneonta, New York. In 1874, his uncle, C. P. Huntington, placed him in charge of a sawmill at St. Albans, West Virginia, to furnish railroad ties for the Chesapeake and Ohio railroad. From this point in his life he continued to be identified with railroad building and management. He advanced through different positions with several railroads in the east. In 1892, at the urgent request of his uncle, he moved to San Francisco to represent the Huntington interests in the Southern Pacific railroad. Soon after his arrival, he became interested in the development of electric railways.

Later, Mr. Huntington's attention was turned to southern California. In 1898, he held large interests in traction companies of Los Angeles. He moved to Los Angeles in 1902 and began to build and to consolidate electric lines of that city and the extensive electric inter-urban system known as the Pacific Electric railway, which reaches nearly every town and city in the vicinity of Los Angeles. He acquired a great deal of real estate and in 1903 purchased the San Marino ranch, formerly the home of J. De-Barth Shorb. Mr. Huntington's house was finished in 1911 and is now used as the art gallery.

In 1908, Mr. Huntington, purchased the portrait of Lord Glenlee, by Raeburn. This was one of the first acquisitions among the famous paintings now upon the walls of his old home. About this time he began the great collection of books and manuscripts for which the Huntington library is noted.

The library contains at present 150,000 printed books, approximately 4,000 manuscript volumes and over 500,000 autograph letters and documents. Here are all the autographs of all the presidents of the United States. I think the library building was constructed in 1920 at which time the library was transferred from New York to San Marino.

San Marino is adjacent to Pasadena and about a half mile from this hotel.

The paintings in the art gallery are mostly portraits by the masters of the British eighteenth century school. The gallery also contains furniture, tapestries, porcelains, bronzes and other objects of art.

The botanic gardens have a very great acreage. The grounds of this park are cared for by about 150 men.

There are distinctive gardens, Japanese rose, cactus and several large lawns with many varieties of palms. Throughout the grounds are found many unusual sub-tropical trees and shrubs.

I wish I could give you an adequate description of all the things we saw here. The Japanese garden is copied from the old willow ware of Japan. The willow tree, the arched bridge, the water, are all reproduced.

The rose garden is very extensive. Some of the blooms are 6 or 7 inches across. The cactus garden has nearly all of the known varieties of this strange plant.

The cherry and peach trees were in flower in the Japanese garden. Near the house was an immense live oak. One of the police told me the spread of limb was 125 feet.

The most striking trees were a grove of Judas trees with the deep pink flowers, so brilliant that there was a glow in the atmosphere.

On one of the lawns, (one of many) lined with statutes, under palm trees, and hedged with rhododendrous, at the end of this lawn was a marble statue, under a marble canopy. It was a young girl seated and with one hand extended trying to grasp something unseen. In front of her was cupid holding a scarf across her eyes. The title was "Love is Blind."

In the art gallery I can give you only a little of the wonderful paintings that appealed to me.

I think I counted 10 Gainsboroughs, most of them quite large, the canvases being 7 or 8 feet tall by 5 feet wide. Gainsborough's "The Blue Boy" is perhaps the best known on account of the controversy caused by its purchase a few years since, from the Duke of Westminster's family.

All of the Gainsboroughs have a very dark background and the female portraits have very large hats. The portrait of Juliana, Lady Petre, is a fine exhibit of light and shadow.

There are 10 or 12 paintings by Sir Joshua Reynolds. The best of these is, to my mind, "The Tragic Nurse." This illustrates Sarah Kemble (Mrs. William Siddons) the foremost tragedienne of the English stage. This canvas was also obtained from the Duke of Westminster's family.

George Romney is well represented in these galleries. He was a contemporary of Gainsborough and Sir Joshua Reynolds, yet he never exhibited at the Royal academy. He was not eligible to its membership—I do not know the reason why.

Romney's best picture, I think, is a portrait of Emma, (Lady Hamilton). Lady Hamilton was the daughter of Henry Lyon, a blacksmith, and she being very beautiful, was used as a model for Romney in 40 or 50 of his pictures.

There are four or five portraits by Sir Thomas Lawrence. He was self-taught at first. He became a student at the Royal academy schools, and in 1820 was elected president of the Royal academy. His best picture here is known as "Pinkie" and is a portrait of Miss Sarah Moulton Barrett. This is a picture of a young girl, very human, with a pink ribbon in her hair, blowing in the wind, a background of trees and sky. A picture that, to my idea, is one of the best in this collection. A brother of "Pinkie" (Miss Sarah Moulton-Barret) Edward Moulton-Barret was the father of Elizabeth Barrett Browning.

My opinion of these pictures may differ from others, still they are my own and if I have not bored you I am pleased. Most of this great collection has been brought together since the great World war, as some of the wealthy families of Great Britain have been obliged to part with their treasures.

I think the whole world is jealous of our country for the reason that there are people here who can purchase there treasures and exhibit them to the public in art galleries like the Huntingtin.

There are very few cities or large towns in this country that do not have public spirited men and women who give of what they have for the happiness of others.

In the rathskeller a Rotary bowling team, consisting of Bottomley, Gaucher, Martineau, Parker and Dr. Riordan engaged the Y. M. C. A. team comprising Andrews, Samu, Loveland, Whitehouse and Hawkins in a hard-fought match. The Yers took all three strings, the following score being 1,492 to 1,420.

C. Hine company of Hartford. "A few days ago," continues Mr. Pellerin, "I made a test trip in this new eight cylinder car. Southington mountain which is counted one of the hardest hills in the state was easily negotiated in 1 minute and 53 seconds. The start at the bottom of the long climb was made at ten miles an hour.

"To demonstrate ability of the car to get away in traffic, test was made on a level stretch. The new eight accelerated from ten to thirty-five miles an hour in 7 1-2 seconds.

"Plymouth Hill, counted a tough proposition by the motoring fraternity was negotiated in 1 minute, 11 4-5 seconds from a start of ten miles an hour.

"Avon mountain, the favorite test course of all dealers who claim their cars have hill climbing ability was easily handled in 1 minute, 31 4-5 seconds, it being necessary to shut off the car at the top by reason of an abrupt turn. The time could obviously have been faster.

"Now what we claim in the Oakland V type eight is an all around satisfactory performance, we do not stress speed for the car has it, all of which is obvious, but what we do claim is ability to handle every condition of driving easily and comfortably. We do claim that hills are as level roads to the new V type eight which is a wonderfully smooth performer. We will be pleased to demonstrate this performance at any time."

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Palace Theatre

A powerful drama of the sea and a hilarious domestic comedy are included on the double feature program which starts at the Palace theatre, today and which will be continued through Friday evening. The first of these pictures is the drama, "Ship From Shanghai," starring Conrad Nagel, Kay Johnson and Louis Wolheim, the other is "Strickly Modern," in which Dorothy Mackaill and Sidney Blackmer play the leading roles.

The plot of the "Ship From Shanghai" deals with a mutiny at sea in which the passengers, a millionaire crowd, are placed at the mercy of a mad steward. A typhoon sweeping down on the becalmed sea, strips the yacht of its masts, and makes the vessels a veritable derelict loadedwith creatures that once were men and women. Those who attend the showing of this picture will be fascinated to watch the havoc which the situation plays with the so-called veneer of civilization attached to each of the passengers. One by one they lose their finer impulses, as dying for water, they hear the steward's sneering ultimatum. And throughout the whole story runs the scarlet thread of love, a thread which serves when everything fails to hold the sanity of the party together to some degree at least.

"Strictly Modern" is a merry mixup. Aimee Spencer likes Judge Bartlett, so that when she is about to marry Heath Desmond, she readily takes the judge's advice, and seeks an understanding with Heath. She declares that he must not paint his nude pictures on Sunday and that there must be no passion in their marriage. Heath leaves her flat, and on the way, meets the judge who is coming to marry them. He promptly black's the judge's eye and then disappears. Meanwhile Aimee's cousin, Kate shows up. She is a writer of passionate novels, novels which the judge thinks are pretty bad, but before Cousin Kate gets through with the affair, things have taken several surprising turns and the good judge having originally got a smack in the eye, is eventually treated to a large dose of very useful medicine, and everybody is pretty happy as the story ends. Here are two pictures which make up an admirable bill. Comedy on one hand and stark drama on the other.

Broadway Theatre

Folks, starting today, here's the greatest dual-feature program ever screened in the memory of the Broadway's manager! Combining terrific thrills, swift action, death-dealing speed, uproarious comedy, tender romance, alluring music and tense drama the two features booked for today, tomorrow and Friday form the perfect screen show. "Burning Up" tells the story of a speed-mad youngster, earning his precarious living on a motorcycle at a west coast motordrome, racing against a partner who is known as a "killer," having ridden more than one ambitious youth off the edge of the "drome" to a terrible death. Youth, nerve and daring, however, nip his latest plot, and "Suicide" Larrigan, as played by Richard Arlen, survives the ordeal. Later the two rivals meet on the dirt track behind the wheels of gigantic racing cars, and folks, here's a race with no "doubles" and packing more thrills than four average screen dramas. The betting ring tries to frame Larrigan into a "crack-up," as the ground rules considered an "accident" as a forfeit, but again youth and skill triumph, and in a whirl of dust, and the grinding and explosion of high powered cars ground to kindling in a terrific climax, the youngster rides straight into the arms of his sweetheart, dainty Mary Brian. Tully Marshall and Sam Hardy furnish much grim humor, and Francis Macdonald is the sinister "Bullet" McGann, the crooked driver.

The companion picture, "Street Girl" will hold you spellbound with its witchery and supreme artistry. Deftly told and cleverly staged, this petite drama switches from laughter to tears, from gayety to tragedy, from buffoonery to drama, with bewildering speed but infinite art, and actually leaves you breathless. Betty Compson is a little Hungarian fiddler, who, on the verge of starvation, is "adopted" by a quartet of cafe musicians, including Jack Oakie, Ned Sparks, Johnnie Harron and Guy Buccola, and if you think those boys can't play—and how—you are in for the surprise of your life. Hot jazz—hotter than that—with Oakie's nimble feet working the boys up to say nothing of his hot clarinet, Johnnie Harron's "mean" piano, Ned Sparks and his fiddle and his everlasting fund of sarcasm, and Guy Buccola with his piano accordion, would "wow" any cafe crowd, and safe to say they will have feet moving restlessly among the audience. Joseph Cawthorne is Keppel the Bohemian cafe owner who takes a chance on Betty and her "boys" and is famous overnight, and Ivan Lebedeff is the thoroughly lovable Hungarian prince whose visit to Keppel's cafe makes him the talk of the town, places the little band on "easy street," and almost breaks the hearts of the boys as he makes love to their "little sister." Truly a marvelous cast in a marvelous picture produced with all the skill of R-K-O and so sumptuously done in the cafe sequences that Gus Arnheim's famous Cocoanut Grove Ambassadors are just a background for the little jazz band. Betty Compson's wonderful mastery of the violin brings a new talent to the sound screen. A real Hungarian gypsy band is another feature of this super-production. The "home" scenes in the boys boarding house are so natural as to be outlandishly funny, and all in all, "Street Girl" with the companion picture, "Burning Up," provides the most satisfactory screen menu that has ever tickled the appetites of Norwich theatre goers.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORY

A Vain Search

What though you look and look in vain!
Just turn about and look again.
—Peter Rabbit.

When Peter left his cousin, Jumper the Hare, in the Green Forest he went straight over to the place on the edge of the Green Forest where he had several times seen Whitefoot the Wood Mouse. It was just about daylight, so Peter decided that he wouldn't go home to the dear Old Briar-patch, but would spend the day in a certain thick bramble-tangle near at hand. First, Peter looked for Whitefoot. When he couldn't find

He wished he could climb up and look at the top of each of those stumps

Whitefoot, he began a careful search for that secret home of Whitefoot's. He had never looked very thoroughly around there before, because he had thought that Whitefoot lived deeper in the Green Forest.

"First," thought Peter, "I'll have a look at all the old stumps. Old stumps usually are hollow and he would be quite likely to make his nest in such a place."

Now it happened that there were but two old stumps anywhere near. Peter visited each of these and looked them all over thoroughly. He couldn't climb up on them, but he satisfied himself that there were no holes on the sides and that there were no holes under the roots. He wished he could climb up and look at the top of each of those stumps, but this he couldn't do.

"I'll have to ask somebody," said Peter right out loud.

"What will you have to ask somebody?" inquired a sharp voice. It was the voice of Chatterer the Red Squirrel, who had just awakened and come out to get his breakfast, for it was daylight.

"Hello Chatterer!" exclaimed Peter. "You are just the fellow to tell me what I want to know. Are there any holes in the top of this stump, or in the top of that stump over yonder?"

"What do you want to know for?" demanded Chatterer suspiciously.

"Because," replied Peter, "I'm looking for the home of Whitefoot the Wood Mouse and I happened to think that it might be in one of those stumps."

"Well, it isn't. I can tell you that much," said Chatterer.

"Then where is it?" demanded Peter.

"That's something I can't tell you," said Chatterer. "But it certainly isn't around here. It isn't in either of those stumps and it isn't in any tree, for I know every hole in every tree around here."

"It's around here somewhere," declared Peter positively. "If it isn't in a stump or a tree, it must be in a hollow log, or else in a hole in the ground."

"It isn't in a hollow log, I can tell you that," declared Chatterer. "I know every hollow log around here. Personally, I don't believe Whitefoot has a home around here. I don't believe he could have a home around here and I not know it."

The next story: "Curiosity Spreads."

A little girl ran into the house with a piece of wire which she had picked up in the street, and inquired of her sister what it was.

Her sister looked at it blankly for a moment.

"I don't know," she said; "go, and ask mother."

The mother thought hard for some moments but, at last, gave it up.

"Go and ask grandma," she said.

The little girl did as she was bid. Grandma told her. It was a hairpin.—Leominster Enterprise.

HORTON SMITH AND FRANK WALSH TIE FOR LEAD IN ST. PETERSBURGH OPEN TOURNEY

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., March 4.—(AP)—Joe Turnesa, Elmsford, N. Y., missed a one-foot putt on the 18th green today to throw the $2,500 St. Petersburg open golf tournament into a three-way tie at the end of the first 18 holes.

Failure to make his par four on the last hole put Turnesa in a bracket with Horton Smith, Detroit, and Frank Walsh, Chicago, for the lead, each carding a par 71, on the Lakewood Estates course, considered the most difficult on Florida's west coast.

Gene Sarazen, favored to win after his showing at Belleair, couldn't keep his putter clicking and chalked up a 77 at the end of the 18 holes. Harry Cooper, unattached, and Al Watrous, Detroit, marked up a 78 each.

Louis Chiapetta, Clearwater, Fla., Tony Manero, unattached, and Tom Creavy, unattached, kept almost abreast of the leaders with 72's. They were followed by Bobby Cruickshank, Purchase, N. Y., Jack Collins, Dayton, O., and Henry Bontempo, Springfield, Mass., with 73's each.

The leaders' cards:

Turnesa, out...	654	344	344—37

The final 18 holes of the 36-hole tournament will be played tomorrow over the Jungle Country club course.

Among low 18-hole scorers were:

Billy Burke, Greenwich, Conn., 37-37—74; and Sam White, Binghamton, N. Y., 37-38—75.

SHYMA-ARMY AND NAVY GAME ENDS IN FREE-FOR-ALL

The second game of the Shyma-Army and Navy series at Paris hall last night ended most unsatisfactorily when the first half was but 17 minutes along, as a result of an exchange of blows between two of the opposing players. The fracas resulted in a mild free-for-all in which a number of spectators also attempted to take part. With the Army-Navy club leading 12 to 4 with but three minutes left to play the game became decidedly rough.

When one of the players of the Army-Navy team pushed a Shyma club player the Shyma boy lost his head and threw the ball at the Army man and came out onto the floor all set for trouble. Another Army player rushed in and took a poke at the Shyma man and a few blows were exchanged. The spectators rushed on to the floor and there was quite some argument. The referee, instead of disqualifying both players, disqualified the Army player but did not penalize the Shyma man. The manager of the Army-Navy team called his men from the floor and refused to continue the game.

The unsportsmanlike conduct of the players marred what was a fast game and one where excitement ran to fever pitch.

CANZONERI STOPS RITZ EARLY IN FIRST ROUND

NEW YORK, Mar. 4—(AP)—Tony Canzoneri, of New York, former holder of the world's featherweight championship, stopped Solly Ritz, youthful Brooklyn lightweight in 56 seconds of the first round of their ten round bout at the Broadway arena tonight. Canzoneri completely outclassed his opponent through the brief bout. He weighed 131 3-4 pounds, Ritz 135.

The first round had hardly started when Canzoneri knocked Ritz off his feet. The youngster rose without a count and promptly went down again for no count. After the second knockdown the referee intervened, awarding Canzoneri the bout on a technical knockout.

In a six round bout, Ralph Lenny, of Union City, N. J., won the decision over Bob Terry, New York Negro. Each weighed 135 pounds.

TWO TEAMS DEADLOCKED IN BICYCLE RACE

NEW YORK, March 4—(AP)—A deadlock between the combinations of Gaetano Belloni and Gerard Debaets, and Alfred Letourner and Paul Brocardo for first place in New York's 48th international six day bicycle race had developed at the 49th hour of the grind tonight.

At 10 p. m., the leaders had covered 767 miles, 9 laps. Belloni and Debaets were the technical pace-setters with 102 sprint points to 44 for Letourner and Brocardo. Five combinations were a single lap behind the pace-setters.

Twenty-one laps were stolen during the night sprints, making the total for the race 133.

NEW RECORD SET FOR WOMEN IN BOWLING

BUFFALO, N. Y., March 4—(AP)—A world record performance for women bowlers was made here tonight when Mrs. Cam Fanning rolled a perfect score of 300, bowling in a regularly organized tournament. The score was made in the first game of a bracket of three, bowling with the Germain Cleaning team. H. W. Pollack, vice president of the American Bowling congress and at least 100 other witnesses were in the gallery. The performance wins a gold medal from the Ladies' Bowling association of the United States.

LITTLE DONE AT MEETING OF INTERSCHOLASTIC LEAGUE

The spring meeting of the Eastern Connecticut-Western Rhode Island Interscholastic league was held at the Wauregan hotel Monday evening but little business of importance was transacted. The basketball situation for the 1930-31 season was discussed and a special meeting of basketball coaches to be held early in April was called when final arrangements may be made for next year's court campaign. The matter of officials for the annual track meet, which is to be held at Storrs this spring, was also talked over.

COLONIAL CLUB WINS FROM CELTIC TEAM

In a regular scheduled game of the pocket billiard tournament at the Recreation Billiard parlor last evening the Colonial club eliminated the Celtics in the last game of the first round, 100 to 85. One of the features of the game was the runs of Ed Grover of the Colonial club team. His position for break shots was rare and he had several runs of 12 to 15. Bill Farrell was not in as good form as usual and his highest run was 12. Frank Panek showed that he was the class of the C players by his safety playing and combination shots.

The Celtics had several chances to win but Connell and Disco failed to come through in the pinches. Capt. Cooney being left safe most of the game could not get any runs but on his two chances he came through with one run of 14 and another of 11.

Tonight the second rounds begins, with Capt. Ray Harris' "A. O. H.'s" meeting the Elite club.

MISS COLLETT TURNS IN BRILLIANT ROUND OF GOLF

ST. AUGUSTINE, Fla., March 4.—(AP)—Miss Glenna Collett, America's premier woman golfer, led one of the greatest fields ever assembled for a women's tournament in Florida today to win the medal in the qualifying round of the Florida east coast tournament with a brilliant 74.

This score equalled the course record for women made by Miss Collett in the qualifying round of the 1929 tournament.

Miss Virginia Van Wie, Chicago, Miss Maureen Orcutt, New York, and Miss Helen Hicks, New York, were tied for second place with 78's.

Despite a strong wind, more than half of those who qualified for the championship flight had scores under 90. One of these was Miss Helen Baughn, who had an 87. Miss Lillian Holland shot an 84.

SIX ENTERED FOR "CASEY 600" AT GARDEN FOR MARCH 12

NEW YORK, March 4.—(AP)—Six runners headed by Phil Edwards of the Hamilton, Ont., Olympic club, and John Gibson of the Bloomfield, N. J., Lyceum, former winners, were named today as starters in the 11th running of the "Casey 600" at the New York chapter, Knights of Columbus games at Madison Square Garden, March 12.

Besides Edwards and Gibson who won in 1928 and 1929, respectively, the field for the 600-yard fixture will include Bernard McCafferty, Holy Cross; Eddie, Roll, former Colgate runner, now representing the Newark A. C.; Ed Blake, Boston A. A., one-time Dartmouth star, and Donald Fleet, Jack Ryder's promising Boston college freshman.

NEW REFEREEING SYSTEM TO BE TRIED AT COLUMBIA

NEW YORK, March 4.—(AP)—An innovation in basketball officiating will be tried out at he Columbia-Georgetown game here, Friday night. Three officials, a referee and two umpires, instead of the customary two, will be in charge of the game. Under the system the playing court will be divided into thirds, each official having complete charge of one of the thirds, calling fouls in his own territory alone. The referee will have charge of play in the center third and the two umpires at either end.

Proponents of the system hope it will cut down the number of fouls called. They maintain that many fouls are called now which would not be ruled as fouls could the officials keep on top of play all the time.

KAYE DON ARRIVES TO TRY FOR SPEED RECORD

NEW YORK, March 4.—(AP)—Kaye Don, British racing pilot who hopes to break the world's auto speed record at Daytona Beach this month, arrived from England aboard the Berengaria today. He was accompanied by Louis Coatalen, chief engineer of the Sunbeam Motor works, builder of the "Silver Bullet," the car with which Don hopes to better Sir Henry Segrave's world record of 231 miles an hour.

The "Silver Bullet," a seven-ton monster, was brought across on the Berengaria. It has a theoretical speed of 250 miles an hour and Don has hopes of making it do that and more.

The Daytona Beach speed trials, under sanction of the American Automobile association, are to be held from March 15 to March 30.

NORWICH GIRLS CLASH WITH Y. W. C. A. THURSDAY

The Norwich Girls basketball team will attempt to avenge one of its three defeats this season when it tackles the New London Y. W. C. A. sextet Thursday night at the Y. The Whalers, along with W. M. I. and Woodstock Academy are the only ones who have beaten the locals this campaign.

Thursday's game is expected to be one of the best of the season and a large crowd is expected. A game for the Y Seniors is planned, with either the Elmwood Endees of Hartford or the Corbin Screw team of New Britain, champs of the Dusty league there.

MUCH INTEREST IN GUOIN'S BOUT

Rivaling the Al Beauregard-Johnny Vacca bout at Parish hall Friday night in interest is a four-round preliminary in which Young Gouin of Taftville, meets The Walloping Wop of New York. This will be Young Guoin's second professional engagement and will be against a boy who is far more advanced in ringcraft than the Taftville lad. But that is all that the visiting pugilistic will have on the local youngster.

Those who saw Young Guoin pummel Young Westphal of the Sub Base into submission at the last bout were greatly impressed with the Taftville comer. Guoin went against an experienced boxer, all reports to the contrary, and he whipped him through pure courage and aggressiveness. Westphal was a much cleverer boxer but all his ability could not overcome that spirit of the Taftville boy to make good.

Guoin is a picture of physical perfection. He is a clean cut, good looking youngster who smiles when he's hurt and who never backs up an inch. Those who expected him to be awkward and clumsy were pleasantly surprised. Guoin waded into his opponent and although he missed repeatedly he kept fighting and in the end won as cleanly as any boy ever did. His showing in that bout was one of the highlights of a mighty good card.

For his bout Friday night Guoin is training hard as he realizes that The Walloping Wop is no set-up and he must fight if he is to win. This can be said of the visitor also, he will have to fight if he takes the decision back to the big city. To clear up any misunderstanding about who The Walloping Wop is it might be said that he has been fighting preliminary bouts in the western part of the state for the past six or eight months. He is not The Walloping Wop who tangled with Sheik Leonard and Tracy Ferguson and others several years ago. He is the younger brother of this boy and has taken his name.

The local boys, Johnny Kop and Al Beauregard are hard at the training bags and ropes. Both are reported in good shape. Beauregard is down to weight and Kop is gaining confidence as the day for the bout approaches. Johnny should be able to give a good account of himself against Billy Prince in the semi-final.

The housecleaning days are upon us—woe be to us.

If there's anything that upsets the morale of a household more than spring housecleaning I don't want to know what it is. Wrong, Roger, golf is not the answer.

But many is the lesson that can be gleaned from housecleaning if one would but recognize it. It teaches that cleanliness is next to godliness for one thing. It teaches that meals eaten off the mantel are just as nourishing as those served on fine linen.

It promotes an appreciation of the well regulated home through the medium of contrast. It sharpens the dormant sarcasm of the male members of the establishment and also gives them plenty of exercise in looking for lost magazines and comfy slippers.

And among many other things it teaches a woman that she must lay plans for a strategic exit when she varnishes her floors. This last lesson was brought home to a young wife of my acquaintance with an overwhelming force the other day.

It seems that Mrs. ——— decided that the kitchen linoleum would be much improved by a coat of varnish. With brush and varnish she started in with the mental comment that hubby would be surprised to see she had varnished the floor and saved him this arduous task.

Brush and varnish were applied with vim and vigor and the linoleum looked as sparkling as new. It was a mighty good jab she was doing. The work went merrily along and Mrs. ——— did not mind the cruelizing effect the hard floor was having on her knees. Hubby was going to be surprised.

And he was—and how. Hubby returning from the office for the evening meal approached the house. It was dark and foreboding when it should have been agleam with light. That was strange—the wife must be playing bridge.

He mounted the steps and opened the front door. An odor of fresh paint greeted him. He turned on the light and called. There was a weepy answer from the kitchen and he like a true helpmate dashed for that part of the house.

As he hit the door a voice stopped him. "Look out for the paint' came from the depths of the kitchen. He turned on the light and lo and behold there was friend wife seated dejectedly in a corner of the kitchen farthest from the door surrounded by paint can and brushes and a freshly painted floor.

Friend wife had painted herself into a corner and had no means of escape from the kitchen other than walking out over the freshly painted floor.

The husband, true to the traditions of the sex, just sat down and laughed and laughed. Which of course made friend wife feel as joyful as a case of mumps.

"Cut out that simple laughing and get me out of here," orders the wife. Orders is orders and hubby obeys. He gingerly picks his way through fresh varnish, picks up the wife and deposits her safely in the other room.

"When you want your linoleum varnished again you'll do it yourself," declares the wife. And now friend husband is doing the varnishing.

The Plainfield Pros and the Boston Whirlwinds meet again in the basketball fight for supremacy between these clubs tonight at the Plainfield Community house. This struggle for honors between these two clubs has extended over a period of many years and each and every game is all that can be desired in the sport. Both teams know the strong points and weaknesses of their opponents with the result that the games are close and productive of brilliant basketball.

Those who have witnessed one game between these old rivals will be on hand tonight to see another for the fans get basketball in big doses in these games. There is no need of dwelling on this game for every basketball fan in eastern Connecticut knows what to expect tonight.

Closely rivaling the main attraction in interest is the game between the Plainfield Buddies and the Radio Five of Danielson. Although only a preliminary game it will be a hotly contested game with the honors about even. Each team holds a victory over the other and tonight's game means the claiming of the eastern Connecticut junior title for the one that wins. The Buddies tonight will put their entire strength on the floor in an effort to gain the decision.

The preliminary starts at 8 o'clock while the main game will be started between 9:15 and 9:30 o'clock to give opportunity for fans to attend the Lenten services before coming to the game. Dancing, as usual, will follow the main attraction.

DO YOU REMEMBER THIS ONE?

(Another of a number of articles recalling local baseball of other years.)

"Great was the left wing of Pitcher Thomas Tuckey on Tuesday and the small gathering of fans who attended the game at Sachem park saw a pitchers' battle in which Tom was all to the merry," said The Bulletin of Sept. 11, 1907, the day after Tuckey hurled the Norwich team to a 1 to 0 victory over New Haven in the Connecticut league, and in doing so, held the visitors to one hit, that by Jope, the catcher, which caught Can Perkins, at third, off his guard.

Only three men got to first base on Tuckey that day, and it was his seventh victory in nine starts against New Haven that season. Norwich scored the only run of the game on Accorsini's single, Bunyan's fumble on Perkins' sacrifice, Cote's sacrifice, advancing both men and Accorsini scored when Bridges flied out to right.

This game closed the Norwich-New Haven series for the season, and Norwich had the better of the argument by 13 games to five.

CARDS DEVOTE MUCH ATTENTION TO FIELDING

BRADENTON, Fla., March 4.—(AP)—Two workouts, without any batting practice, constituted the Cardinals' activities here today. With only six young pitchers in camp and their arms weary from their batting practice work yesterday, Manager Street decided it would be safer to let the players engage in pepper games and other forms of exercise.

Pitcher Carmen Hill reported today, leaving only seven men on the list missing. Jesse Fowler, drafted from Reading, and Frankie Frisch are the only players not yet signed.

SMITH ENGAGED AS PRO AT CRAGSTON CLUB

NEW YORK, March 4.—(AP)—Horton Smith, brilliant 21-year-old golfer from Joplin, Mo., has been engaged as professional for the new Cragston Yacht and Country club, it was announced today by the club president, F. Calvin Demarest.

The club now is under construction on the old J. Pierpont Morgan estate at Cragston-on-Hudson, a few miles below West Point. Smith is expected to begin his duties this spring.

Naugatuck Eliminated

PHILADELPHIA, March 4.—(AP)—Naugatuck (Conn.) high school, defending champion in the high school division of the annual University of Pennsylvania Interscholastic basketball tournament, was eliminated in the fourth round today by Washington (D. C.) Western high by the close score of 26 to 25. Naugatuck won the high school title in the tournament in 1928 and 1929.

KOZIOL LOSES DECISION TO BENDER AT FALL RIVER

Al Koziol, local boxer, lost the decision to Freddy Bender at Fall River last night in a six round bout. Details of the bout were unobtainable last night and the result of the bout was the only word from Fall River that came over the wires.

Londos and Pesek Matched

MEMPHIS, Tenn., March 4—(AP)—Jimmy Londos, of Greece, today, approved action of his manager in signing articles of agreement for the National Boxing association's championship wrestling match between him and John Pesek, of Nebraska. The match will be held in Columbus, Ohio, April 2.

YESTERDAY IN THE TRAINING CAMPS

Giants

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., March 4.—(AP)—Jim Tennant of Gettysburg, Pa., tallest, widest and wildest rookie on the New York Giants' pitching staff, showed John McGraw what he could do when he was right today.

Possessed of a mean curve ball that bewilders the boys when Tennant has it under control, the big Pennsylvanian struck out five men in a row in a practice game. His victims included such notables as Travis Jackson and Mel Ott.

Dodgers

CLEARWATER, Fla., March 4.—(AP)—The Brooklyn Robins took most of the wind out of Dazzy Vance's sails today by nicking his delivery for three home runs in the course of a practice game. Johnny Frederick sent two balls over the right field fence in as many trips to the plate and Jake Flowers followed with a third homer.

Despite the three homers, Vance's team, the irregulars, beat the so-called regulars, 12 to 6, in the first nine-inning practice game the Robin squad has played. Vance bore down a bit for the rest of his three-inning job. Elliott and Roy followed with Morrison, Dudley and Moore pitching for the regulars.

Indians

NEW ORLEANS, March 4.—(AP)—Wesley Ferrell, one of the aces of the Cleveland Indians' pitching staff, ended his controversy with General Manager Billy Evans over the matter of salary today with a telegram accepting the club offer.

Ferrell was the last of the holdouts. Hudlin, another twirling ace holdout, joined the club here today. Ferrell was offered a substantial increase after his sensational showing last season during the Indians' climb to third place, but refused and countered with what officials of the club termed an "exorbitant demand." The offer of Evans, however, makes Ferrell the highest paid second year man in the history of the game.

Tigers

TAMPA, Fla., March 4.—(AP)—Manager Bucky Harris has taken steps to improve the pitching quality of the Detroit Tigers, only one of whose moundsmen finished the 1929 season with a winning record, without offending the pitcher temperament.

A board of pitching control was organized in the Tigers' training camp here, the members being Roger Bresnahan, Jean Dubuc and Aloysius Egan.

Pirates

PASO ROBLES, Calif., March 4.—(AP)—Practice games will start Friday at the Pittsburgh Pirate training camp here if it doesn't rain, Manager Jewel Ens made the announcement today while gazing sadly at the downpour outside, but one of many that have disrupted his training program.

The Pirate activities today were confined to calisthenics and skipping rope performed indoors.

Reds

ORLANDO, Fla., March 4.—(AP)—Cincinnati pitchers, with the exception of Si Johnson, still weak from an attack of mumps, had their first real taste of the Dan Howley method of workout today. The manager put them through their paces in covering first base on hits to the right side of the infield for an hour and a half, catching flies in the outfield for another hour, and a trip around the park. A short infield practice was followed by a whirl at the pepper games. The first batting practice probably will be indulged in tomorrow.

BULL FACTIONS DROVE PRICES HIGHER IN AN IRREGULAR SESSION OF MARKET

NEW YORK, March 4.—(AP)— The bull faction was able to keep the speculative situation in hand in today's stock market, and succeeded in lifting more than a score of utilities, industrials and pool favorites to new highs for the year. The market was inclined to slip during the morning, and the upturn was not easily accomplished. The advance was not uniform, considerable irregularity persisting throughout the day.

The day's trading reflected continued unsettlement in the commodity markets, and the varied character of business reports. Improvement in the cotton and grain markets during the afternoon prompted short covering and aided the bull cause on the stock market. Trading continued moderately active, as judged by early 1930 standards. Transfers aggregated 3,465,676 shares, nearly 200,000 less than yesterday.

Further indications of moderate retarding of steel operations appeared. U. S. Steel was said to have maintained its operations between 85 and 86 per cent of capacity for the third successive week, but independents reported further slackening. The average operations for the entire industry is now around 79 per cent of capacity, a reduction of 3 per cent in two weeks, and contrasting with 98 per cent a year ago.

Montgomery Ward's report of February sales was distinctly disappointing, showing a reduction of about 1 1-8 per cent from a year ago, the first decline from a corresponding month in a preceding year in two years. During this period, furthermore, the company has more than doubled its retail stores, which now total about 550.

Among the more favorable exhibits was the F. W. Dodge weekly report of total building contracts let in the states east of the Rockies, which appeared to give tangible evidence of the long promised revival of construction work. Contracts let in the week ended Feb. 28 totalled $133,890,500, a gain of 102 per cent over the previous week, 34 per cent over the like week of a year ago.

Payment of the regular dividend by Kennecott Copper tended to still apprehensions over the prospect of maintaining the level of copper prices. Producers point out that while consumers are holding off buying in the belief that large refiners' stocks hold promise of concessions, consumers stocks have fallen to abnormally low levels, so that the total surplus supplies of the metal are substantially lower than appears at first glance.

Money continued to ease, despite expectations that the month end settlements would cause an opposite tendency this week. Call money held at 4 per cent, and time money and bankers acceptance rates were shaded. The weekly consolidated statement of federal reserve weekly reporting member banks gives a clue to the plentiful supply of funds, showing a reduction last week in loans of $91,000,000, of which $64,000,000 was in commercial loans. This is interpreted in Wall street as reflecting the slow rate of operations in many lines of industry.

Wheat futures reacted 2 cents in more, reflecting uncertainty as to the course indicated by the farm board's changed buying policy, large offerings of Canadian and Argentine wheat at Liverpool, and favorable reports regarding the new domestic crop. Most of the losses were recovered before the close, however, in buying attributed to farm board sources, and short covering prompted by a rally at Winnipeg. Cotton was depressed for a time, the May contract dipping momentarily below 15 cents a pound, but losses were reduced to from 5 to 60 cents a bale. The selling was attributed to a further decline in silver, with its depressing effect upon Bombay.

Utilities were a strong feature of the share market. Bullishness has been stirred up in this group by rumors of ambitious natural gas marketing plans in the central and eastern states. Columbia Gas and Consolidated Gas each rose about 2 points to new 1930 highs, and North American 3. Farm equipments were also strong, with Case, normally a wide mover, shooting up 23 points to a new 1930 peak at 265. Westinghouse Electric was a strong spot in the industrials, selling up more than 7 points to a new top at 192. Several of the chemicals were in demand, Union Carbide rising a couple of points to a new peak. Radio sold up nearly 2 points to another 1930 peak above 50. Standard of New Jersey rose more than 2 points to 62 1-4, then slipped back a point. U. S. Steel closed up 1 1-2 points. Otis Elevator was heavy, dropping 16 points.

Leading foreign exchange rates were generally firmer, Sterling cables rallying 1-8 cent to $4.86. The Spanish peseta continued to drop, touching 11.61 cents, off about 1-3 cent.

THE CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, March 4.—(AP)— The main price tendency in today's curb market was upward as heavy accumulation was resumed in a select assortment of public utility, oil and industrial issues. As a rule, gains were held to a point or two but at least a score issues were marked up to new high levels for the year. Trading showed a moderate increase in volume, the day's sales running above 1,000,000 shares for the sixth time this year.

Cities Service was an outstanding strong spot, moving up 3 1-2 points to a new 1930 high at 38 1-2, closing just below the top. Indian Territory Illuminating Oil, which also is controlled by the Doherty interests, touched a new high at 43 1-4, or more than double the year's low. Reynolds Metal ran up 4 3-4 points to a new high at 32 3-8, on publication of the 1929 report showing earnings of $4.63 a share last year.

Electric Bond & Share moved in a somewhat lower range than yesterday but closed fractionally higher at 103 1-8. Three of the four international utilities issues moved into new high ground on unconfirmed reports that the company had realized a good profit through the sale of its subsidiary, Kentucky Securities Co., to a subsidiary of Middle West Utilities. Standard Power & Light issues turned heavy, presumably on the filing of a suit against the company by minority stockholders of Standard Gas & Electric which it recently took over.

Eisler Electric, which shows signs of pool activity, crossed 21 to a new top for the year. Consolidated Aircraft sold above 17 for the first time this year. Ulen & Co. and Universal Pictures also reached new high ground, buying of the former apparently being influenced by the publication of a favorable 1929 report.

Buying of the investment trust, trading and holding company shares was rather selective in character, Blue Ridge and Shenandoah common stocks moving to new peak levels for the year, while the preferred issues turned slightly reactionary.

Gulf and Ohio oils advanced a point each, presumably in response to reports of a sharp reduction in California crude oil output. Standard Oil of Indiana improved fractionally on a moderate turnover.

BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, March 4.—(AP)—Money was easy today, but the bond market made only a half-hearted response to this reflection of favorable credit conditions. However, United States government securities showed moderate strength and all issues moved higher, led by the treasury 3 3-4s which rose ten thirty-seconds on substantial buying. The fourth liberties were also active, selling just under their 1930 high.

Rates on time money eased to 4 1-2 to 4 3-4 per cent for all maturities. Call funds were unchanged at 4 per cent. The fact that some business is being done in twelve-month loans at 5 per cent was taken as an indication that a period of comparatively low interest charges is expected, and this resulted in accumulation of numbers of high grade bonds. Nevertheless the inquiry was shallow and closing prices were rather mixed.

New offerings of the day totaled nearly $70,000,000, the largest volume in some time, and the failure of the market to make a better showing was attributed to competition from this source. The American & Foreign Power company's $50,000,000 of 100-year debenture 5s was reported to have been well taken and an over-subscription was announced. Listed utilities eased.

Burlington 4 1-2s, Atchison General 4s, Baltimore & Ohio gold 4s, Delaware & Hudson 4s, New York Central debenture 4s, Pennsylvania General 4 1-2s, Northern Pacific 41-2s and Southern Pacific 4s were firm, but easing tendencies prevailed in Union Pacific first 4s, St. Louis & San Francisco prior lien 4s, Virginian 5s, Northern Pacific prior lien 4s and a few other high grade rails. Erie 5s sold down to 94, a new low for the year, on liquidation occasioned by the prospective new issue. International Great Northern Adjustment 6s lost 3 points. Central of New Jersey 5s made a new 1930 high of 111 for a net gain of 1 point.

American Telephone 5s of 1965 and International Telephone 5s received support, but numerous utilities, including Consolidated Gas of New York 5 1-2s, Pacific Gas & Electric 5s and Western Union gold 5s, sold off from 1-4 to 1-2. Laclede 5 1-2s dipped 1 7-8. Montana Power 5s advanced 1-2.

Armour Real Estate 4 1-2s, a weak spot on Monday, recovered part of the lost ground. Other firm industrials were American Smelting 5s, Republic Iron & Steel 5 1-2s, Western Electric 5s, and United Drug of Delaware 5s. The last named was particularly active and made a net gain of 1-2. In the specialty list, Pathe 7s without warrants sagged a point and Loew's 6s moved up to another new high at 98.

Convertibles traded irregularly. American Telephone 4 1-2s in a strong finish converted a small decline into a net advance of a point. Parmelee Transportation 6s, recently buoyant, dropped about 1-2.

Trading in foreign bonds slackened, but the group was generally higher. Berlin City Electric 6 1-2s and the Colombia Mortgage bank issues touched new peaks for the year and French 7s duplicated their previous high of 116. Belgians eased.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, March 4.—(AP)— United States senate notice of proposals that $25,000,000 worth of breadstuffs be supplied to relieve Chinese famine gave quick upturns to wheat values today. Definite steps by the senate agricultural committee looming toward authorizing use of part of the federal farm board's revolving fund to purchase that amount of wheat and flour for China was reported, and the wheat market made a prompt response, rising as much as 2 3-4c a bushel as compared with the day's lowest level. Earlier, the price of wheat had been breaking as a result largely of persistent lack of export demand.

Closing quotations on wheat were irregular at 1-2c under the top figures reached. The finish ranged from 5-8c a bushel net decline to 1 3-8c advance for the day. Corn closed unchanged to 1-4c lower, oats at a shade down to 3 1-2c gain, and provisions varying from 5c setback to a rise of 2c.

Novelty in regard to the China famine relief proposal consisted mainly of the fact that this was the first time that the plan to use the United States wheat surplus in such a way had received serious official recognition, heretofore also a new concrete method of providing necessary funds had not been suggested, so far at least as most wheat traders were aware. Under such circumstances, Washington advices of new developments concerning China aroused decided interest, and a good many previous speculative sellers here made haste to switch to the buying side of the market.

Word of farm board purchases of 500,000 bu. of domestic hard winter wheat at the Gulf of Mexico tended also to strengthen the wheat market today. There were some late complaints, too, of dry weather prevailing over parts of the United States winter wheat belt. On the other hand, export business in the North American wheat today was again nearly at a halt, and evidence pointed to future delivery selling here on the part of foreigners. Moreover, during the first half of the day attention was focused sharply on Oklahoma and Kansas dispatches telling of auspicious crop conditions. Friends of higher prices, however, stimulated by Washington news, were again in the ascendant as the day drew to an end.

Corn and oats were swayed chiefly by the action of wheat.

Scattered buying put firmness into the provision market, despite downturns in the value of hogs.

Closing bids and offers: Wheat — May 109 5-8-3-4, 115 1-8; July, 107 3-4-108; 118 1-4-3-8; Sept. 110, 115 3-8-1-2. Corn—May 86 1-4-3-8, 87 5-8-3-4; July 88 1-4-3-8, 89 3-4-7-8; Sept. 86 1-2, 89 7-8.

NEW YORK, March 4.—(AP)—Construction contracts awarded in the 37 states east of the Rocky mountains during the week ending Feb. 25 amounted to $138,899,500, the F W Dodge Corp. reports. This amount was by far the largest weekly contract total of $63,562,300, an increase of compares with the preceding week's total of $63,562,300, and increase of 102 per cent, and with the total for the corresponding week of last year of $99,943,700, a gain of 34 per cent. Contracts let since the first of the year, however, total but $641,028,200, which is at a daily rate of about 17 per cent below the rate activity prevailing during the same period of 1929.

Business of the American Can Co. held up very well during the first two months of the year to the record of last year, H. W. Phelps, president, said at the annual meeting today. Prospects for the year are very good he said, adding that the reports on crops indicate that the acreage planted this year will be a little in excess of that of 1929.

Wall street heard today that there will be no public offering of the American shares in the recently formed bank for international settlements, and that these shares will be held and, in part, privately distributed by J. P. Morgan & Co., the First National Bank of New York and the First National Bank of Chicago.

Lending dealers in bankers acceptances today reduced the bid and asked rates on all maturities by 1-8 of 1 per cent. The new rates are as follows: 30 to 120 days 3 3-4 per cent bid, 3 5-8 per cent asked; 150 & 180 days 3 7-8 per cent bid and 3 3-4 per cent asked.

WASHING CABBAGE LEAF MAKES FOR BETTER KRAUT

MADISON, Wis. —(AP)—A superior grad of sauerkraut has been made at the University of Wisconsin's college of agriculture merely by washing the cabbage leaves.

Experiments show that washing rids the leaves of thousands of useless bacteria, thus leaving a better opportunity for bacteria inside the plants to work when the cabbage goes to a sauerkraut vat.

C. H. Keipper and E. B. Fred, who reported the findings of the Society of American Bacteriologists, said they found an average of 2,000,000 bacteria to a gram on unwashed exterior of cabbage. Washing reduces the number to 800,000.

REGULATE OXYGEN SOURCE FOR PNEUMONIA PATIENTS

CHICAGO —(AP)— A de luxe refrigerating chamber has been added to a Chicago hospital to supply pneumonia patients with a varying source of oxygen.

In addition to regulating oxygen the chamber enables the physician to regulate temperature and humidity. Windows in the sides of the metal chamber permit nurses and doctors to watch the patient.

Carbon dioxide given off by the patient is removed from the air as it passes through a purifying chemical. The same air then passes over a cooling coil, which brings the temperature down. The air then is returned to the chamber.

WIRE USED TO SAW MARBLE IN OZARKS

ST. LOUIS —(AP)— Wire is used to saw marble in the Ozarks of northern Arkansas says a report to the American Institute of Mining and Metallurgical Engineers by W. M. Weigel.

The saw is made by twisting together three wires, each one-quarter inch in diameter. This is drawn across the marble like a saw and supplemented by a hand-fed stream of sand.

Thus far the wires have attained a speed of 20 feet per second.

A HISTORY OF CONNECTICUT INDUSTRY

Released by Manufacturers Association of Connecticut

The Cushman Chuck Company, Hartford

This is one of those typical Connecticut industries which began long ago in a very small way, but today its product has become known in every civilized country in the world.

A. F. Cushman turned out the first Cushman chuck on a foot-power lathe in a tenement house still standing in Hartford at what is now the corner of Church and Spring streets. This was in 1862.

Mr. Cushman prospered, for his chucks had a ready sale. Also, English manufacturers early adopted them and sent them with their lathes almost everywhere.

The foot-power lathe, as well as the original quarters, were soon replaced by something better and the history of the business has been one of steady growth and expansion up to this time.

Today, there is a model plant on upper Windsor street, well equipped with the latest and best of the machine tools that are peculiarly fitted for the building of lathe chucks, and these chucks are generally considered as the standard for excellence wherever they are used.

The business was incorporated in 1885, and the officers today are as follows: A. F. Sloan chairman of the board of directors and treasurer; Harry E. Sloan, president; A. Boyd Sloan, secretary and assistant treasurer.

VALUE OF "SPLINT" COAL NOW GETS RECOGNITION

PITTSBURGH —(AP)— "Splint coal," long considered a miner's term, has been found by the bureau of mines to be a distinct type of coal.

Results are reported to the American Institute of Mining and Metallurgical Engineers by Reinhardt Thiessen of the bureau.

"Because splint coals produce a hot cheerful flame," he says, "possess a clean, block-like nature, and have a high volatile content, they have lately become much valued for domestic, gas-producer and steaming purposes."

SURVEY WILL DETERMINE U. S. TIMBER RESOURCES

NEW YORK—(AP)—Guesswork will be taken out of the lumber industry in a survey conducted by the federal resources of the nation.

The national lumber manufacturers association which is cooperating, points out that all talk in the past about the country's timber supply has been based on estimates.

The surevy will not be completed for several years.

ENGLISH AND IRSH WIN SHIP BUILDING LAURELS

LIVERPOOL, England—(AP)—Great Britian and Ireland are still building more than half of the world's shipping.

Lloyd's Register summary of shipbuilding for 1929, shows there were launched in the world 1,012 vessels of 2,793,210 tons gross, of which 1,522,623 tons were in Great Britain and Ireland, and 1,270,587 abroad. Output in Great Britian and Ireland represents 54.5 per cent of the total, as compared with 53.6 per cent for 1928 and 1927.

PORTABLE HEN HOUSES TO MOVE ILLINOIS CHICKS

URBANA, Ill.— (AP) —With most everything else about the farm mounted on wheels, preparations are being made to put rollers under hens, too.

Chicken houses on most rented farms have been found so "deplorable" by investigators of the University of Illinois college of agriculture that tenant farmers are forced to have portable chicken houses to move from one farm to another with them.

The college is working out plans for a standard portable house.

Ventura Gas Output Cut

VENTURA, Cal —(AP)—A campaign to conserve natural gas resulted in the reduction of the daily output in the Ventura field from about 280,000,000 cubic feet to 160,000,000.

TEXAS LONGHORNS THRIVE ON NEW, NOURISHING DIET

LAWTON, Okla.—(AP)—The 1930 edition of the Texas longhorn, thanks to advantages which were denied his ancestors, is a better bovine than his wild-eyed parents.

So promising is the rehabilitated longhorn that an organized governmental effort is being made in Wichita national park, near here, to prevent the "dogie" from joining the dodo in extinction.

Will C. Barnes of the United States department of agriculture has obtained a congressional appropriation enabling him to establish a nucleus herd for experimental purposes.

Plenty of food and water have given the longhorns a new sleek, contented appearance, unknown to their thin forebears who were forced to feed on the unnourishing salt grass of Texas plains. They have picked up weight under proper care.

Wide sweeping horns remain now as the longhorn's chief mark of distinction.

Can't Control Drought

EAST LANSING, Mich.—(AP)—The heaviest drought of 35 years in Michigan last summer brought the most exclusive "300-bushel potato club" in the history of the organization. Only ten farmers produced 300 or more bushels an acre compared with an average club membership of more than 30.

While Mrs. Washington played the quiet hymn, the signal for silence, denoting that the meeting has opened, the children took their seats. "How We Can Show Reverence," was the theme, each member reading a verse pertaining to the theme, as prepared by the teacher. Besides several hymns sung, when Mrs. Washington was the piano accompanist, the juniors sang Jesus Wants Me For a Sunbeam and Jesus Bids Us Shine with Miss Elizabeth Browning at the piano. She also played for the intermediates, when they sang their own composition, to the tune of Blest Be The Tie That Binds. Rev. Mr. Adams led in prayer. CENTRAL BAPTIST CHURCH GIRLS WIN CUP AT ANNUAL STUNT NIGHT

The Central Baptist church girls group was awarded first prize, a silver loving cup, in the annual interchurch stunt night conducted Tuesday evening at the Community house, under the auspices of the Norwich Council of Religious Education. First honorable mention was received by the United Congregational church girls and second honorable mention went to the group of girls representing the A. M. E. Zion, Grace Baptist and Mt. Calvary Baptist churches. Eleven churches participated in the affair, which drew a gathering that filled the large auditorium to capacity.

After the processional by Swahn's orchestra Mrs. A. C. Freeman announced that the first stunt of the event would be presented by the First Baptist church. The stunt was "Pharaoh's Daughter." The remainder of the stunts were given as follow: Trinity M. E. church, "Rebecca at the Well"; Christ Episcopal church, "Jephthah's Daughter"; Taftville Congregational, "Hulda"; Trinity Episcopal, "Jael"; Grace Baptist, A. M. E. Zion and Mt. Calvary, "Rahab"; United Congregational, "Queen Esther"; Central Baptist, "Mary, the Annointer"; Greeneville Congregational, "Dorcas"; Universalist, "Mary, the Mother of Jesus"; Park Congregational, "Ruth."

All of the stunts were unusually well portrayed and the characters were attractively costumed. In addition to the churches mentioned the Third Baptist and the First Evangelical and Lutheran churches were also represented, but did not enter in the stunt contest. After the final stunt the three judges retired to make their decisions. They were Miss Gladys Taber, secretary of the New London Y. W. C. A., chairman; Miss Elizabeth Day, girls worker in Colchester, and Miss Henckle, assistant dramatic coach at Connecticut college for Women.

During the interim the delegations from the various churches responded to the roll call with novel songs and cheers. The announcement of the judges' decision was made by Miss Taber. Miss Taber stated that the matter of picking the winners was a difficult problem, and in the opinion of the judges the girls of the Central Baptist church deserved the first prize. The announcement was received with applause. Miss Taber then announced the groups receiving honorable mention.

The award of the cup to the winning group was made by Mrs. Freeman.

The committee in charge of the event comprised the general committee of the Norwich council, Mrs. A. C. Freeman, Mrs. Edwin Floyd, Miss Elizabeth Pullen, Miss Hattie Fowler and Mrs. Harry E. Higgins, and the councilors from each church.

GENERAL PROSPERITY IS ASCRIBED TO THE DRY LAW

Claim Made By Proponents of Prohibition Before Senate Judiciary Committee — Improved Conditions Among Working Classes and Better Environment For the Growing Generation Attributed to the Banishment of Intoxicants—Arguments of the Wets For Repeal of the 18th Amendment Were Vigorously Assailed.

WASHINGTON, March 5.—(AP)—Advocates of prohibition today vigorously assailed the arguments of antiprohibitionists for repeal of the 18th amendment before the house judiciary committee.

In the first day of their allotted time of seven days, the drys presented four witnesses who attributed to prohibition general prosperity, improved conditions among working classes and a better environment for the growing generation.

They insisted that evils attributed to prohibition by its opponents before the committee had been exaggerated and that isolated instances had been taken as indications of general conditions.

Two of the outstanding American drys the prohibitionists hoped to present—Henry Ford and Thomas A. Edison—expressed to the committee in the form of telegrams to Samuel Crowther, of Bayside, L. I., the first witness, their unalterable opposition to repeal of the dry laws.

Ford expressed a conviction that the "sane people" of the nation would never see the 18th amendment repealed, while Edison said he felt that "prohibition is the greatest experiment yet made to benefit man," and that it was strange to him that some men of great ability and standing "do not help to remove the curse of alcohol."

Although the drys, headed by Mrs. Lenna Lowe Yost, legislative director of the Women's Christian Temperance union, planned to present six witnesses today, the cross examination of the four was continued at such length that testimony of the others was put off until tomorrow.

After Crowther, who is an author on economic subjects, the committee heard Edward Keating, editor of Labor and a former representative from Colorado; Dr. Daniel A. Poling, of New York, general director of the J. C. Penny foundation and president of the World's Christian Endeavor union, and Henry M. Johnson, lawyer and business man of Louisville, Ky.

Crowther explained that he had made a survey of industrial conditions under prohibition for the Ladies' Home Journal and said he had found that the laboring classes had increased their bank accounts, improved their home conditions and purchased automobiles, radios and other luxuries of life out of money which formerly they spent for alcoholic beverages in the corner saloon.

Keating followed Crowther and testified "the brewer, the distiller and the dive keeper" were responsible for prohibition because they had refused to comply with regulation of the liquor traffic. Now after a decade, he said, the liquor men were "back here boasting of their contempt for law and trying to bluff the American people with threats of civil war if they are not permitted to have their way."

The former representative said the anti-prohibitionists could not muster 100 votes in the house for repeal of the 18th amendment and challenged the wets to place a candidate on the ticket in every congressional district next November to determine whether the country wanted prohibition.

Presenting the results of a telegraphic poll he had just conducted on prohibition questions among presidents of leading colleges and Christian Endeavor unions in 43 states, Dr. Poling said he had reached the conclusion that there was "decidedly less drinking now among college and high school students and among youth generally than before prohibition. He maintained that in every economic level the youth of the country was better off now than under pre-prohibition status. He stressed particularly an improvement which he said had been observed during the last two years.

He declared it was time to stop "slandering our own sons and daughters" for "after all full account has been taken of all the moral delinquents, America's youth are intrinsically sound and generaly worthy as youth ever have been."

Johnson's testimony dealt with conditions before and after prohibition in his home town Louisville, Ky., which he described as the former center of America's fine whiskey industry. He presented figures obtained from Roy W. Easleyn, director of safety of Louisville, a former prohibition agent and Thomas B. Duncan, president of the Louisville & Nashville railroad, to show that there had been rapid economic progress in the city since prohibition due to the closing down of most of the sixty distilleries there.

The drys plan to present witnesses for the full seven days.

Throughout the day the committee room was crowded, several women becoming so tired from hours of standing that they sat on the floor. Every speaker was applauded from time to time.

Crowther said he had surveyed the country and concluded that prohibition had diverted in ten years between two and six billions of dollars into the purchase of goods or into savings among the wage earners that would have gone over the saloon bars in pre-prohibition days. He asserted production had increased between 25 and 30 per cent in the past ten years compared to the normal rate of 16 per cent, and under cross examination by Representative Laguardia, republican, New York, said the World war industrial era in this country resulted in no actual benefit.

The most vigorous attack upon the testimony of witnesses seeking repeal of the 18th amendment came from former Representative Keating. Asserting that the liquor men were responsible for prohibition because the American people decided that they could not regulate it, Keating said "they are corrupting enforcement officers, bribing prosecuting officials and 'fixing' courts."

The Colorado man said the point he wanted to make before the committee was that the liquor men were doing the same thing on a more extensive scale for 40 years before prohibition.

"No other amendment to the constitution," he said, "was so thoroughly debated over a long period of years as the 18th amendment by the most widely circulated newspapers, financed by apparently bottomless slush funds, fought to the last ditch and were finally crushed by the weight of their own iniquities rather than by the skill and strength of the opposition.

"Now ten years after the decision was rendered, they are back here boasting of their contempt for law and trying to bluff the American people with threats of civil war if they are permitted to have their way."

Dr. Poling declared that experience in this and in foreign countries had demonstrated conclusively that no substitute for prohibition has ever eliminated illicit sale of liquor.

"Under the Canadian plan," he added, "which has been strongly recommended here, bootlegging has increased."

The last witness of the day, Johnson of Louisville, when questioned by Representativce Laguardia, said he did not know how many speakeasies were in his city, but that previous to prohibition there had been 438 saloons. During pre-prohibition days, he said that the banks had tied up much of their money in whiskey certificates and that there were few home owners among minor railroad employes, some of them living in houses rented at $10 a month.

OFFICIALS ALARMED OVER DRINKING BY YOUNG PEOPLE

WASHINGTON, March 5.—(AP)—Rep. LaGuardia, republican, New York, today started to present statements to the house judiciary committee from police chiefs and sheriffs of Cheyenne, Wyoming; Topeka, Kansas, and an unnamed point in Idaho expressing alarm over drinking by young people, but Dr. Daniel A. Poling, president of the International Christian Endeavor society, who was testifying at the time, interrupted saying he did not believe such statements were supported by any general picture of conditions.

AMERICANS DISARMED BY BRITISH ON BIMINI ISLAND

MIAMI, Fla., March 5—(AP)—Seven United States border patrol officers and a civilian employe were disarmed by British authorities at Bimini today before they were allowed to land on the island from a seaplane in which they were searching for eight rum running boats stolen from the Miami storage base of the customs service last night.

The officers reported tonight that they had recovered none of the boats but that they had located three in waters around Bimini. The British commissioner on the island has been requested to seize them for return to the United States, they said.

The boats were stolen from the base last night in the third similar robbery since the first of the year. On another occasion one boat was stolen and on the second three were taken.

A night watchman was overpowered and bound by a group of men who, he said, took him to the Everglades area outside of Miami, where they released him.

TESTIMONY AGAINST DIVERSION OF WATERS

HARTFORD, March 5—(AP)—Attacking the plea of Massachusetts that the diversion of water from the Ware and Swift rivers, is necessary to the welfare of Boston, Connecticut today introduced testimony before Special Master Charles W. Bunn, to show two water supplies in eastern Massachusetts capable, according to expert testimony, of providing water as good or better than that to be secured from the Massachusetts project. In a brief examination, Massachusetts counsel indicated they will attempt to show their commonwealth is acting reasonably in seeking pure water in preference to that which must be treated for pollution.

ARTHUR T. HADLEY, PRESIDENT EMERITUS OF YALE, DIED IN JAPAN

NEW HAVEN, March 5—(AP)—Arthur T. Hadley, president emeritus of Yale university, died in Japan today, according to a cablegram received here tonight by his daughter, Mrs. Nicholas Moseley.

Dr. Hadley became president of Yale in 1899, retiring in 1921.

Prof. Moseley, Dr. Hadley's son-in-law, tonight said that the body will be brought to San Francisco by the Empress of Australia which is expected to arrive in that city on March 31 and will then be sent here. Funeral services will be held at Battell chapel at Yale.

Dr. Hadley, who was 73 years old, died of pneumonia at Kobe, Japan, according to the cablegram. He left from New York on the Empress of Australia, on December 3 for a round the world cruise.

TESTIMONY COMPLETED IN THE WIGGINS MURDER TRIAL

CHARLOTTE, N. C., March 15.—(AP)—Testimony was completed in the Ella May Wiggins murder trial today with a mass of conflicting evidence for and against five men charged with second degree murder of Mrs. Wiggins written in the court records.

Time for the pleas to the jury starting tomorrow was limited to eight hours, four to each side. It was expected that speeches would be completed in time for Presiding Judge J. H. Clement to deliver his charge to the jury Friday. This suggested the possibility that the five textile workers on trial might know their fate before the week ended at the latest.

The state's final move today before ending its testimony was an effort on rebuttal to weaken a strong alibi set up by the defense for Horace Wheelus, one of the defendants. The other defendants are O. H. Lunsford, Lowery Davis, Fred Morrow and Troy Jones.

MORE THAN 300 DEATHS FROM FLOODS IN FRANCE

PARIS, March 5.—(AP)—More than 300 deaths have resulted from floods in southern and central France. Most of them occurred in Montauban and Moissac in the valley of the Tarn. Communications with the stricken region were still uncertain tonight and authorities feared that the death list might be under-estimated.

Figures received from Montauban tonight said that the latest estimate there gave 150 dead in Moissac with 500 houses destroyed and 2,000 persons homeless.

Reynies, a village of 500 inhabitants, was destroyed and had 12 dead. Albias, with 1,000 inhabitants, had three dead. Twenty houses collapsed there.

In St. Antonin, a town of 3,000, there were two dead and 25 houses in ruins. La Francaise, a place of almost equal size, suffered the loss of 30 houses but no deaths were mentioned.

TAFT HAS RECOVERED FROM CRITICAL STAGE

WASHINGTON, March 5.—(AP)—His life despaired of twice within the last month by attending physicians, William Howard Taft continued today to resist successfully the ravages of disease.

Drs. Francis R. Hagner and Thomas A. Claytor said their 72-year-old patient had shown further improvement during the last 24 hours. More rest and greater ability to take nourishment has brought the former chief justice back temporarily, at least, from the critical stages of last week when the doctors said death might be a matter of hours.

He still is dangerously ill, however.

NEW YORK, March 5.—(AP)—A radio message to police headquarters tonight said the steamship Bogota of the Columbia line and the ferryboat General Humphries, which runs between Manhattan and Governor's Island, had collided. The message did not give the extent of damage to either vessel.

The message said that the Bogota, which was outward bound for Port Au Prince, Haiti, anchored in the harbor after the accident to determine the extent of the damage. The ferryboat proceeded to her slip.

Promised By Senate Leaders —Secretary of Labor Davis Optimistic Over Outlook.

The secretary was optimi[illegible] the outlook and expressed [illegible] that early passage of th[illegible] bill and of the public buildin[illegible]nsion measures would tend, with [illegible]er programs now in effect, to relieve conditions completely by early summer.

Senator Watson, of Indiana, the republican leader, who talked with Davis at the capitol, said the $230,000,000 public buildings bill would get early attention after passage of the tariff measure, which is now near the end of its course through the senate.

Senator Wagner, democrat, New York, who also was visited by the labor secretary, will go before the commerce committee tomorrow to urge approval of his bills to set up employment agencies in co-operation with the states and to provide for an advance program of employment.

Davis estimated the number of unemployed at 3,000,000 in his conferences at the capitol.

Senator Watson explained that Muscle Shoals legislation would have the right of way in the senate after the tariff is disposed of but said the public buildings measure also would receive prior consideration. Also an early effort will be made to complete consideration of the public roads, appropriation, which is now conference between the senate and house for a conciliation of differences.

16 ENFIELD BOOTLEGGERS HAVE BEEN CONVICTED

HARTFORD, March 5—(AP)—Sixteen Enfield bootleggers, arrested on bench warrants early last month, were convicted in superior court today by Judge Newell Jennings, who, earlier in the day, in view of the large number of liquor cases before him, explained what his policy would be in the imposition of penalties.

Judge Jennings declared that he would be guided solely by the intention of the legislature, which he interpreted to be light penalties for first offenders and severe penalties for second and third offenders, varying in accordance with the disclosed facts. Persons guilty of transporting he put in a separate class to be dealt with severely because he said he believed that it is at the point of transportation that the traffic is easiest controlled.

FLIER ATTAINED SPEED OF ABOUT 132 MILES AN HOUR

NEW YORK, March 5.—(AP)—Captain Boris Sergievsky, chief pilot for the Sikorsky Aviation corporation, today surpassed the world speed record for planes with a load of 4,409.24 pounds, attaining a speed of about 132 1-2 miles an hour over a 100-kilometer course from Execution Rock lighthouse to Southport, Conn., and back.

Captain Sergievsky's flight failed to set a new world record, however, since he beat the former record by less than the five miles an hour margin required by the National Aeronautic society which passes on record attempts. The record is held by Richard Wagner of Germany, who flew 130.105 miles an hour at Frederickshaven-Lindau, Germany, Jan. 20, 1928.

Tardieu Cabinet Wins Vote Of Confidence

Vote Was 316 to 263—Margin Almost Twice As Much As Had Been Forecast.

[illegible] March 5—(AP)—Andre Tar[illegible]econd cabinet ran the gauntlet [illegible] chamber of deputies today and, [illegible]hough roundly thumped by the parties of the left, it emerged with a favorable majority of 53. The rectified ballot was announced as 316 to 263.

The winning margin of confidence was almost twice as great as political forecasters had been ready to grant the cabinet in advance of the voting. Most of them agreed that a margin of 30 votes would be a sign of strength for Tardieu and as the bitter debate on the ministerial declaration of policy progressed, some of the prognosticators began to believe that the cabinet would be lucky to win at all.

As a consequence the government will go back to the London naval conference and will face the chamber on the question of ratifying the Young plan, revising taxes and passing a budget with enhanced prestige.

The declaration of policy reaffirmed the French naval demand for a fleet of 724,000 tons by 1936 which M. Tardieu made at London several weeks ago. There was, however, a well defined impression in authoritative circles tonight that the programme would be given some flexibility at London in order to relieve tension there and aid in the success of the five power parley.

The new delegation will start for London at noon tomorrow. It consists of Premier Tardieu, Aristide Briand, foreign Minister; J. L. Dumesuil, minister of marine; Francois Pietrie, minister of colonies; Ambassador De Fleuriau and Senator Gustave De Kerguezec. Of these, Tardieu, Briand, Pietri and De Fleuriau were members of the original delegation.

The naval conference has been proceeding without the French officially represented, but its progress has been slow and the reappearance of the French will be the signal for resuming the negotiations at full speed.

The indictments name seven women whom the father, Michael Cates, is alleged to have married and transported from one state to another and named one wife of Richard, who also was stated to have married five other women. The younger son, Howard, was not listed as having been married but was indicted for assisting in transporting the wives of his father and brother.

DETECTIVE JONES HAS IDENTIFIED LALONE AS THE MAN WHO SHOT HIM

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., March 5—(AP)—Willie Jones, young Jacksonville detective, pointed to Roland Lalone today as the man who shot him during a gun battle here January 17 in which Detective Willie Smith was fatally wounded. Lalone and Watson Moulthrope, two escaped prisoners from Connecticut, are on trial for Smith's death.

Jones denied under cross-examination that he fired in the direction of Smith.

The detective told of seeing an automobile, bearing a Massachusetts license plate, which he had been told was used by three men in a filling station robbery at St. Augustine, Fla., as he and Smith rode in a police car. He recounted stopping the machine, driven by Lalone, he said, and bearing two other men whom he could not identity.

As Lalone alighted from the car, Jones testified, Lalone wheeled with a pistol in his hand and engaged Jones in a duel. He said Smith was on the other side of the automobile, and never came within range of Lalone's bullets. He asserted he heard shooting on the other side of the Massachusetts car, but did not see Moulthrope or an alleged companion, Leo Landry, fire.

Jones said he never saw Smith after the latter went around the bandit's automobile.

The detective said he used a .38 calibre pistol. Dr. R. R. Killinger, county medical examiner, had testified Smith was killed with a .38 bullet.

Landry, who escaped with Lalone and Moulthrope from the Connecticut state prison, will be tried separately. He is expected to be a state witness.

Jones will be recalled to the stand tomorrow.

The youthful detective said that he had been advised on January 16 that three men in a sedan automobile bearing a Massachusetts registration, had robbed a filling station at St. Augustine, Fla.

The next night, while he and Smith were en route to headquarters for band practice, Jones said, he saw the car and followed it about six blocks.

"We drove up alongside, told them we were from the police station, and told them to pull over to the curb," Jones said.

"They drove," he continued, "a little ways further and pulled into the curb. We drove alongside.

"Smith got out on the right side of the car, and I got out on the left side. I was driving. Smith walked up to the driver of the sedan. I came around front of the police car and walked up to the driver. Smith walked around back of the sedan. I told the man at the wheel—Lalone—to get out of the car, that we were from the police station and wanted to investigate.

"Lalone got out, and when he hit the ground wheeled around and said, 'Stick 'em up, you yellow —— —— ——' and I didn't hear the rest of what he said.

"He had a pistol in his hand and I scuffled with him, trying to keep from getting shot. We ran around the side of the police car and shot at each other three times—I don't know who shot first."

Under cross examination, Jones denied having shot at Lalone from the middle of the street, across the hood of the police car, "in the direction of Smith."

"I was standing near the curb, behind the two cars, and shot at Lalone as he ran down an alley that began at a curb behind the two cars," he insisted.

Jones said he first knew he had been shot when he experienced a numb feeling in his abdomen after Lalone had fled.

The witness said that he could not identify the other two men in the car with Lalone, but that he was positive in his identification of Lalone.

M. E. Drane, county road patrolman, testified that he had been advised by the South Jacksonville police of the robbery of the St. Augustine filling station by three men in a Massachusetts car and that he had given the information to Detective Jones.

Mrs. A. Winkler, of Jacksonville, said that three men giving names of Plum, Shea and Chase, engaged rooms at her place on January 10. In court she pointed to Lalone as Shea and to Moulthrope as Plumm.

UNEMPLOYMENT USED FOR PROMOTION OF COMMUNISM

Police Department In New York Is Prepared to Keep In Check Communist Demonstration Planned For Today—Communists Expect An Attendance of 60,000 Persons—Police Throughout the World Are Ready to Quell "Demonstrations" Ordered From Moscow.

NEW YORK, March 5—(AP)—Warning that there must be no disorder or rioting, the police department today made elaborate preparations to keep in check the communist unemployment demonstration planned tomorrow afternoon in Union square.

Mayor Walker has promised the communists, who will observe the "International Fighting Day' ordered by the Trade Union International at Moscow as a protest against unemployment, the right of free speech. He said that police would not interfere in their activities as long as no disorder prevailed.

Details of mounted and foot policemen will patrol the square to "preserve order" and special guards have been assigned to public buildings, large churches and the homes of officials and wealthy persons.

The latter move was made when United States Attorney Charles H. Tuttle turned over to police an anonymous letter warning that "the reds" were under orders to bomb a number of buildings.

Commissioner Whalen said that the police anticipate no trouble. However he advised women and children to keep away from Union square, to avoid being trampled by the crowds.

Communist organizers announced that they expect an attendance of 60,000 persons. More than 40 speakers will address the gathering. Samuel Darcy, in charge of the demonstration, said that several thousand employed men and women would participate.

The American Federation of Labor has instructed union locals not to take part in the affair.

The unemployment demonstrations through the world, planned by the communist parties, are alleged to have been financed by the soviet government as a means of spreading soviet propaganda.

William Z. Foster, a leader of the communist party of America, has denied that he received any such funds to promote the demonstrations in the United States.

The date for the "fighting day" was set last month at a meeting of the conference of European communist parties at Duesseldorf.

CONN. CITIES ALERT TO DEAL WITH COMMUNISTS

(By the Associated Press)

Connecticut cities today were on the alert to curb any violence which might eventuate during unemployment demonstrations planned by communistic groups in response to a call issued by the Trade Union International at Moscow.

While most of the cities do not anticipate serious trouble, police will be held ready to cope with any emergency. Demonstrations will be forbidden in Stamford. The board of selectmen in that city yesterday refused to issue a permit to the Stamford Trade Union Unity league for a demonstration, which it had planned to hold at noon today on the town hall steps. Police will be ready to enforce the selectmen's edict.

A demonstration is planned for 10 a. m., today in front of the Waterbury city hall. Yesterday, Mayor Frank Hayes issued an appeal asking the public not to attend the demonstration and expressing the hope that "citizens would refuse to give strength to the cause of the communists by completely ignoring their campaign."

Some sort of a demonstration is planned for noon today in New Haven. Police Chief Philip T. Smith yesterday issued a permit to the Trade Union Unity league for a gathering of unemployed persons on the Central Green.

WORLD POLICE READY TO CLUB COMMUNISTS

(By the Associated Press)

Police of cities throughout the world today were preparing to quell any disturbance which communist adherents might plan in response to a call for "demonstrations," issued by the Trade Union International, at Moscow.

Some cities including San Francisco, New York and Philadelphia will allow meetings, if orderly. Chicago has ordered "no parades." This is because the police commissioner had been told "the paraders have been asked to arm themselves with knives and blackjacks, to attack the police."

Berlin, Paris, Riga and Prague have forbidden communistic demonstrations.

In Czechoslovakia, two communist newspapers were suppressed and no meetings will be permitted. Police of Prussia and Esthonia are on the alert for disturbances.

Athens reported that communist proclamations request workmen to create disturbances and demand a labor form of government.

Stockholm police have forbidden street demonstrations but have issued permits for three open air meetings.

St. Louis was warned that "a demonstration St. Louis would remember" would eventuate. Police expected no trouble but were on the watch.

Western states mining districts planned no special precautions.

Representative Hamilton Fish, of New York, yesterday introduced a bill in congress calling for an investigation by the house of communist party activities in the United States.

PLANS OF COMMUNISTS ALONG PACIFIC COAST

SAN FRANCISCO, March 5.—(AP)—What the unemployed on the Pacific coast will do tomorrow in connection with the announced "world wide protest against capitalism" was a matter of some concern in several communities tonight.

In San Francisco, however, Chief of Police William J. Quinn declared that anyone who wanted could parade if they did so peaceably. He added that the police would not interfere and would provide an escort for the marchers if they wanted it.

Moreover, Mayor James Rolph, Jr., indicated that if the demonstrators marched to the city hall as they have said they would, he may be there to greet them and wish them success in their quest for work.

In Oakland, Chief of Police Donald L. Marshall said that the city's streets would be open from end to end for any one who desired to parade in an orderly manner.

In the northwest, in the cities of Vancouver, B. C., and Seattle, no such welcome was extended. In view of recent clashes there the authorities have announced that further demonstrations will not be tolerated. Sidney Bloomfield, who said he is district organizer for the communist party, announced in Seattle today that a parade would be held there tomorrow.

In Portland, Ore., the police department "red" detail placed on a permanent basis years ago during an I. W. W. uprising, informed L. V. Jenkins, police chief, today that secret plans of an alleged communist demonstration tomorrow had been revealed. The chief declined to announce his plans for handling the situation.

Police reserves were ordered to be ready for emergency service in Los Angeles. Streets in the vicinity of the plaza where a thousand or so persons rioted last week when police frustrated a march on the city hall, are to be patrolled tomorrow to prevent crowds gathering. No orderly assemblages are to be molested, however.

TEAR GAS AND RIOT GUNS FOR CHICAGO COMMUNISTS

EAST CHICAGO, Ind., March 5.—(AP)—Tear gas and riot guns will be used, if necessary, to prevent communists from holding their scheduled demonstrations here tomorrow, Chief of Police Leo McCormack announced today.

Cihef McCormack stated that no permit had been given the communists to stage a parade or demonstration and that under no circumstances would they be permitted to do so.

SOCIALISTS NOT ALLIED WITH THE RADICAL "REDS"

NEW YORK, March 5.—(AP)—Morris Hillquit, national chairman of the socialist party, tonight said the "socialist party disclaims any connection with the futile policy of baiting public authorities that is carried on in a few cities by irresponsible groups of extremists."

Without mentioning communist activities by name, Mr. Hillquit added: "Neither noisy and planless demonstrations nor indiscriminate police clubbing offer a solution for the real distress caused by widespread and growing unemployment. Such solution can only be attained by well-planned and large scale efforts by organized labor and supported by the government in all its branches."

He said the party believes the disturbing "elements will be consigned to obscurity in proportion as responsible labor organizations take the leadership in the important task of coping with the critical situation."

THREE BODIES FOUND WITH WRECKAGE OF PLANE

LOS ANGELES, March 5—(AP)—The bodies of three aviators and the wreckage of their small biplane were found today on the ranch of Will Rogers, the comedian, in the Santa Monica mountains near here.

The plane apparently crashed into a hillside last night during a heavy rainstorm. Two caretakers of the ranch came upon the wreckage and the bodies.

The fliers were Morey Johnson, 28, a tailor and former airplane instructor; Eugene Lavoie, 28, airplane pilot and Milton Hogge, 35, also a pilot.

Johnson who owned the plane left an airport here late yesterday on a "ten minute ride" inviting Lavoie and Hogge to accompany him. R. B. Curtis, manager of the airport said that soon after the take off a heavy rainfall began. Johnson failed to return and Curtis said he presumed the flier had landed at another field.

The crash, investigators said, indicated that Johnson either was blinded by rain or was skimming the hill tops to get beneath the clouds and obtain visibility when he crashed into the knoll.

HEAD KEEPER OF AUBURN PRISON STABBED TO DEATH

AUBURN, N. Y., March 5—(AP)—Within sight of 43 guards and 875 prisoners, Principal Keeper Edward L. Beckwith, of Auburn prison, today was stabbed to death by a long term inmate impelled by a fancied grievance. Beckwith was the third principal keeper in three years to die through the fury of a convict.

Beckwith's assailant, Anthony Mortelito, 31, serving sentence of 20 years to life, was clubbed into submission in an instant after his flashing knife plunged four times into the officer's abdomen. He was dragged almost unconscious immediately to an observation cell to await full investigation.

Mortelito was sentenced at White Plains on May 31, 1922, by Supreme Court Justice Arthur S. Tompkins, after pleading guilty to a charge of murder, second degree, in the death of Paolo Letti, on February 25, the same year. He was received at Sing Sing prison June 2, 1922, and transferred to Auburn June 12. Prison officials said he would have ben eligible to parole in 1937 and that a deportation warrant was held against him. He is a native of Italy.

TAXPAYERS TO ASK FOR INVESTIGATION OF AFFAIRS

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, March 5.—The discontent among taxpayers of the town of Windham, converging on a public investigation of the administration, is now holding the spotlight of interest in the community.

New objectives are steadily creeping into the organization of a Taxpayers' Protective association in the town. With the original plan being to protest against a revaluation of the property in the town and against a proposal to maintain the 14-mill tax despite the increased valuations, the association now plans a probe into the affairs of the town government. Whether the organized taxpayers plan to dust up city affairs has not been determined, but is probable, as the taxpayers' association will now seek a more efficient and economical administration of town and city affairs in its present objective. The association hopes to halt the demands for larger and continually larger appropriations in the struggle to keep the tax rate nominal. The association plans, however, to stand back of any reasonable appropriations consistent with good government and progress.

Just how the taxpayers hope to accomplish their objectives is expected to be clarified at a meeting to be held in the Al-Pierre Tabarin next Friday evening at 8 o'clock. This meeting will be open to any taxpayer of real estate or personal property ownership. At this gathering the powder will be primed for the fireworks at the special town meeting to be held in the town hall next Monday night when the voters will be asked to levy a tax rate to meet the town budget of $402,700. The tax will be laid on the revised grand list amounting to over 23 million dollars.

Committees to cooperate with other organizations in sponsoring a series of concerts by the Knights of Columbus Boys' band this season, assisting in the Boy Scout movement and joining other organizations for the proposed Community week, were authorized at a meeting of Gold Star post No. 1724, Veterans of Foreign Wars, held in G. A. R. hall Tuesday evening. Commander James J. Lee is to name these respective committees in the near future. During the meeting, Dr. Charles A. Jenkins was elected post surgeon to succeed to Dr. W. P. S. Keating, who is now surgeon at Fitch's home in Noroton Heights. Dr. Keating's work among the veterans here was mentioned in several talks. Among the guests were Comrade Phanestol, department Inspector; Comrade Irilndi, commander of Murphy-Rathbun post of New London; Comrade Perrone, member of the council of administration, and Comrade Moon, department deputy chief of staff.

Arline E. Rivers

Arline E. Rivers died at the Mansfield State Hospital and Training school Tuesday night. She was born in Willimantic, July 24, 1916, a daughter of Delphis and Lillian Holten Rivers. The deceased leaves her parents, one brother, Harold Rivers, and a sister, Mildred Rivers, of this city.

Robert C. Deming, director of adult education for the state board of education, gave some interesting facts of this work at the meeting of the Woman's club held in the Model school auditorium Tuesday with Mrs. Albert B. Smith as chairman for the afternoon. Mr. Deming said that of the 12,000 non-English speaking people who registered for adult education in the state this year, a large majority were foreign born. There are 23 local directors paid partly by the state and partly by the towns. Windham has no paid director but Mr. Deming paid high tribute to the work of the evening school and especially its principal, Lawrence King. Some ten years ago there were 67,303 illiterates in the state, mostly foreign born. Today fourteenths of one per cent are illiterate and the number is steadily decreasing. The fact that 68 per cent of the population of Connecticut is foreign born indicates the amount of work necessary in adult education.

COLCHESTER

TOWN MEETING LAYS TAX OF 33 MILLS TO MEET BUDGET

(Special to The Bulletin.)

COLCHESTER, March 5—A fair sized crowd was in attendance Wednesday afternoon at the adjourned town meeting in grange hall. Samuel P. Willard was chariman and John Condren was clerk. It was voted to lay a thirty-three mill tax to cover the expenses of the town for the ensuing year, 17 mills to be payable in April and 16 mills in August. This is an increase of four mills, the town tax rate for last year being twenty-nine mills. The final grand list figure as approved by the board of relief is $1,565,314, an increase of $47,716 over the 1028 grand list of $1,517,598.

The town budget as approved at the town meeting Oct. 7, 1929 was $59,653, which included the school expense estimate of $33,043. At this October meeting $1,000 was voted added to the budget to cover payment on a bond of $5,000 due March 1, 1930, and $500 was voted added to the budget to cover expense of indexing the town probate records. At a special meeting held October 31 it was voted to add $1,275 to the budget to cover expense of repairing and rebuilding three bridges on the so-called "river road" in the Westchester section of town. At a special meeting held Nov. 13 it was voted to add $1,000 to the budget to cover extra compensation to the assessors for their services in connection with the recent revaluation survey of the taxable property in the town. These additions bring the budget total up to $63,428. Of this amount $51,528 must be raised by taxation and for which the 33 mill tax was laid.

Some of the reasons for the need of a higher tax for the coming year are that the town receives less school aid money from the state this year than in the past, due to the fact that the state has instituted a new system of apportionment whereby the amount to be granted each town is now based on the net expenses of the town instead of being based only on the amount of the town school expenses as in the past. Then, too, the extra expenditures voted at the several town meetings above mentioned have increased the budget considerably.

It was brought out at the meeting today that Feb. 28, 1930 the town had $23,251 in property taxes and $2,506 personal taxes still unpaid. Several of those present spoke of the need of devising some way of collecting these back taxes but as usual nothing was done to relieve the situation.

The Vechinsky car was leaving the New London road to enter the Parum road when the other machine is said to have attempted to pass to the left and in so doing crashed into the left side of the Vechinski car. The front end of the Oakland was considerably damaged and the side of the Chevrolet was demolished. It was estimated that $125 damage was done the Colchester car. Vechinski suffered several bruises and a wrenched arm and the occupants of both cars were badly shaken up. During October a woman in Montana wrote—"My first bottle of Kruschen Salts lasted almost 4 weeks and during that time I lost 19 pounds of fat—Kruschen is all you claim for it —I feel better than I have for years."

Here's the recipe that banishes fat and brings into blossom all the natural attractiveness that every woman possesses.

Every morning take one-half teaspoonful of Kruschen Salts in a glass of hot water before breakfast.

Be sure and do this every morning for "It's the little daily dose that takes off the fat"—Don't miss a morning. The Kruschen habit means that every particle of poisonous waste matter and harmful acids and gases are expelled from the system.

At the same time the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels are toned up and the pure, fresh blood containing Nature's six life-giving salts are carried to every organ, gland, nerve and fibre of the body and this is followed by "that Kruschen feeling" of energetic health and activity that is reflected in bright eyes, clear skin, cheerful vitality and charming figure.

If you want to lose fat with speed get an 85c bottle of Kruschen Salts from Lee & Osgood Co. or any live druggist anywhere in America with the distinct understanding that you must be satisfied with results or money back.

DANIELSON

HOPKINS FOUND GUILTY AND TAKES AN APPEAL

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, March 5—Two sessions of the town court were necessary today to hear all that witnesses had to say during the hearing of charges against Raymond Hopkins of East Killingly. He was charged with trapping illegally, during February, and also with adultery. Attorneys L. A. Wolsard of Danielson and Irving H. Miron of Putnam were counsel for the accused.

At this morning's session the hearing started with the taking of testimony relative to an allegation that Hopkins trapped a skunk illegally during February. He had entered a plea of not guilty. Deacon J. Albert Brooks of East Killingly, as the first witness for the state, testified that on the morning that Hopkins is alleged to have trapped the skunk he met him coming along the road with a package and that there was a strong odor of skunk in the vicinity. Only one pair of footprints showed in the snow from the direction in which Hopkins came. County Game Warden Daniels of Plainfield and Special Investigator James Healey both testified to followingn the tracks alleged to have been made by Hopkins and of coming upon a trap near which there was blood. There was skunk hair on the trap they testified. Following the tracks farther they came upon a baited figure four trap. The following day Game Warden Daniels accosted Hopkins as the latter was returning to his home and took from him a bag containing parts for a figure four trap and also pieces of meat claimed by the state to have been for baiting traps.

The hearing went on at length and at its close Judge W. Fenner Woodward found Hopkins guilty and fined him $25 and costs. An appeal was taken.

In the adultery charge against Hopkins, Mrs. Alice LaPointe testified as to her relations with the accused. She was brought here to testify from the state farm for women at Niantic, where she was sent last month after pleading guilty to an adultery charge in which Hopkins also was alleged to have been involved. Her testimony today accusing Hopkins was corroborated by her daughter, a girl of 19. The case against Hopkins had been continued from last month. Judge Woodward found Hopkins guilty on the adultery charge and sentenced him to servo 90 days in jail. Again Hopkins' counsel appealed. In the illegal trapping matter bond was fixed at $100, in the other at $500, the sums being furnished by Hopkins' father, George H. Hopkins.

King George Jacques of East Killingly has acquired a little kingdom of his own up in the Eadie Pray reservoir section of the town, where he was born, nearly four score years ago. In a recent purchase he has acquired about 200 acres of land from Clinton Shippee. This land surrounds the reservoir, one of several in that section of the town, and King George now controls the body of water, excepting for flowage rights.

"I had a hankering to own those acres," King George said this afternoon, "for I played over them as a little boy, having been born atop the hillside nearby."

King George, always a great outdoors and sportsman, plans to build a little hunting lodge on the shores of the reservoir, and there he will welcome his friends, and beguile them with his narrations about many things, as he can do as no other can. The land is quite heavily wooded in some sections, affording good hunting ground, and there is also a cranberry bog on the property that yields about 100 bushels each year.

Belated arrivals of operators' licenses are noted every day, and the presumption is that most people now driving automobiles in this area are supplied with one. However, this is likely to be a matter of investigation by the state police within a few days, when they go about their frequent checking up of machines, as to lights and brakes, and as to registrations, etc.

John J. Cody, the Winsted broker, who pleaded guilty to a charge of embezzlement yesterday in the superior court for Litchfield county at Litchfield and was sentenced to serve from two to three years in the state prison, was an automobile salesman here a dozen years ago.

Since leaving Danielson he has lived in Hartford and other cities in the central section of the state and became quite well known as a securities salesman. He was arrested in early February following the closing of a brokerage office he had established in Winsted and after examiners from the state banking commissioner's office had gone over his office records.

Before his arrest Cody had filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy in the federal court in New Haven, listing his assets as approximately $30,000 and his liabilities as about $80,000. The creditors who will lose through the collapse of his business are mostly residents of Winsted and Torrington.

Cody is about 40 years of age and is married. There were five counts charging embezzlement in the complaint against him, but he was allowed to plead guilty to one. One of his customers was a clergyman, who stands to lose about $13,000.

State officers today continued an investigation, which they hope will lead to an arrest in connection with the mutilation of two dogs owned by Roscoe Ashley of East Franklin street. Of interest to the officers in their checkup was a trail of blood along the route which at least one of the dogs took in returning to the Ashley home after being slashed, either with a sharp knife or razor, it is believed. The officers today had obtained what appeared to be promising leads that may eventually lead to an arrest.

The adjourned annual town meeting is scheduled for next Wednesday evening, March 12, instead of next Monday evening, as stated in this column this morning.

Members of the board of selectmen held a regular monthly meeting at their offices in the town hall building this afternoon, passing upon routine matters and making ready for the coming adjourned annual town meeting.

Alanson Colvin, whose parental home here, has been busy throughout the winter at Charlestown, R. I., with his aviation activities. Mr. Colvin owns two planes, ving instruction to student flyers and also sells planes. He has been flying the past two years.

Because of frozen surfaces selectmen of the town have been able to do little toward scraping dirt roads to remove the deep ruts that line them in many places, but this work is to be done at first opportunity.

The fact that only ten days remain for filing income tax returns is the means of many hustling with this matter. It so happens that numbers who have paid income taxes in recent years find that, for one reason or another, they will not have to pay this year, though making the usual return.

SELLING A LUNCH CAR HAS INTERESTING PHASES

A few weeks ago a local man advertised in The Bulletin that he had a lunch car for sale. The car had not been operated as a feed depot for over a year, but was being used as a shoe shine parlor. Within a day or so prospective customers began to arrive. The first man balked, for the reason that although built like a car, there were no wheels under it. The next man came from Westerly; he had visions of starting a fish market, but failed to make a dicker. No. 3 found the accommodations too small. Another man tried hard with the owner of the land to arrange for a lease, it being his intention to change the car into a flower store. With all these failures of bargain or sale, the advertisement kept working just the same, with the result that last week a man showed up who wanted to own the car. Waiving all difficulties of no wheels, too big, no lease, he paid the advertiser his price, took the car apart, brought a big truck, and carried the car away, leaving the place where it stood as bare as a board. The shoe shine man cleaned up the whole business for 72 cents, the cost of the advertisement. He was so pleased that he offered the man who handled the advertising part a perfectly good $2 bill. But, like Amos, when he was obliged to part with his dog, the money was refused.

Miss Elizabeth Dealy of Manchester, N. H., owner of the one-time Maple Leaf shoppe, is moving from the Liberty Hall block. Since going out of business here some ten years ago, the remainder of her stock was stored in rooms which she rented in this block. A recent fire destroyed a considerable part of the merchandise. Now, following a settlement with the insurance company, she has turned in her key. Charles Arabik, the owner of the block, will make two rooms on the second story, with other alterations.

PUTNAM

COUNCIL VOTES FOR NEW 2-HOUR PARKING REGULATION

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, March 5—Absolute harmony reigned in the council Tuesday evening when a bill providing for two hour parking in the down town section was introduced by Robert T. Chadwick, alderman from ward 1, and passed by an unanimous vote. The new regulation will be in effect within a week. Violators of the new act shall subject themselves to a fine of $10, which is provided in an enforcement clause in the act. The form was drawn up by Corporation Counsel Ernest C. Morse. Alderman Chadwick asserted that since teeth have been put into the new parking laws, it will be the intention of the police department to enforce them. In commenting on the traffic situation, Alderman Chadwick paid the new police department a compliment for the polite and efficient manner it has been carrying out its duties in respect to the parking laws.

Postmaster Archibald Macdonald appeared before the council requesting that the body take steps to keep Union street in the rear of the post office clear in order that the thoroughfare might be accessible to the large mail vans of the New England Transportation company now delivering mails between New London and Worcester. Mail trucks arrive in this city at 7:30 and remain until 10 o'clock. During this time mails are unloaded and loaded. The vans are unable to get to the post office and the only alternative being the platform at the depot in Union square, this requires that the bags be carted from the station to the post office. The practice has been deemed dangerous by post office officials and the postmaster general has asked for an explanation of the inability of the trucks to transact business at the post office.

After much discussion, a few of the aldermen not in accord with the proposition wished to know why the New Haven railroad after revoking service on the rails can be empowered to take over city streets. One councilman asserted that if the mails were placed back on the rails where they rightfully belonged the situation would work out its own salvation. It was finally agreed that the police committee and the captain of police would confer with postal inspectors and investigate.

The Eagle hose wagon at the Smith street fire station in the north end of the city has been equipped with pneumatic tires at a cost of $430. While Fire Chief R. E. Thurston was deeply affected by the attempt to partially recondition the truck for service, the fire committee is of the opinion that the firewagon is much safer than it was before the solid rubber tires were removed. Chief Thurston in speaking of the No. 2 truck said, "It's less than a piece of junk on wheels." The chief's comment stirred a bit of laughter within the aldermanic circle, but elicited no support in a movement to secure a new piece of fire apparatus.

The police committee reported that new equipment for the police department has been purchased. The purchase order includes a strait-jacket—stretcher of the latest type, office supplies and furniture and additional personal equipment for the patrolmen.

A petition presented by Clarence M. Kent of Quinebaug avenue requested that the city put a stretch of dirt road running in a southerly direction from the state road on lower Pomfret street, known as Quinebaug avenue in first class condition. The paper was signed by a score of persons who were property owners and professional men who find travel over the highway difficult because of the unlevel condition of the road. Alderman E. Migneault, chairman of the highway committee informed Mr. Kent that the city attends to the road each year in the spring time. Mr. Kent suggested that the road be gravelled and oiled, he being of the opinion that property owners along the route were entitled to this. Alderman Migneault recommended that the council consider such action, but intimated that a special appropriation would be needed to carry out prospective plans, since the highway department funds are insufficient to care for the improvement of Quinebaug avenue. The matter was referred to the committee to investigate.

Three requests for building permits were granted to property owners.

Following a verbal petition for the improvement of Tatem, George and Florence streets in the south end of the city, being entered to the council by former Mayor Archibald Macdonald, Sr., the highway committee announced that plans for the oiling of these streets are now being considered. The thoroughfares are short lanes running north off of Grove street. Mr. Migneault promised the former mayor that the street department will include the streets mentioned in his request in the list of streets to be oiled in the spring.

The police report for the month of February showe dthat 5 arrests were made during the month for the following causes: Bigamy 1; false pretenses 1; violation of the milk law 1; violation of the liquor laws 1; intoxication 1. Fines and costs collected amounted to $34.63. Fines imposed in cases where prisoners defaulted to jail amounted to $126.90.

A purchase order for five fire alarm boxes of the latest type was approved. The programme of putting in the quick action type boxes in place of the obsolete type has been carried out so efficiently that only five of the old type boxes will be in existence when the new shipment of stations are installed.

Acting Mayor Ames reported that Mayor Charles A. Richard is making a speedy recovery from his recent illness. The committee from the council called upon the chief executive, who was delighted with the visit and expressed his hope of being able to return to his duties within a few weeks. A motion was in order for an adjournment at 10:15 o'clock.

Installers of the Western Union telegraph agency are in this city this week engaged in the installation of simplex machines, for future use in the receiving and transmitting of messages. The new device is supplanting the familiar means of sending and receiving messages—the Morse key and sounder. Two machines will be in use here. It is expected that the work will be completed early next week.

It was announced Tuesday following a meeting of the board of trustees held in New York city that Halleck Lefferts, assistant headmaster of Thatcher school in California, would become headmaster of Pomfret school in Pomfret. Mr. Lefferts was named to succeed the late Dr. William Beach Olmstead, who died in December 1929. Bishop Arthur Selden Lloyd of the Protestant Episcopal church of New York, chairman of the board, stated that Mr. Lefferts appointment would become effective at the close of the present academic year.

Efforts of the minority stockholders of the Belding Hemingway Silk company, with a plant at Putnam, to effect a reorganization of the present management and its business methods, were in vain, it was announced yesterday following a meeting of the stockholders held at the company's offices in Watertown. The meeting of the stockholders was of interest to the people of this city, since the company's largest plant is located here. The present board of management was approved after lengthy questioning, despite the fact that there was opposition. The policies of the management of the past year were approved. Robert Kast, representing the minority stockholders proposed a stockholders committee be organized. In support of his proposition he offered proxies for 63,000 shares. The plan was defeated however when the management submitted proxies for 260,000 shares. It was disclosed that 33,000 shares of stock supporting the management was represented in person.

It was reported at the meeting yesterday that the company's thread manufacturing operations were unprofitable during the past year and that the research department is now working in quest of new lines to be adopted. At the Putnam plant thread is the largest item of manufacture.

The Lenten season was ushered in this morning with services at St. Mary's church. The ashes were administered to the congregation at a mass at 7:30 o'clock. The ceremony was repeated again this evening with a special Lenten devotion for those unable to attend the morning service.

There were several hundred revelers in attendance at Mardi Gras held Tuesday evening in the north end of the city. The local order of Eagles and the St. John Baptiste society were hosts at the pre-Lenten social events.

Miss Ethel Ellis has returned to this city from her home in Willimantic where she passed a month's sick leave from her duties at the Citizens National bank.

Raymond Van Dyke of Pomfret street left this week for Waterbury where he will make his home.

Henry Campbell for a number of years a lineman in the service of the Western Union Telegraph company, servicing stations between New London and Worcester has been transferred to Bridgeport. Mr. Campbell made his home in this city.

The local plant of the Connecticut Light and Power company have announced a lower electric service rate, available to business houses. The new rate was effective February 10 and places the commercial price of electricity at a decidedly lower mark to large consumers.

PROBING MERIDEN SCHOOL

Charges against the administration at the Meriden School for Boys have been increasing. They are of a nature that cannot be disregarded. If true, they reflect a condition which cannot be overlooked.

The need at the present time appears to be to determine whether they are based upon facts, whether they are the result of hearsay or whether they are the result of exaggeration and distortion of facts. In the opinion of the governor the time has come when something definite should be established. It is time to get down to brass tacks and with that end in view he has named a commission of three persons to make a thorough inquiry into the various charges, call witnesses, take testimony and learn what there is at the foundation of the allegations. From their investigation and recommendations it is to be expected that the governor will be supplied with data that will permit him to deal with the situation in such manner as is necessary.

Certainly there can be no justification for cruelty and brutality. It will be the duty of the commission to determine if such actually prevailed. They will be obliged to take into consideration more than the mere statements of those who have been told something. It will be their duty to find out what the circumstances actually were from both sides. If it is then found that the charges have been proven they will have occasion for placing the responsibility for the acts and in so doing uncover any conditions which may have existed.

This inquiry will be conducted independently of any that has been made or any that is underway. If it is found that the institution has been conducted against the intended policy, or in violation of what could be regarded as good judgment in an institution of that kind, it can be expected that action will be recommended and taken that will make such a thing impossible in the future.

The governor has unquestionably taken the proper course to get at the real facts in the charges and there are good reasons to expect that he will ably handle the situation when the commission reports.

MR. COOLIDGE'S ADVICE

While Ex-President Coolidge was dedicating the dam in Arizona which bears his name, he not only referred to the benefits which it was to bring to that section of the country in the irrigation of the desert but he took occasion to bring to the attention of all those directly concerned the importance of coming to an early agreement relative to the construction of Boulder dam.

This is another project in the southwest from which much is expected. Its possibilities have been fully recognized and provision has been made to meet the construction cost, but it has been impossible for the states interested to come to an agreement in regard to the distribution of benefits, so that the awarding of contracts and the start on construction has been held up. How long a delay this is going to cause is problematical, but the advice by Mr. Coolidge to "agree with thy adversaries quickly" might indicate that but for some sensible compromise it might be expected to drag along indefinitely.

The Boulder dam proposition has been before the country for a long time. Because the Colorado river flows through seven states they have an interest in the proposed development. Efforts were made to have them settle their differences before congress made any appropriation for the construction. Some progress was made but complete satisfaction was not obtained and now there is the unwillingness on the part of a few to see any start made until it is definitely known whether their demands are going to be complied with. It is something in the nature of a squeeze play, for while they have no immediate use for the water that will be impounded they are unwilling to see other states, through which the Colorado does not flow, benefiting from the water supply or the electric development, without assurances that they are going to be able to get what they think they ought to have when the time comes.

The unfortunate part of it all is that the delay is continuing the uncertainty of construction and results. It is pushing further into the future the time when the big dam will be affording the relief and help that is sought. Mr. Coolidge has endeavored to hasten a settlement.

ENCOURAGING TREE PLANTING

Some idea of the reaction of the people toward reforestation is furnished by the experience of the bureau of forestry in the state of Rhode Island, where special efforts have been underway for the past few years to make use of the otherwise idle land in that state.

This bureau has encouraged individuals and organizations to get the benefit of quantity purchases of trees by ordering them through the bureau. In the first year that the offer was made there were orders for about 100,000 trees handled. The next year a gain of 150 percent was disclosed, indicating that there was an appreciation not only of the opportunity to obtain the trees at a lower figure but of the idea of planting trees. The response was so encouraging that it is to be continued and the hope is that there will be a larger number of trees acquired in this manner and set out in that state this year.

In the planting of trees, the same as in many other efforts, it is a matter of educating those who should be interested. Other states go about it in somewhat similar manner but maintain their own nurseries from which to provide the trees and they have found an increasing enthusiasm among land owners. New York and Massachusetts are conspicuous examples of work of this character.

In spite of the wooded areas, the farm land, the numerous cities and settlements and the manufacturing establishments, there is an enormous amount of waste land in most of the states which could be put to excellent use in the growing of trees. It hasn't been getting much attention in past years because it hasn't been necessary. Timber was being produced in sufficient amount to meet requirements. It isn't so today. We have for years been cutting, using and wasting it faster than it could be grown and we have gotten to the point where greater production must be encouraged if provisions are to be made for the future. It isn't to be supposed that any of these eastern states will solve the problem. They are not in a position to do that. The owners of idle land are in a position to help meet the situation and to help themselves if they will but realize the possibilities of planting trees. That more and more are doing this each year is a good sign.

NO DOLE WANTED

While he doesn't deny that there is unemployment, Secretary of Labor Davis puts his stamp of disapproval on the suggestion made by Senator Brookhart that $50,000,000 be appropriated by the government for the purpose of feeding and clothing the unemployed.

The Iowa senator thinks that the situation prevailing should be met as if the unemployed had been residents of a flood region, the victims of a cyclone, an earthquake or pestilence, but the labor secretary points out that while unemployment is undesirable the situation is not one that calls for a dole. He insists that the American workman doesn't want alms, he wants honest employment.

Senator Brookhart is very much of a grandstand player. He is out to make a great name for himself and is anxious that the federal government should be rushed into the distribution of a large sum that would, according to the labor secretary, amount to only a dollar a week for about 17 weeks for the unemployed.

Unemployment has prevailed before in which much larger numbers were concerned without a resort to any such method. Through the efforts of President Hoover there is much employment now that might have been put off indefinitely but for his urgings. From now on the situation can be expected to improve. Certain leaders are assuring normalcy in two months. Local agencies for relief of those out of work and even state measures have by no means been exhausted. The secretary of labor insists that a far better contribution to the relief of the situation would be the devotion of the $50,000,000 to public building construction where workmen would be given the employment they seek. Many projects that have been awaiting favorable weather can be expected to have their effect upon the situation. The American people are certainly not ready for a federal dole.

FRUIT FLY CHARGES

It is easy to make charges but more difficulty is encountered in proving them. Thus while the claim has been made that the Mediterranean fruit fly, which has caused so much havoc and loss in the fruit raising area of Florida, and involved so much expense to the government, fruit growers and dealers, was planted, it is apparently going to be no easy task to produce the facts to prove it.

Florida has suffered from the fly. There is no question that it was there in too great numbers and added one more to the disasters experienced by Florida, but to the charges that the fly was planted there after a bill had been introduced in the legislature to abolish the state plant board and that government money has been wasted in fighting it, the Florida plant board commissioner enters an emphatic denial.

Even though any such board might see its job fading away through legislative action, it seems improbable that any member thereof would seek vengeance upon the fruit growers of that state. That would be as rank as any kind of vandalism that could be thought of. It would hardly jibe with what ought to be expected from those occupying a position of public trust intended to prevent that very thing.

How and why such stories are started is hard to tell. The Florida charges are under investigation and, regardless of the outcome, even if there is found nothing to support them, it will be difficult to convince some people to the contrary. On the other hand, should it be found that they are based upon facts, no stones should be left unturned until the responsible parties are properly penalized.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Have you stopped to figure out how soon you will be able to get out the 1930 straw hat?

It is reported that Mr. Hoover is in better health than when he took office. So much for his first year.

It must be maddening to the country people to think they've got to go all through the muddy season a second time this spring.

It may be a big relief to the senate if it can get the tariff off its chest this week, but it will be a bigger relief to the country.

Mr. Hoover's first year has shown that there are those ready to stand under the republican banner to get into office but once there they quickly become turncoats.

That young lady who took boxing lessons by mail to be able to knock out any masher who spoke to her and never had occasion to use it probably lacked a good press agent.

FRUSTRATED ESCAPE

Zoe reveled in the one-room kitchenette after she had settled her belongings. For the first time since she came to Chicago she lost that hideous sensation of being a forlorn wanderer. It was home again. How she had hated those boarding houses!

Zoe was essentially domestic in spite of the fact that she looked like a magazine cover girl.

The very first week she made two boxes of strawberry preserves by her mother's recipe and put pale green scalloped oilcloth on her ridiculously few pantry shelves. But the milk bottles at the opposite back door bothered her.

Instead of being taken in out of the hot sun sometimes they still stood there when she was getting her dinner at night. And the empty ones were set out unwashed. They made Zoe shudder to the depths of her sanitary soul. She decided she should not care to know the woman or girl who resided so untidily across the way. And so mysteriously—for there never was a glimpse of the tenant of haphazard housekeeping proclivities.

One morning when it was very hot Zoe rebelled at the sight of the chaste quart of milk and bottle of cream standing helpless under the boiling days of a July sun. Folding a newspaper tentwise she managed to shelter them and left for her day's work with a sense of satisfaction. That night the milk had been taken in and the paper was blowing apart all over the porch, as though it had been tossed aside by an indignant hand—probably the owner had been insulted by Zoe's tacit rebuke.

Piles of papers and magazines frequently appeared at that back door for the janitor to remove—not neat piles such as Zoe put out, carefully weighted down, but untidy heaps tossed down anyhow and left to flap and flop about in the breezes like lame ducks. Most of them were expensive magazines and once when a 50-cent one she always coveted had landed itself on her very doorstep, Zoe found herself irresistibly drawing it inside though her cheeks burned a bit. The act seemed so pauperish.

They burned more two weeks later when she found the next copy of that magazine leaning tipsily between her screen and the back door itself and she realized that the careless tenant must have seen what she had done.

There was one week when the daily bottles of milk piled up and spoiled in the sun and boiled over until Zoe could not endure it. Away on a vacation of some sort, the woman had neglected to notify the milkman. Zoe finally emptied them down her sink and made them sparkle with hot water and soapsuds. She liked to look out from her little kitchenette window with its orange and white ruffled curtains and see them glitter and was sorry when the milkman removed them.

An early delivery boy rang her back doorbell one morning and thrust in a package. "Chops," he stated. "Kin you stick 'em on ice? Can't rouse any one over there, and last time I left a steak on the step there was something doing! A cat got it, I guess."

Rather eagerly that night she walked over to the opposite back door, the chilled package of chops in her hand. She was frankly glad of the chance to view her untidy neighbor. The door popped open as her finger left the bell and Zoe and a tall man stared at one another. She was speechless with the surprise.

He was a person with a whimsical face, with eyes that twinkled, relled by a large, straight mouth and jaw which looked stubborn. He was the sort of man that one either liked on the spot or misunderstood. With one sweep he abstracted the package her limp fingers still extended.

"My chops," he informed her unnecessarily. "Hate eggs and thought I had to have 'em for my dinner. So you are the neat little housekeeper who has been struggling with my scandalous ways, are you? Do you know, I moved up here to get away from a mother and two sisters just like you who bothered me to death? I wanted freedom to be untidy—and you wouldn't let me have it! I keep all sorts of hours with my work, and if I wanted breakfast at 11 o'clock—why, I wanted it! But I guess it's no use!"

Which proved that even an arrived popular novelist can come out of his dream long enough to know when his hour has struck. And this particular one, looking at Zoe, standing there half afraid, wholly fascinated, was visioning the approach of a long life ahead of him carefully brushed, polished, ordered and on time. Somehow the prospect did not displease him in the least.—Exchange.

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, March 5— With something like 30 members of the senate, including Vice President Curtis, graduates of the house, remarks in the latter body comparing the relative importance of the two are to be taken with a considerable grain of salt.

It does not work both ways. Despite rigid rules against such practice, senators frequently manage to work in criticism of house methods just as house members do of the senate.

The late Theodore Burton of Ohio is the only man the Bystander recalls as having gone back from the senate to the house. And he, it will be recalled, hopped back to the senate at the first opportunity.

Many House Veterans

Eight states, Arkansas, Kentucky, Mississippi, Missouri, Texas, Vermont, Virginia and Washington now have in both senator men of previous house service.

Both party leaders in the senate, Watson of Indiana and Robinson of Arkansas, are house veterans.

A lot of the other figures in the senate, like Norris of Nebraska, Simmons of North Carolina, Glass and Swanson of Virginia, Sheppard of Texas, Ransdell of Louisiana, Gillett of Massachusetts and Harrison of Mississippi, got their first taste of Washington public life in the house.

Jack Garner, democratic leader in the house, pointed out the habit of "shooting up" the senate when an emergency bill to pay a senate office building upkeep deficit was up.

How It Works

"We have annually a discussion as to the cost of the United States senate per capita and draw attention to the fact that they are very extravagant, but we finally bow and say 'Take it along,' " he said, and the house laughed.

"How are you going to help it?" asked Will Wood, in charge of the measure.

"We could say 'no,' " said Garner.

"Here's the opportunity; let's see you perform," Wood challenged.

"I will vote against the appropriation," Garner answered, and Clarke of New York said he would do would do the same.

But that veteran, Snell of New York, caught them napping.

"This is a unanimous consent proposition, and all the gentleman has to do is to object," he grinned at Garner.

And this is how the Congressional Record puts down what followed:

"The Speaker: 'Is there objection?' (After a pause) 'The chair hears none' (Laughter)."

The thing went through without a record vote.

"The Meaning of Life"

SCRIPTURE: Memory Verse: "What is your life?" (James 4:14).

Read: James 4:13-17.

MEDITATION: This is the question of questions. It will engage us during this Lenten season. The answer we give to this question will determine the answer we give to all of our other questions. James does not answer it. To be sure, he gives a sort of answer. He says that it is a very transient thing, like a morning mist that the sun carries away. But to say that life is short does not tell us what it is. Precious things are often little things in space and time. Jewels are not large. The Bible nowhere defines life but it uses many symbols of life. The Book of Revelation calls it "a river of water." It springs from hidden depths, is replenished from the sky, and flows down its winding course making the valley green, quenching men's thirst and giving them life. The question for today is: What is your life?

PRAYER: O Thou, from whom life comes and to whom it returns, we thank Thee for our lives. Grant us to know better than we do life's divine meaning and majestic purposes, to the end that we may not live in vain but become Thy profitable servants. Amen.

YOUR INCOME TAX

No. 28

Bad debts constitute a considerable item in the returns of many taxpayers and may be treated in one of two ways—either by deduction from gross income in respect to debts ascertained to be worthless in whole or in part or by reduction from a reasonable reserve for bad debts.

Permission to adopt the reserve method is limited to taxpayers having a large number of accounts where credit has been extended to cover a considerable portion of time. It is not granted for the purpose of handling one specific debt.

What constitutes a "reasonable addition" to a reserve for bad debts must be determined in light of the facts, and will vary as between classes of business and with conditions of business prosperity. A taxpayer using the reserve method should show in his return the volume of charge sales (or other business transactions) for the year, and the percentage of the reserve to such amount, the total amount of notes and accounts receivable at the beginning and end of the taxable year, and the total amount of debts ascertained to be worthless and charged against the reserve during the taxable year.

Cause And Prevention Of Typhoid Fever

By Matthias Nicoll, Jr., M. D., Albany.
(From Gorgas Memorial Institute)

Typhoid fever is caused by a germ, the typhoid bacillus. This germ is always taken through the mouth, by close personal contact, contaminated water or milk, impure foods or unclean fingers. Like all such organisms it is very small. A glass of water may contain millions of typhoid bacilli and yet be clear to the eye and good to the taste. The germs live and multiply in the human body, and generally choose the small intestine, the gall-bladder or the liver, so that the discharges from typhoid cases and carriers are exceedingly dangerous.

The source of typhoid fever is always a human being. It may be a person suffering with the disease or it may be a carrier. A typhoid carrier is a person with typhoid germs in the body, although he shows no symptoms of the disease. Some carriers discharge large numbers of typhoid bacilli regularly through the intestines. There is approximately one carrier in every community of 10,000 people. Therefore sewage from such a community is likely to contain typhoid fever bacilli. Food may carry infection if handled by a typhoid carrier, patient, or person attending the patient. But the germs are readily killed by sufficient heat in cooking, boiling, or pasteurization. In water they are killed by suitable amounts of chlorine.

Typhoid fever is infectious, but a person can protect himself against it by living in a community with a safe, properly supervised water supply, an adequately inspected pasteurized milk supply, and by being immunized against the disease with typhoid vaccine,—a harmless, relatively painless procedure. The duration and the degree of immunity cannot be exactly determined. The United States army requires revaccination at each re-enlistment, every three years, until the age of forty-five. Proper sewage disposal is most important in protecting drinking water supplies and preventing transmission of the disease by flies. Toilets, cesspools, and sewers must be kept in a sanitary condition. An outside toilet should be built so that flies cannot reach the content, and located so that drainage shall be at least one hundred feet away from the well or other water supply.

The course and after effects of typhoid are greatly influenced by prompt and skillful medical and nursing care. The physician in charge of a case is required to report it to the local health officer. He should tell the nurse how to disinfect and dispose of the patient's bodily discharges, and explain to the other members of the household how to prevent the spread of the disease, as well as the benefit of vaccine. The patient must be isolated until recovered, to prevent others contracting the disease through "contact" or through food possibly infected by an attendant. The likelihood of such contact-infection is very much lessened if the person in care of the patient and members of the household are given typhoid vaccine promptly.

While typhoid fever is much less prevalent than in former years it continues to cause suffering and expense. It generally lasts about a month, and the average victim, if he recovers, is kept from his regular duties for a period of six to eight weeks. If everyone were regularly vaccinated, there would be nothing to fear from the disease.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

The Old Brewster Home

The Editor,
Norwich Bulletin,
Norwich, Connecticut.

Mr. Editor: One of the pleasantest memories of my childhood days is that of a visit to the old Brewster Place, "Hillside Farm," just outside of Norwich, across the cove from Poquetanuck, and in later years, where I spent so many happy days, during various journeys there, it became very dear to my heart.

Only shortly before it was destroyed by fire last year, a lyrical poem was written, on a night long after I had retired. The words having become a haunting presence, I finally got up and started the writing of them down, with the result they were finished before morning and have been changed but little since. It is the story which was in my mind's eye that night.

One of the dreams of my life was to go back, some day, again and live in the peaceful atmosphere of the old house, so beautifully situated on the hillside, above Poquetanuck cove, as we called it, among those beautiful old New England hills.

There lived my cousins, "The Brewsters," for many generations and in the quaint old parlor of those days, I first heard "Ben Bolt," "Silver Threads Among The Gold," and "Maggie." What more appropriate setting could one ask for?

I have never known a more restful spot for a tired soul to rest, than there. A subtle presence seemed to fill the place, giving it an added charm; an indescribable, intangible something, as the ghosts of bygone days, perhaps, it would seem, again inhabited the house and quaint, prim crinolined ladies with bonnets and paisley shawls and powdered wigs and perukes, came to sit once more on the old fashioned hair sofas and rosewood fiddle-back chairs; looking into the guilded mirrors at the reflection of days long since passed, they saw there. I think they also often went up the long back stairway, leading to the attic above, where they opened the old trunks and took out again their old gowns of satin, ribbon and lace, of other days; chatting and talking as though in great confidence, in low tones, telling a choice bit of gossip now and then, fussing a bit with their hoops and bustles, then hurrying away back down the stairs as others of another generation would come in.

At times, it seemed I heard the soft hum of an old spinning-wheel with a crooning song and I'm quite sure an old melodian or spinnet accompanied a soft, lilting voice.

In the great old chimney, the swallows had built their nests and ofttimes in the evening, during the summer at the sunset hour, I watched them circling, circling, then dropping one by one, out of sight, into its darkness.

In springtime, we used to row down to the tiny little islands in the cove, just below the old house and gather trailing arbutus with violets and other early flowers, among them the pure white ones, known as innocence, which covered the hillside so very early in the year.

Autumn, at the old place, was an experience, never to be forgotten. The gorgeous colorings of the leaves on the trees as well as vines that covered the old stone walls. The ripening fruit and sweet smell of herbs, filling the air everywhere with their pungent perfumes. The long dreamy days of gentle rain and soft patter at night of it on the roof, will never be forgotten.

My life has been that of a traveler, much of the time and I have known and lived in many beautiful places but my great desire had ever been to go back to "The Old House on the Hill," someday. Now that it is gone, the verses will be much as a requiem to it's clinging memories

For I see it again, like a ship at tide,
An old white house on a green hill-

Prohibition Reform

Mr. Editor: The Women's Organization for National Prohibition Reform is being organized in Connecticut and we feel that any woman who believes as we do that prohibition is working a great injury to the cause of temperance and has produced an increase in crime, lawlessness, etc., should have a chance to become a member of this organization.

To enable all women of the state to affiliate themselves with this movement, if they so desire, the Connecticut organization is distributing cards to be returned to headquarters, giving the name and address of the woman enrolling and above which signature appears the printed reasons for joining the organization as follows:

Because I believe that national prohibition has increased crime, lawlessness, hypocrisy and corruption, and because I believe that the cause of real temperance has been retarded, I enroll as a member of this organization which is working for some change in the law to bring about a sane solution of the problem.

On the card is printed also the names of the temporary officers of the organization in Connecticut. They are as follows: Mrs. Lucius F. Robinson, Jr., of Hartford, chairman; Miss Eva Hoyt, of Stamford, secretary, and Mrs. Wilmarth Lewis of Farmington, treasurer.

A note on the card reads: "There are no dues. The work of the organization is financed by voluntary contribution. Any amount, however small, will be gratefully received. Checks should be made payable to Mrs. Wilmarth Lewis, treasurer, Farmington, Conn.

MRS. STUART CLEMENT,
Assistant Secretary.
New Haven, March 4, 1930.

Liquor.

Mr. Editor: The alacrity with which most convicted offenders of the liquor law, walk up to the desk and deposit the amount of their fine be it large or small, to the uninitiated may seem passing strange, but to the wise not so. This fact alone is prima-facie evidence that the ultimate consumer—in this city at least—is attending to, and getting his per capita share, apportioned by the very advocates of the law. No allowance is made for the vast amount smuggled over the international border, of deposit by rum runners on our coast line, no figures for amount made, sold and consumed, within the confines of this and other cities throughout the land. As babes in arms, and children under parental control, are not on the addict list, it is reasonable to suppose that old timers are getting in excess of their per capita share of liquor released by government permit or through activities of the smugglers.

For COLDS

We all catch colds and they can make us miserable; but yours needn't last long if you will do this: Take two or three tablets of Bayer Aspirin just as soon as possible after a cold starts. Stay in the house if you can—keep warm. Repeat with another tablet or two of Bayer Aspirin every three or four hours, if those symptoms of cold persist. Take a good laxative when you retire, and keep bowels open. If throat is sore, dissolve three tablets in a quarter-glassful of water and gargle. This soothes inflammation and reduces infection. There is nothing like Bayer Aspirin for a cold, or sore throat. And it relieves aches and pains almost instantly. The genuine tablets, marked Bayer, are absolutely harmless to the heart.

FREE ACADEMY OFFICE BREAK NETS $150

About $150 in cash, two fountain pens and a coat were stolen from the office of the Norwich Free Academy several days ago. The money stolen is understood to have been receipts received at the lunch counter conducted at the school and was left at the office for safe keeping. The coat is owned by a clerk in the office, it is said.

Information concerning the break is meagre. Police officials and those in authority at the Academy are noncommittal on the subject. Chief George Linton, when called by telephone Wednesday evening, refused to discuss the break. Principal Henry A. Tirrell likewise declined to comment and his reply to questioning was "I'd rather not discuss the matter."

It is thought that the robbery was perpetrated by someone familiar with the building, inasmuch as a chisel, which is believed to have been used by the thief and which was found afterwards on the premises, is of the same make that is used at the manual training room at the school, it is said.

NEW GAS CONTAINER AT THE G. AND E. PLANT

Work upon the erection of a new gas container, to be located at the plant of the Norwich gas and electrical department on North Main street, has been started and is expected to be completed by the middle of August. The present container, which has a capacity of half a million cubic feet, is inadequate to take care of the needs of the city. It has been found by the department, so the new holder is deemed necessary. The gas output several weeks ago was 769,000 cubic feet, which was more than the present tank holds. The new container will also afford an emergency supply, which is not available now.

GAVE LECTURE ON SILVER AT FAITH TRUMBULL CHAPTER MEETING

A lecture on the History and Romance of Silver by Joseph D. Little, superintendent of the International Silver company exhibit at New York city, and a highly interesting paper on The Way to The Burial Ground, by Mrs. Elisha E. Rogers, featured the March meeting of Faith Trumbull chapter, D. A. R., Inc., Wednesday afternoon at the Masonic Temple. The meeting was presided over by the regent, Mrs. Albert M. Van Wagenen, and opened at 3 o'clock with the salute to the flag, the Lord's Prayer and the singing of America. Mrs. Albert J. Bailey was the leader in the singing and Miss Annie E. Vaughn presided at the piano. The reports of the secretary and treasurer were given as were reports by the various committee chairmen. One new member, Mrs. Myles Mann, was present at the meeting and one new application, that of Mrs. Myles E. Standish, was received.

Announcement was made that the annual state conference will be held March 20 and 21st. Mrs. Frank I. Royce, chairman of the patriotic educational committee [illegible] Hindman school, Kentucky, acknowledging receipt of a box of clothing valued at $25.

There were two five minute papers, one on the Monroe Doctrine by Miss Nancy Lucas and another on The Way to the Burial Ground, by Mrs. Elisha E. Rogers. Mrs. Rogers, in her paper, made an appeal to the D. A. R. for the preservation of the first burial ground at Bean Hill

Mrs. Rogers' paper follows:

"The chapter board has asked me to give a five minute talk on the First Burial Place of Norwich, Connecticut, and while I am glad of the opportunity of bringing this matter before you, five minutes is a very short time for this important subject. So if I overstep the time limit, the regent must remind me that "time's up", just as our president-general at our national conventions, snaps the platform steps lights off and on to warn the speaker of the time limit. (And some of the speakers heed the signal and some do not).

This first burial place is of vital importance at this time when Connecticut is preparing to celebrate her tercentenary. Here in this sacred ground, rest not only some of the founders of Norwich, and her early settlers, but here lies also Major John Mason, who was an outstanding figure in the colony of Connecticut before the town of Norwich existed.

My interest began years ago and for purely personal and family reasons; my husband's great grandfather purchased of Aaron Cleveland, ancestor of the late Ex-President Grover Cleveland, the house and lot which was the front or street part of the Thomas Post home lot; the place remained in the family for a hundred years, and it was during many pleasant visits at this home that my attention was attracted to the monument in the lot back of the house, then to the burial place and to the Edgerton home lot, adjoining.

I took notes and gathered bits of information; later, when I was drawn into genealogical work, I had frequent use for these notes and added to them. It was at my suggestion that Dr. Dwight Tracy photographed the four sides of the monument, and many of these pictures have been sent over the country.

Visits have been made to this spot with descendants from Boston to California, and these descendants have liked to take snap shots of their party at the monument.

One of these pictures shown today, is that of an old friend of our regent's, from her home town of Watertown, New York.

Report Made to Society

When this historic place and even the monument erected in memory of the founders of the town and to Major John Mason, appeared in jeopardy, at the request of the Society of the Founders of Norwich, Conn., I supplemented what material I had already gathered, by an exhaustive search of the town records, and clearly traced the various deeds in which this burial spot was mentioned. The result of this search was embodied in a report made to the society in September 1929. A copy of this report was given by the society to the first selectmen of the town, in October.

Those of you who have read the letters and articles which have appeared in The Norwich Bulletin, are somewhat familiar with the efforts made to locate exactly and to preserve this burial place, so today, let us consider another phase of the subject, that of the way to the burial place.

The town of Norwich was purchased in June, 1659; the town street, little more than a cart path, was laid out, and the home lots were allotted along this road, with provision for a meeting house lot and a home for the minister. But as most of these home lots were laid out in November, 1659, it may well be believed that the building of houses and settling of families did not come till the following year.

The living must necessarily be provided for first. The first recorded death in the town was that of Mary, wife of Thomas Post in March, 1661; no common burial place had been provided as yet, so she was laid to rest in her husband's home lot.

In September, 1661, little Hannah Rockwell, three years old, died and there may have been others of whom we have no record, who died this year, and the town recognized that a burial place must be provided. As the home lots, occupied all the frontage on the town street, and all the rest was primeval wilderness, any burial place must necessarily be in the rear of a home lot.

Even in 1700 when the second burial place was secured, it was, and still is, in the rear of the home lots and is reached by a lane.

In December, 1661, the town purchased of Thomas Post a piece of land for a common or town burial spot, and a right of way leading to it.

In November, 1662, baby William Gager died and although the burial place was just over in the next lot, was it not natural that the mother should want her baby to rest in Gager ground, but close to where Mrs. Post was buried, and so form the nucleus to the Gager part of the common ground.

The years passed; Samuel Gager removed to the New Concord parish, now Bozrah, and died in 1740. He was buried on the Gager side of the burial ground, his gravestone stating that he lay by the side of his parents. This gravestone, or parts of it, remained till about 1839; and will be mentioned later.

The son Simon Gager, succeeded to this home lot, but he too, lived in Bozrah, and rented the Gager house and land.

The John Abell House

In 1758 and 1762, this Simon Gager sold to John Abell who was then living in the old Gager house, the land on which stands what was long known as Adam's Tavern, and the present Frever lot adjoining, and before 1767, Abell built his house here.

In November, 1767, Simon Gager sold to Ezekiel Barrett, some land adjoining John Abell's and here Barrett built the house later owned by the Lyman Lees and now by the Sterrys.

But this land did not touch the town street, so Gager sold him also, a right of way from the town street to the house lot, a way that "is to lye open forever"; in later deeds, this is called Barrett lane.

In 1775, Joseph Post, grandson of the original proprietor, Thomas Post, sold to this Barrett, that part of the Post home lot on which the town burial place was located, the deed expressly stating that from this, there is excluded about 32 rods of land within the said bounds belonging to the town of Norwich, being the old burying ground, with liberty of a pentway across my other land, from the town street to the above bargained premises to pass and repass.

But Barrett's house lot and lane did not touch this Post land at any point, for Simon Gager still owned an intervening strip, so Barrett must go from his house down his lane to the town street, and then go up the old right of way to reach his newly acquired purchase.

In 1784 and 1791, Barrett secures this strip of land and can now go directly across from his house to his Post lot. He no longer needs the old right of way.

The occasional visitor to the burial place naturally preferred the clear, open lane to the overgrown path, so the original right of way granted to the town in 1661, fell into disuse and was forgotten.

Barrett lane did not go clear up to the burial place, but rather than have the lane another path almost parallel both used, Barrett evidently allowed the townspeople to cross from the head of the lane over his driveway, past the barn and so to the burial place. When the Barrett heirs sold this property in 1838, it was subject to a passway and right of passing and repassing from the road, by the house, to a burying ground in such way and manner as heretofore has been used and all such right of passway as existed at the time of the death of said Barrett.

When the Lyman Lees became owners of the property in 1853, the same exception was made, and the county map of 1854, shows this burial place.

In 1859, at the time the bi-centennial of Norwich was held, the erection of a monument to Major John Mason was planned but not executed. In April, 1871, the present monument to the founders of Norwich and to Major Mason, was erected, in what was supposed to be part of the ancient burial place. Mr. Lee, however, seems to have claimed that it was on his land entirely and not in the burial place, so on Feb. 12, 1872, the corporators of the Mason Monument association purchased of Mr. Lee, 15 feet square of land, in the center of which stood the monument, with a right of way to it, over the existing traveled path, in and over the lands of the grantor and adjacent to the old burying ground.

Mr. Lee, then, must have known very nearly the exact bounds of the burying ground, and its location is corroborated by the map of 1854.

This explains also, why the cobblestone posts and the gateway were set so far to the eastward at the time of the 250th anniversary of the founding of the town.

The Right of Way

On November 7, 1929, the Mason Monument association, which is simply and solely an association of townspeople representing the town, relinquished this right of way in exchange for a right over the new road leading past the monument. This new way is a great improvement over the one formerly used, and is more nearly parallel with the original right of way to the burial place, granted in December, 1661.

One of the vital points in locating exactly the burial place has been the gravestone of Samuel Gager, previously mentioned. The inscription on the stone was copied about 1825, and the stone, though broken, was in existence after 1839.

This is the only gravestone in the place, of which there is any record. Mr. William R. Case, whose grandfather Samuel Case, had owned the Gager part of the burial ground from 1839 to 1844, was shown this spot when a boy. The accompanying photographs show Mr. Case standing on this spot.

Supporting this statement is a letter published in The Norwich Millenium, the record of the 250th anniversary of Norwich, on page 198.

"Letters from Absentees. Among the replies from absent sons and daughters received by the committee on invitations the following were printed in The Norwich Bulletin:

Washington, D. C.

Mr. William H. Shields, Norwich, Conn.

Dear Sir:—

Being a native of Norwich, and too feeble to attend the coming celebration, I respectfully collcit one of the beautifully illustrated invitations of the 250th anniversary of Norwich Town, the dearest spot on earth to me, which I wish to have framed and hung beside a picture of my mother.

I was born at Bean Hill, June 26, 1823. My parents were Capt. Thomas D. Winship and Phila Yale Winship, his wife. In my childhood I used to visit my father's aunt, Mrs. Barrett, who lived aside from the main road to Bean Hill. Adjoining their home was a field where I romped and played. A lone grave was there and I used to visit it with childish sympathy as aunt told me "A man was buried there years ago".

I thought he was without friends or home or he would have been buried in the cemetery, and it was not until I heard a memorial was to be placed there did I know it was the grave of the heroic John Mason, who fought in the first war in the colonies. All honor to the patriotic citizens of Norwich for commemorating his memory. I would like to lay a fresh garland of flowers on his monument in my eighty-seventh year, as I did on his lone grave in childhood, if I could be there.

Hoping the weather will be propitious and the celebration a success,

I am yours respectfully,

Mrs. Sarah F. Woodworth."

506 Rhode Island ave.

It is not surprising that Mrs. Woodworth should have confused this lone grave, in connection with the erection of the monument, with that of Major Mason. The fact remains that, born on Bean Hill in 1823, she was familiar as a child, with the Gager grave, whose location had been pointed out to Mr. Case. Nor do we like to feel that Mrs. Woodworth was an entire stranger, as she was grandaunt to Mrs. Samuel B. Case, one of our former members.

You are all earnestly urged to walk or drive up the way to the monument and burial place, examine it from all points, and then according to the avowed objects of the Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution, to acquire and protect historical spots, and to foster true patriotism and love of country, to give your loyal aid and support in helping to preserve this sacred and historic burial place and monument, nor only for your own time, but for future generations.

At the conclusion of Mrs. Rogers' paper, Charles J. Dyer, who was present at the meeting, presented Mrs. Rogers $10 towards the publishing of her paper in pamphlet form.

Mrs. A. J. Sinay, chairman of the programme committee, introduced the speaker, Joseph D. Little, superintendent of the International Silver Co., exhibit at New York. Mr. Little gave a most instructive lecture on the History and Romance of Silver and his talk was illustrated by beautifully colored stereopticon slides.

Early Silverware

After reviewing the very early history of the silver industry, Mr. Little said that in early English history there were many styles of interesting spoons. One had a queer shaped bowl attached to a round handle. This was used to eat soups and broths. All of the spoons in those days were made by hand, hammered out. It was a slow process. Today we have dies from which spoons are stamped out. In early English days, in addition to the bowl shaped spoon for soups and broths there was the chalice spoon, the medicine spoon, the tea spoon, etc. Spoons in those days were kept under lock and key as was also the tea caddy. It was an early English custom to present spoons to pall bearers at funerals and these spoons were known as funeral spoon. In the Metropolitan Museum of Art, Mr. Little said, I could show you a funeral spoon with "Live to Die" on one side and "Die to Live" on the other side.

In the early days hostesses had few knives, spoons and forks, and quite frequently guests carried their own. Mr. Little exhibited a combination spoon, fork and tooth pick used in olden times. The earliest knives, he said, were made of flint or stone and later of bronze and other metals. As late as 1750 table knives were extremely scarce. The table knife of 1750 had a round end. This was used to convey food to the mouth.

The First Forks

Forks, individual forks, are a comparatively modern invention. The first forks were introduced in England about the year 1611. Previous to that period people ate with their fingers. Governor Winthrop was the first person in this country to have and use a fork. He was presented a little case containing a fork, spoon and a bodkin. The first fork was a little curious flat affair. Later the fork was curved, and had two tines Three tine and four tine forks then made their appearance. Speaking of early table manners, Mr. Little said he had read the following don'ts in an old time book: Do not wipe your greasy hands on the table cloth; do not throw bones on the floor; do not butter your bread with your thumb; do not pick your teeth with your knife—use a clean stick.

Mr. Little explained at length the four methods of manufacture in use today in silver factories. These are, he said, hammering, stamping, spinning and casting. He said the ancient silversmith was a sculptor and an artist as well and that he took great pride in his trade.

At the conclusion of his lecture Mr. Little showed a series of stereopticon slides depicting the manufacture of silverware in the modern silver plants as compared with the trade as practised in ancient days.

Bennett M. Gaines met Mr. Little at the train in New London and brought him to this city by automobile, later taking him back to New London to catch a train for New

NEW HIGHWAY FOR NORWICH PUTNAM ROAD

Three miles of concrete is to be laid this spring in the towns of Killingly and Plainfield by the state highway department. This is one of six new road jobs planned by the highway department. The six jobs include the paving of 17 miles of Connecticut highway and the construction of one new bridge over the Naugatuck river at Thompson. The work will be covered in six contracts for which sealed bids will be received at department headquarters until Monday, March 17.

With one exception, all of the projects included in this group are comparatively large. The biggest contract of the six will be for the paving with reinforced concrete of the Foxon road through the towns of East Haven and Branford. The length of the new pavement will be nearly six miles.

One of the most interesting of the projects from the motorists' point of view will be the construction of the Stevenson-Sandy Hook road through the towns of Newtown and Monroe. This road, at present, is little more than a narrow, winding, difficult wagon path. Yet it is the only route between the two points on the west bank of the Housatonic. It will be designated as Route No. 145, and will be paved with upwards of five miles of waterbound macadam. When completed, it will offer some of the state's best scenery.

In connection with the announcement of these contracts, Commissioner Macdonald also advised contractors that the department was about to issue new regulations with respect to the total weight of gasoline operated rollers used in highway construction, which will probably require a weight of 500 pounds per inch width of rear wheels.

The projects announced by the highway commissioner are as follows:

Town of Bristol: About 13,660 feet of reinforced concrete pavement on the Scott's Swamp road (Farmington avenue). Towns of East Haven and North Branford: About 31,385 feet of reinforced concrete pavement on the Foxon road. Town of Griswold: About 1,096 feet of grading and waterbound macadam pavement on the approaches to bridge at Tadpole crossing on Route No. 12. Towns of Killingly and Plainfield: About 15,944 feet of reinforced concrete on the Wauregan section of the Norwich-Putnam road. Towns of Monroe and Newtown: About 27,865 feet of waterbound macadam on the Stevenson-Sandy Hook road. Town of Thomaston: A two span reinforced concrete bridge and approaches over Naugatuck river on East Main street.

TEAMS NAMED FOR RAISING OF $30,000

The personnel of the teams, headed by Abner Schwartz, which will have charge of the financial campaign of the Norwich Community Synagogue, was announced Wednesday evening by Secretary Louis Goldblatt of the synagogue. The raising of $30,000, the goal, will rest with six teams, each of which will have two members and a captain. The team personnel follows:

Team No. 1, Captain Louis Pollock, Charles J. Smith and Benjamin Krieger; team No. 2, Captain A. Ableman, Hyman Schwartz and Simon Mandell; team No. 3, Captain H. J. Schatz, I. M. Bronerwine and Al. Silverberg; team No. 4, Captain Alex Pasnik, Barney Rubinstein and William Israelite; team No. 5, Captain Charles M. Gordon, Morris Sussman and Michael Cohen; team No. 6, Captain Harry Libby, George Blum and David Bendett.

The campaign will open at the victory dinner to be held Sunday evening at the Community house, at which several prominent speakers will be heard. Arrangements for the meeting have been nearly completed. Local men invited to attend include Mayor Lee Roy Robbins and Rev. Alexander H. Abbott, pastor of the United Congregational church. Guests of honor will also include Rabbis Gordon, Isenstein and Zeitlen, scholars at the Theological Seminary at New York, who have preached at the Friday evening services of the synagogue here in the past.

Secretary Goldblatt said Wednesday evening that replies to invitations are coming in rapidly. The waitresses who will serve the dinner will be under the supervision of Melvin Worth, manager of the Wauregan hotel.

FORD'S SYSTEM OF DIET FOR HEALTH AND LONGEVITY

FORT MYERS, Fla., March 5.—(AP)— The perfect meal and the best way to eat it have caught the attention of Henry Ford, philanthropist and builder of automobiles.

As a result of his own study and of chemical research in his plant at Dearborn, Mich., the manufacturer has evolved a system of diet which he believes will make toward generally better health and longevity.

A dash of commonsense as to culinary matters is essential, he added as he sat in the office of his winter home here.

A new device attached to a front door lock switches off the hall light inside the house when you lock the door, and lights the light when you unlock the door.

Itching Stops Instantly—Piles Soothed, Healed

The itching, burning and bleeding of piles is most embarrassing—allowed to continue they cause worry, nervousness and in some cases—the knife.

So just get after those sore, painful piles to-day with Peterson's Ointment. The minute this powerfully healing and soothing Ointment is applied, itching and burning stops, the inflamed parts are soothed and start right in to heal—the mighty healing power of Peterson's Ointment causes piles to vanish in a few days.

Cleveland Bruner of Maxton, N. Car., writes: "I have a severe case of piles and will truthfully say that trying everything without getting any help—Peterson's Ointment gave me freedom and banished my piles."

Peterson's Ointment ends piles and a 35c box will prove it—all drugstores.

Why Few Are Fat

Excess fat has been disappearing fast in late years. So fast that excess fat is the exception now. You see that in every circle.

That change is largely due to the discovery that excess fat is largely the result of a gland weakness. A gland whose secretion helps turn food to fuel. So modern physicians, in treating obesity, seek to combat this cause.

Their method is embodied in Marmola prescription tablets. People have used them for 22 years—millions of boxes of them. Now almost everyone has slender friends to show them the results.

Go do what they did—try Marmola. All druggists supply it at $1 a box, and a book in each box tells you how and why it acts.

NO AGREEMENT REACHED AS TO BUDGET AT NEW LONDON HEARING

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, March 5.—A three hours' public hearing on the budget of the city of New London was held this evening but no action was taken on the adoption of the budget. There were objections to some of the proposed appropriations. Lina Beckwith wanted to know why the taxpayers should contribute anything to the support of the probate court. She said that all estates before the court paid fees and she didn't know why taxpayers should pay anything to support that court.

Mrs. Annie Fenner was on hand with many queries as to what became of the funds from the police court and Mrs. Emily Speirs said it was a disgrace to the city to take some $28,000 last year from unfortunates who went before the court. She said that money should be appropriated over a period of years to provide proper headquarters for the police. The court room, she declared, was no fit place for a woman to go into now.

She also objected to an expenditure of $100 by the zoning board of appeals; it was explained to her that that money was spent only as services were required.

Mrs. Speirs interrogated the chairman as to what use the money was put to that was collected from back taxes and it was explained that it was put into the general receipts of the city from sources other than taxes.

Objection was made to an appropriation for the School of Commerce. Harry Gordon advocated putting on a couple more teachers at W. M. I. and Bulkeley that they might instruct pupils in the studies they are now pursuing at the School of Commerce. He said the school on Mercer street now used by the School of Commerce might be used for the overflow from other schools; thus a saving of $24,000 or $25,000 a year might be effected.

He also declared that he had made an investigation of some of the school buildings and the Winthrop school is a fire trap. He advocated the placing of a sprinkling system in it. He said the corridors were used as recitation rooms, that the school board asked for a sprinkler system only in the basement and that it was not provided for them.

He said that in the Harbour school there were 20 pupils and that the city did not have ladders to reach to the third floor. He predicted that if a re occurred there the stairways would carry the flames up to that floor and that lives might be lost.

Opposition was expressed to reducing the library appropriation, $4,000. It was opposed by Nathan Belcher, George Whittlesey, Frederick Edgerton and Judge Alfred Colt, all claiming that the library was a part of the city's educational system. They cited the number of books taken from the library each year—the total is increasing and it was larger than ever this year. The school children make constant use of the library. President Lubchansky, of the chamber of commerce, said it would be a misfortune if the $4,000 were cut off and declared the library the cultural and educational center of the city. He would not have one penny of the appropriation reduced.

The query was asked as to why the cost of lighting the streets in New London was so much, as compared to that of cities of other size. City Manager Holt said that New London was better lighted and carried its lights to the outskirts of the city. Henry Coogan claimed that Fitch avenue was very poorly lighted and that it should be improved. Eight or nine new houses have been erected there, yet while sidewalks were laid, the curbing is still in the gutter, not having been set.

An appeal was made for the opening up of Maple avenue to Pequot avenue. Councilor Chappell showed that the project is under consideration but that it is an undertaking of great consequence. Three plans, involving $8,000, $23,000 and $93,000, were under consideration. He said the city should not take on such expense; a public hearing would be given on the matter.

Councilor May strenuously resisted the cutting off of $27,000 of public works, saying that new streets should be opened, others repaired and that the erection of new houses would pay the great proportion of the expense, throught their taxes. It would furnish employment to many.

Henry C. Lindberg claimed that the taxes exacted on his property were 20 per cent of the gross income on it.

Extension of the system of collecting garbage below Thames street was advocated. Mr. Lindberg said he had lived north of Thames street five years and he had never seen a garbage collector down there.

When Vicks introduced the better method of treating colds externally it was especially appreciated by mothers because it avoids "dosing," which so often disturbs children's delicate digestions.

Each year more and more adults, too, have found Vicks equally good for their own colds. Today, the whole trend of medical practice is away from needless "dosing."

Just rubbed on, Vicks gives off medicated vapors which are inhaled, and, at the same time, acts through the skin like a plaster.

POLITICIANS CHAFE AT DELAY IN SHAKING PLUM TREE

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, March 5.—The appointment of a sheriff to succeed Sheriff Sidney A. Brown, who died recently, is impatiently awaited for there are innumerable aspirants for the office. While it is known that any appointment will be only temporary, until November of the national presidential year, when the republicans and democrats make known through nomination their choice for elections at that time, the chances remain that the candidate holding office on the appointment will be the republican nominee. The appointment, it is also known, will not be made until Henry Roraback returns from his stay in the south, but it is generally known that the republican leader is in favor of George H. Bradford of Montville, at present a member of the inspectors' department of the state motor vehicle commission. Bradford is known to have the inside track for the appointment, but pressure may be brought to bear whereby one of the numerous other seekers for the office may annex the plum. These include Deputy Sheriff Manuel J. Martin, who was Sheriff Brown's confidential subordinate during the latter's last illness; W. Ellery Ellyn of Waterford, George Costello, Groton, and William Apley of this city. Whoever receives the profitable post, it is believed that such appointment will be made within the next few days.

Patrick O'Leary, of 51 Belden streen; Robert Kennerson, Uncasville; Mrs. Elizabeth Riffer, 105 Bank street; Joseph Burt, 14 East street;; Jacob Deep, Mystic; Mrs. George Healy, Groton; Michael Rearadnik, East Lyme; Mrs. William Mahoney, Groton, patients at Lawrence Memorial hospital, were discharged today.

Funeral At Fort Wright

The funeral of Sergeant Robert Connell, Fort Wright, who died at the post hospital, was held this afternoon at 2:15 o'clock. The services were conducted by Chaplain Bepps, post chaplain. The body was forwarded to Springfield, Mass., and will be cremated.

OBITUARY

Mrs. Claude Grant

Mrs. Minnie D. Grant, 70, wife of Claude Grant, died early today at her former residence, Smith avenue, Niantic, death ending an illness of but a few days with pneumonia. She leaves no survivors but her husband. Mrs. Grant was born in Willimantic, Dec. 12, 1859, the daughter of James and Elizabeth Ann Hooks Dickinson. She had resided in Hartford many years, moving to Niantic about five years ago. She was a member of the Daughters of Pocohontas, Woman's Relief corps, Daughters of Rebekah and the auxiliary to the Veteran Firemen's association.

Mrs. Forrest Lufler

Mrs. Rosalie Dufler, 80, widow of Forrest Lufler, died early today at Smith Memorial home. She is survived by a son, Forrest Lufler, of New Haven; a brother, P. M. Harwood, Waterford, and a sister, Mrs. Ella J. Lovett, of Somers. Mrs. Lufler was born in West Stafford Nov. 29, 1849, but had resided in this city most of her life. She was a member of the First Church of Christ.

Commissioner of Motor Vehicles Robbins B. Stoeckel today ordered the return of the drivers' licenses of George C. Adams, submarine base, and Arnold Hendrick, U. S. Coast Guard.

Lieutenant of Police James C. Sullivan is confined to his home on Steward street by illness, not, however, believed to be of a serious nature. During his absence from duty, Desk Sergeant James D. Gaffney will be acting lieutenant. Patrolman William Manice was unable to perform duty last night, being ill at his home on Huntington street.

Ray Phillips, 136 Cedar Grove avenue, reported to the police last night that while he absented himself from his automobile, which he parked on Broad street, near Cottage, a thief stole a pair of fur gloves and two spark plugs.

BLAZE IN THE CUPOLA OF PROSPECT ST. HOUSE

The Cupola house, corner of Prospect stree and Bulieley place, was slightly damaged by fire this morning. When the blaze was discovered the lodging house was threatened with serious damage. When the fire was discovered it was burning briskly in the cupola and an alarm was sent in from Box 26, corner of Bulkeley place and Huntington street. Chief Thomas Shipman and four pieces of apparatus responded. The entire cupola was aflame, but a liberal quantity of chemicals sufficed to extinguish the fire. The damage, it is believed, will not exceed $150. When the engines were returning from the fire, Arthur Lawsky, 4, who had been running behind Konomoc truck, ran in front of an automobile driven by John J. O'Connor, 19 Wall street. The child, who was knocked down, was taken to Lawrence Memorial hospital by Patrolman Carlos Stone. An examination revealed that the child had received injuries no more serious than bruises and scratches.

FUNERAL

Jabez B. Ladd

The funeral of Jabez B. Ladd, of 33 Tilley street, was held this afternoon at 1 o'clock at 15 Masonic street. The services were conducted by Rev. J. Romeyn Danforth, pastor of the First Church of Christ. Members of Mohegan lodge of Odd Fellows acted as bearers. Burial was in Starr cemetery, Groton.

WHERE LADD'S SAVINGS WENT REMAINS A MYSTERY

The investigators are still without a thread of a clue that would indicate what became of the $1800 that Ladd withdrew from banks within 48 hours of the time he ended his life, $1050 being taken from the Savings Bank of New London last Friday and $745.49 withdrawn from the National Bank of Commerce the day before. Ladd's body was found floating in the Thames river, south of the pier of the Fishers Island Navigation company shortly before 3 o'clock Saturday afternoon. He was last seen Friday night at 9:30 on Bank street, when he left Mrs. Koptcek and daughter, of Center Groton, after the three had visited a motion picture house and following Ladd dining at the Center Groton house. His watch stopped at 3:09 o'clock, which unquestionably was the hour that the body entered the water.

The police received a report that Ladd had been in Hartford and New Haven the day before he committed suicide, but a check-up of banks in both cities did not reveal Ladd having made deposits in either city. The investigators were informed by Mrs. Minnie E. Lewis, 20 Nameaug avenue, that Ladd had informed her he would be unable to keep his promise to marry her because he had made poor investments. This state is discredited because of the fact that Ladd informed Mrs. Koptcek Friday night that he did not intend to marry Mrs. Lewis nor did he state that he had made any investments. Ladd is known to have been previously engaged to Mrs. Lewis, breaking off the engagement at that time, only to renew it at a later date. The police are more inclined to the belief that Ladd, after withdrawing the money from the two banks, entrusted the $1800 to an acquaintance with instructions as to what to do with the money in the event that anything happened to him. After giving the money to his friend, Ladd decided to end his existence and believing that his friend would follow his instruction decided on drowning. Lionel Ellis, Louisville, Ky., whom Ladd reared from boyhood, but never legally adopted, is in New London and has retained counsel to look after his interests.

The Groton fire department was called out this afternoon for a threatening grass fire on Brandegee avenue. The fire, started by youths, was fanned by a brisk wind, it was believed that the blaze would reach and damage buildings. An alarm was sent in and was responded to by Pioneer Hose company. Chemicals sufficed to extinguish the fire before damage resulted.

Jack's Hat Store Closes

One more New London store has gone out of business because of lack of patronage. Today, Jack's Hat store, 107 Bank street, closed its doors. His assets are $3500 and his liabilities $7000. This is the second time that Jackson has suspended business, the previous time being about two years ago.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Palace Theatre

This being Warner Brothers' anniversary month in the talking picture field, it seems only fitting that the Palace should be presenting such a big program. Not one but two big pictures are billed at the popular local theatre now. The program includes that mighty drama of the sea, "The Ship From Shanghai," and that other magnificent social comedy, "Strictly Modern." One of these pictures will thrill the hairs on your head to a stand-up, while the other will keep you rolling in gales of mirth. It is a splendid bill, and shows conclusively the desire of Warner Brothers to keep faith with their promises to the public.

A drama of human souls in agony, a storm-tossed vessel in the grip of a mad steward, brute strength towering over helpless men and women. This is the story of "The Ship From Shanghai," starring Conrad Nagel, Kay Johnson, Carmel Myers and Louis Wolheim. No man or woman can look upon and listen to this tale of chaos on the high seas, without almost living along with that desperate human cargo waiting for a brute to run riot and ravish. It is strong, red-blooded compelling stuff, the stuff of which great drama is made.

"Strictly Modern" is another sort of picture, a picture which presents the other side of life entirely. Packed with comedy and full of surprise punches, it tells the story of a young woman who didn't know what was good for her until a lot of startling upsets had changed her mind. She was too prone to take the advice of Judge Bartlett, and as a result she ended up by marrying the judge, while the boy whom she had thought to marry, got hooked up with another charming Miss. Dorothy Mackaill and Sidney Blackmer are the stars of this charming Vitaphone production.

Starting Saturday and for a four-day period, the Palace theatre will present that thrilling and colorful military love romance, "His First Command," starring William Boyd, Dorothy Sebastian and an excellent supporting cast. This is something new in military screen plays, something the public of Norwich will remember a long time, and something that cannot and should not be missed.

St. Mary's Players.

Many of us at times find ourselves in a fix. What to do and how to do it, or what not to do and how to do that. And sometimes we find that we have a friend who claims that he can arrange matters. He does, but how? In Seven Chances this friend takes upon himself the task of getting someone out of a difficulty. He suggests several ways in which this can be done. What are they? But see the play and you will learn.

Broadway Theatre

Motion picture projectionists are, as a rule, the most blase and bored of all people who view the "gallopin photos," but the show at the Broadway, which completes its run today and tomorrow has even the "boys in the booth" all hopped up with enthusiasm! Two really great pictures, either of them worthy of individual run, included on the same program, are delivering entertainment value that has never before been even approached. In "Burning Up," Richard Arlen, with a big cast comprising Mary Brian, Tully Marshall, Sam Hardy and Francis Macdonald, with carnival and race track crowds, tells a rousing story of the auto race tracks with its thrilling adventure and romance, and of the crooked gambling ring that rears its uguly head wherever there is sporting competition. Opening in a small carnival motordrome with Arlen riding motorcycle races with Death on the other mo-bike, the story quickly shifts to the dirt track and the giant race cars, and there is action, speed and thrills in brimming measure.

In the companion feature "Street Girl," enough drama, comedy that is comedy, music, dancing and heart throbs are combined to furnish themes for a half a dozen pictures of value. Betty Compson is starred as a petite Hungarian violiniste, who is rescued half starving and "adopted" by a quartet of cafe musicians, including Jack Oakie, Johnnie Harron, Ned Sparks and Guy Buccola, and their charity is repaid when the starveling secures an opening for the little band in a night club operated by one of her countrymen. The "breaks" improve from day to day, and their fortune is assured when a royal prince honors the cafe by his visit. Joseph Cawthorne is Keppel the cafe-owner, and Ivan Lebedeff the prince, completing a most competent cast in one of the most enjoyable pictures shown in Norwich. Ned Sparks furnisher a complete surprise with his constant cynicism, his gloom being so deep as to be howlingly funny, and little Betty Compson with her beloved "fiddle" is another surprise for jaded picture fans.

A stunning bill awaits Broadway patrons with the Saturday change, when William Powell is presented in "The Street of Chance," the first real expose of New York's notorious "Rothstein case," the speaking screen furnishing the history and solution of the "story the tabloids dared not print," in a sensational and extremely thrilling picture.

HUDSON-ESSEX COMPANY IN CHALLENGE RUN

The Norwich Hudson-Essex Co., of North Main street, was represented in the state-wide economy run conducted Tuesday as a part of the programme of Challenger week. The local Challenger was driven by William Shechtman, who was entered in the east division, and the mileage was 22.47 miles per gallon. The run was made in two divisions, each of twelve cars. The winning car in the east division was driven by Philip E. Little Hale of Middletown. His mileage was 26.2 miles per gallon. Carl Germaine, of Winsted, was the driver of the winning machine in the west division and registered at the conclusion of the run 27.3 miles per gallon of gasoline.

An unfortunate feature of the run in the eastern division occurred in the afternoon, when the leader of the group led the party onto a rough and rutty country cart path between Essex and Deep iver, which was about four miles in length. The Norwich car was one of the group that traversed this course, but the winner did not, as it was one of three that became separated from the lead car at New London and followed the state highway direct to East Hartford, the starting point.

The course, followed by the calvalcade of machines in the eastern division, was from East Hartford, the starting and finishing point, to Manchester, Rockville, Willimantic, Norwich, New London, Saybrook, Essex, Deep River, Glastonbury, Middletown and Portland. At Norwich, the machines were met at the city line by Motor Patrol Officer Clifford Crary, who escorted them into the city, up Main street to the Norwich Hudson-Essex garage and back to Cliff street. There the cars were parked in a reserved section, while the drivers enjoyed lunch at the Wauregan hotel.

At the conclusion of the run a dinner was held at the Hotel Bond, Hartford, for those participating. Prizes were awarded at the dinner to the winners in the different events.

Edison's first electric lamp will be pictured on a special 2-cent United States postage stamp.

JOHN C. KEBABIAN MUST PAY LOUIS LEONE TOTAL OF $659

Louis Leone, of Watch Hill, in a civil suit brought against John C. Kebabian, of New Haven, proprietor of the Plimpton hotel, Watch Hill, was awarded a judgment of $659.12 by a rescript handed down by the supreme court of Rhode Island in an action of assumpsit. This amount was the verdict returned by a jury in Washington county superior court, Associate Justice Charles A. Walsh, presiding, for labor and material furnished at Watch Hill from 1923 to 1926. The case is now remitted to Washington county superior court for the entry of judgment after exceptions have been overruled by the higher court.

Wednesday afternoon the last over-head electric and telephone wire was removed from Dixon square. The removal of the wooden poles will follow. The 2300-volt high tension wires of the South County Public Service company on Broad street have been removed by a force of workmen who have been on the job for the past two days. This work has been done in connection with the elimination of all overhead wires on Broad street, where conduits have been installed for underground service.

The work of laying the conduits on Broad street from the Pawcatuck river bridge to Granite and Elm streets and up High street, as far as the Colonial club site, was completed about 10 months ago. Overhead wires supplying current to the arc lights are still hanging on the wooden poles, but it is explained that these will soon be taken down and the wooden poles removed. Work is soon to be commenced on the installation of an underground service on West Broad street.

TIMES MAY BE SLACK BUT WALTER GREEN CAN DIG UP $100

Walter Green is rated as the best clam digger around the village and can dig them as fast as a boy eats pie at a picnic. When the tide was so low that one could almost walk across Noank harbor, Strong-Back Green took a bushel bag and a pail and over to Palmer cove he went to try his luck with the clam family. The air was just right for digging; so the small man with the strong back went to it. The clams were trying to keep free and hide in their holes, but when this Noanker got a shot at them it was no use, like ex-Gob Sharkey sinking the blows at Phil Scott, so quick that the referee could not count the jabs.

In three hours Green had a bushel of good-sized clams, but he wanted to fill the pail before the sun set over Hadley woods. He got into one hole and dug for 30 minutes, deep enough for a cellar for a new house. The hoe handle was out of sight, but the champion clammer would not give up until he got the last clam. He struck something which at first he thought was a rock or an April fool joke. The sweat was rolling off him, but in 32 minutes Shorty Green landed a huge member of the clam family. He kept it to one side so as to weigh it at Front street fish market. Soon it became dark. The water pail was over-filled and he put the clams in his auto and started home after five hours of hard digging—no work for a child!

Reaching home, the smell of Dinty Moore corned beef was coming from the crack of the kitchen door; good stuff, cooked by his wife. All smiles was the happy clammer. After putting the clams down cellar he sat down and put away almost a half-ton of the Dinty special, along with the cabbage. Then down to the cellar he went to count the clams, after he hit the old corn cob pipe. He counted clams until his eyes were sore and it took an hour and a half before the counting was over, like teaching a school kid her A. B. C.'s. Strong-Back Green had 600 clams and the extra one to be weighed at Front street market the next day.

Tired after the hard afternoon's work, he was soon ready to hit the hay.

During the night his wife heard someone talking, but found out it was her husband muttering in his sleep, "I will get you, Clam, if I got to chase you to China! You may be a long way down but you cannot fool your Uncle Walter Green!" His wife wanted to finish out her sleep, for the Big Ben alarm clock was set and it was then 4 a. m. She said, "Walter! Roll over and let them clams be, so I can get some sleep!" Not a word out of the clammer. Closing her eyes for about ten minutes, on the fence was a battle royal between two cats, trying to get a half-Nelson or something like that. So the lady had only about two hours sleep altogether, as the Big Ben went off like a fire alarm for her to get up and turn the eggs over for breakfast.

The clammer hit the floor like a soldier did in the World war. After she told her story about him talking in his sleep and then the cat fight on the fence. So the Prospect Hill clammer took his clams down to the fish market to sell, also to weigh the monster clam that came out of Palmer cove. If the scales at Front street market don't lie the white numbers read 2 3-4 pounds. The shell was 9 1-2 inches long. He would not sell that clam, but took it back home, to have a clam chowder Sunday. He got out the old English knife with its blade five inches long, given to him by his grandfather in London when he used to play in the gutter pools and sail boats after a hard rain. The exact age of that knife is not known. The huge clam got operated on with his steady hand and the knife hit something hard. At first the Noank surgeon thought it was a gold tooth lost by some crabber in the summer time from Groton Long Point. But cutting away the meat to see what it was, when he reached it he gave out a yell as if he was at a college football game.

The neighbors did not know what was the matter and they came running in as he was saying, "Look what I found in a Palmer cove clam!" There was a white pearl, large as a pea, white as a coon's tooth on a rainy day. All smiles, he took his find up to a jewelry store, to see how much it was worth. With the glass at his eye, the man who fixes watches looked for 15 minutes and saw a small piece of black on the left side. He was struck, for that was worth something. He said, "Will you take $100 for it?" Green's eyes were popping out of his head. "I did not know any clam was worth all that! Sure, I will take it!" So the greenbacks were counted out and the champion clammer of the Indian town went home and broke the news to his wife. "That pearl brought me 100 berries! That sure was a good afternoon's work for the man with the hoe!"

The shells from the monster clam were given to Mason Langworth so he can paint a picture of his father's fishing boat and send it away to his cousin in India.

"Well," Strong-Back Green said, "it was not a good day for clams but I sure took them, from two inches up to 2 3-4 pounds! The next low tide I will see if I can beat this record of 600 claims and a $100 pearl from the shores of Palmer Cove."

TANLAC FREES JOHN BURKHARDT OF STOMACH TROUBLES

Flat on Back, Super Medicine Puts Him Back on Job

In a few days quicker than you ever thought possible—that super medicine Tanlac starts to prove its merit. And amazing though it may seem, the more stubborn and unyielding the case may be, the more remarkable is the work that Tanlac does in straightening out weak disordered stomachs. It's a real medicine formulated according to modern medical science—that's why—not just a "patent medicine" that makes a lot of ridiculous claims to cure everything. Tanlac was prepared for the specific purpose of strengthening the ailing organs of digestion and because every ingredient in it is designed for helping the good work along, it has won easy victories where everything else has failed. And remember this, when stomach troubles are ended you'll be absolutely amazed at the way bowel troubles, constipation, dizziness, headaches, and even rheumatism usually disappear completely. Tanlac has brought glorious new health to hundreds right here in this town. Among the recent cases is Mr. John Burkhardt who says: "I was flat on my back when I started taking Tanlac. A few doses began to improve my appetite, my digestion grew better and I was soon back on the job." Every mail brings enthusiastic letters of testimonial—52,000,000 bottles have been sold. Guaranteed by all the druggists so accept no substitute.

REVERSAL OF MOVEMENT IN MARKET WAS PRECIPITATED BY BEAR DRIVE

NEW YORK, March 5—(AP)—The level of share prices rose further in today's stock market, only to find the structure weakened by the rather cheerless character of current business reports, and to burst forth in a torrent of liquidation which reduced the level substantially below yesterday's close.

The sudden reversal of the movement came late in the day, and appeared to be precipitated by a bear drive. The bear attack, however, owed its success to the psychological effects of the continued unsettlement of the commodity markets, Secretary Davis' report on unemployment, the slight retarding of steel mill activity, and unimpressive February merchandise sales reports and freight car loadings. Although the market has remained a highly professional affair, the selling assumed large proportions. Total sales were 3,715,000 shares, exceeded only four times since the first of the year.

Net losses at the close were not large, generally running from 1 to 4 points, but among issues closing 2 or more points lower were about a dozen of the leading utilities and industrials. The utilities bore the brunt of the selling, which was to have been expected in view of the sharp advances in this group during the past few days.

The days news was not altogether cheerless. Credit conditions continued to ease, and there was a growing conviction in Wall street that a lower rediscount rate will be announced within a short time by the New York Federal Reserve bank. Call money held at 4 per cent, but was available in the outside market as low as 3. Time money and bankers acceptances displayed an easing tone. While few ventured to predict that a lower rediscount rate would be announced after the weekly meeting tomorrow, it was felt that the trend of credit rates in the New York market indicated such action by early spring, at least. It is notable that reductions in credit rates thus far have not markedly influenced the cost of commercial credit throughout the country at large.

Furthermore, reports from the petroleum industry were distinctly more pleasing. Crude oil production last week took one of the most decided downturns in recent months. Statistics of gasoline in storage for January showed another large accumulation of stocks, but the federal oil conservation board's recommendation for suspension of refining on one day a week, while not meeting with universal approval, was at once adopted by the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey and its subsidiaries.

The cotton market was again conspicuously weak. Futures prices dipped to new low levels for the season, and closed 95 cents to $1.50 a bale below yesterday's final levels. Selling was induced by weakness of the Liverpool market, and a report of fertilizer sales in the south which promised little reduction in acreage next year. Wheat futures lost nearly 2 cents reflecting bearish weather reports, uneasiness over the huge stocks at terminals, and heaviness of the Winnipeg market. Corn closed nearly a cent lower.

Among shares closing 2 to 4 points lower were such issues as U. S. Steel, American Can, Westinghouse Electric, Air Reduction, Allied Chemical, American and Foreign Power, Columbia Gas, Columbian Carbon, Consolidated Gas, Eastman Kodak, Underwood Elliott, Union Carbide, Nash Motors, and U. S. Smelting, the last two named reaching new low levels for the year. An acutely weak feature was Indian Motorcycle. The stock dropped more in what appeared to be the abandon- in wheat appeared to be the abandonment or collapse of a pool operation.

There were a few firm spots at the close. Stone and Webster, California Packing, and Mack Truck gained 2 points or so, Case rose 20 points to a new 1930 peak, then lost 12 1-2 of its gain. National Biscuit old stock rose 8 points to a new high for the year, then lost half its advance. American Solvents, a low-priced specialty recently taken over from the curb, was bid up 5 points to a new peak at 22, and closed near the top.

Foreign exchanges were steady, with sterling cables holding at $4.86. The Spanish peseta rallied a little.

THE CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, March 5—(AP)—Trading on the New York Curb exchange today set a new high record for the year, with a turnover of 1,258,500 shares, more than one-sixth of which was in common stock of the Cities Service company. Prices rallied briskly until the last hour when a heavy selling movement, centering in the public utility issues, cut down or wiped out many of the early gains, and left closing prices irregular.

Cities Service common was marked up to a new top for the year at 39 5-8, and then eased to 37 7-8, for a net decline of 1-2 a point, on a turnover of 230,200 shares. Electric Bond & Share, another active feature, showed a net loss of 2 1-8 at 101, after having sold as high as 103 3-4.

There were several strong spots in the public utilities group, with buying presumably influenced by unconfirmed reports that large banking interests were working on a series of new consolidations. Central States convertible preferred jumped 8 3-4 points to a new high at 172 1-4. Peoples Light & Power A was marked up 2 5-8 points to a new 1930 high at 36 7-8. Hydro-Electric and Sierre Pacific Electric also reached new highs for the year. American & Foreign Power warrants and American Gas & Electric each lost about 3 points and Consolidated Gas of Baltimore, Tampa Electric and United Light & Power A lost a point or more.

Alleghany Gas and the Arkansas Natural Gas issues reached new peaks for the year, but the latter lost their gains and closed with small net declines.

Humble Oil ran up 7 points to a new 1930 high at 98, but lost about 3 points of its gain. Gulf of Pennsylvania closed about a point higher, but Cosden Oil dropped 5 points to 50, duplicating the year's low, on a few sales. The Humble Oil company announced that it would go on a 6-day basis.

Aviation issues presented a few points of strength. Sikorsky jumped nearly 7 points, Aero Underwriters crossed 22 to a new high for a gain of about 4 points and Consolidated Aircraft sold at 19 up 1 7-8, for the first time this year. Western Air Express was heavy.

New peak prices for the year also were registered by Amrad corporation, Blue Ridge common, Eisler Electric, International Utilities "A" and Royal Typewriter (new), A. O. Smith, and Standard Screw. Glen Alden Coal dropped 8 points to a new low at 102, in response to the reduction in the annual dividend from $10 to $8, and then rallied to 105. New York & Honduras also sold at new low for the year.

President Muller of the exchange, in his annual report, disclosed that 1326, or 65 per cent of the stocks listed, were on a dividend paying basis. Sales last year totaled 475,000,000 shares, as against 15,500,000 in 1921 when the curb moved indoors.

BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, March 5—(AP)—Under the leadership of United States government obligations, most of which touched new 1930 highs, the bond market gave a rather impressive demonstration of strength today. Numerous prime rails changed hands in large blocks and the average for ten carriers made the best gain of the year.

Pronounced ease in credit was behind the upturn. Not only did time money rates again manifest a downward tendency, but bankers acceptances were reduced and supplies of call funds were plentiful at the renewal charge of 4 per cent.

Governments made the largest turnover in some time. The Liberty 3 1-2s and Fourth 4 1-4s, as well as all the listed Treasuries, touched new 1930 peaks and closing quotations were generally at the top. The strongest issue was the Treasury 3 3-4 which rose 27-32 of a point to 105.11, while the Treasury 4s went to 108.2 for a net advance of 21-32. Gains in the Liberties were smaller.

Low coupon rails attracted a brisk demand. Chesapeake & Ohio 4 1-2s and Chicago & North Western General 3 1-2s, made new high ground for the year the latter rising 2 3-8. New York Central obligations, Nickel Plate 4 1-2s, Kansas City Southern First 3s, New Haven 4 1-2s, Pennsylvania 4 1-2s, Northern Pacific prior lien 4s and General 3s, Southern Railway General 4s, St. Louis & San Francisco prior lien 4s, Wabash 4 1-2s and Louisville & Nashville 4 1-2s likewise enjoyed the best buying seen in several weeks.

Investment utilities, which closely follow the prime rails, met a quieter market, but ther was sufficient inquiry to bring out better than average gains in Cincinnati Gas & Electric 4s, New York Edison 6 1-2s, Montana Power 5s, and Illinois Bell Telephone 5s. Bell Telephone of Pennsylvania 5s softened, losing 1 3-8.

Industrials were steady. Bethlehem Steel Refunding 5s sold off nearly 2 points on small trading, but Goodyear Rubber 5s made a new 1930 high and International Paper 6s rose a point. American Smelting 5s, Armour 4 1-2s and other investment issues were firm.

As usual, the most active convertible was the American Telephone 4 1-2 which finished an irregular session with a 2 point loss on a turnover of about $1,650,000, par value. New Haven 6s advanced 1, but Missouri Pacific 5 1-2s and Reading Coal & Iron 6s eased. Aside from the telephone bond, however, there was little interest in stock feature obligations.

Foreign loans fell far behind the domestics. The most impressive listings were the Belgiums, with the 7s making a peak for the year on a gain of 1 1-2. French 7s also squeezed above the previous maximum, closing at 116 1-4, up 1-4. South Americans were firm.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, March 5—(AP)—Emphasis given to possibilities of an embargo on rural shipments of wheat to domestic terminals had more or less bearish influence on wheat values today. Explanations from Chairman Legge of the federal farm board that congestion of wheat in terminal markets was the chief cause for change of the board's buying policy, and that withdrawal of loan value prices was expected to slow up shipments sufficiently to hold off a threatened embargo were somewhat overlooked.

Farm board auxiliaries apparently did not support the wheat futures market today and with no other aggressive support evident prices headed down grade. Wheat closed unsettled, 1 1-2 at 2c a bushel net lower, with corn 1-2 a 1c down, oats unchanged to 3-8c off, and provisions showing 5 at 15c decline.

Setbacks in wheat values formed the rule today from start to finish. Early downturns here received considerable impetus from the fact that the Liverpool market displayed virtual indifference to yesterday's advances in price on this side of the Atlantic. Notice also was taken of a statement credited to Congressman Haugen, chairman of the house committee on agriculture that there is no chance that congress will pass a bill this session appropriating $25,000,000 to buy wheat for famine relief in China. Moreover, export demand today for wheat from North America amounted to only 400,000 bushels exclusively Canadian, and domestic wheat crop conditions were announced from Washington as good to excellent, about a month ahead of average in some places.

Adding to selling pressure in the wheat futures market here were authoritative estimates indicating that larger population and increased use of wheat are not keeping pace with more active world wide growing of crops. Excluding Russia, average world crops of wheat for the last three seasons were figured at 3,544,000,000 bushels compared to average crops of 3,032,900,000 bushels six seasons ago, acreage of 230,000,000 against 211,000,000, and yield per acre 15.4 compared to 14.4. On the other hand, estimates which also were circulated that North American stocks of wheat are now 643,000,000 bushels against 660,000,000 bushels at this time last year, failed to give the market any perceptible stimulus.

Corn, oats and rye markets sagged owing to sympathy with wheat weakness. Rye touched a new low price record for the season.

Despite upturns in hog values provisions eased down on account of declines in grain.

WALL STREET BRIEFS

NEW YORK, March 5—(AP)—The Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey announced today that effective March 9, it will reduce its refinery operations to a 6-day-week basis, following the recommendation of the federal oil conservation board as a means of reducing the present heavy production in the industry. Plans for similar action were announced by the Humble Oil & Refining Co., a subsidiary of the Standard of New Jersey.

A second reduction of 1-8 of 1 per cent in the asking rates for bankers acceptances to be made within two days was made late today. The new rates are: 30 to 120 days, 3 5-8 per cent bid, 3 1-2 per cent asked, and for 150 and 180 days, 3 3-4 per cent bid and 3 5-8 per cent asked.

The General Electric Co. has received an order from the New York Central railroad for four power sub-stations, costing about $2,000,000.

Orders for locomotives placed with manufacturers last month totaled 16, as against 163 in the preceding month. Orders for new passenger cars, however, increased, numbering 135, as against 58, ordered in January.

Today's gold movement statement of the New York Federal Reserve bank showed imports of $213,000 from Brazil. There were no exports or any change in the amount of gold earmarked for foreign account.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORY

Curiosity Spreads

There's naught, when all is done and said,
Like curiosity to spread.
—Old Mother Nature.

Curiosity is contagious. In other words, it is catching. If one person becomes curious, other people are almost certain to become curious. It was Peter Rabbit who first became curious as to where the home of Whitefoot the Wood Mouse was. When Chatterer the Red Squirrel discovered that Peter was looking for Whitefoot's home, he in turn became curious. He had told Peter that he was sure that Whitefoot's home was not in a log, a stump or a hollow tree near that particular part of the edge of the Green Forest. To make doubly sure, Chatterer visited every stump, hollow log and hollow tree.

"I knew it," declared Chatterer, talking to himself. "Peter Rabbit doesn't know what he's talking about. Whitefoot the Wood Mouse certainly hasn't a home around here. Still, now I think of it, I have seen him about two or three times. It didn't occur to me to wonder what he was doing over here on the edge of the Green Forest. It is a long way from where he used to live."

Meanwhile, Sammy Jay had come along and had discovered Peter sitting in the bramble-tangle. "What are you doing over here, Peter Rabbit?" demanded Sammy. "You ought to be at home in the dear Old Briar-patch. Does Mrs. Peter know where you are?"

"No, she doesn't," replied Peter crossly. "And it isn't any business of yours, Sammy Jay, what I'm doing over here."

"He's over here looking for the home of Whitefoot the Wood Mouse," spoke up Chatterer, who happened to be in a tree near by.

"Ho, ho, ho!" laughed Sammy Jay in a most provoking manner. "Ho, ho, ho! Whitefoot the Wood Mouse doesn't live around here. He lives farther back in the Green Forest."

"That's what I told him," said Chatterer. "But you know Peter is stubborn and he won't believe it."

"He told me himself that he's got a new home and he was right over here when he told me that," declared Peter. "What is more, I have seen him around here several times. So you can't make me believe that Whitefoot isn't living in this neighborhood."

"Well, when you find his home let me know," said Sammy Jay airily, and flew away as if he had no further interest in the subject.

But this was all pretense on Sammy Jay's part. He kept thinking about Whitefoot and he went about, peering here and peering there with those sharp eyes of his. You see, Peter's curiosity had spread to him as well as to Chatterer. There are no sharper eyes in all the Green Forest than the eyes of Sammy Jay. There is no one knows more about his own neighborhood than does Chatterer the Red Squirrel. So that home of Whitefoot's had to be very well hidden indeed to escape these busybodies. It was well hidden. Yet, curiously enough, Sammy and Chatterer, and Peter, too, saw it many times and didn't know it.

One-tenth of the navy's enlisted personnel wear good conduct medals. An enlisted man must have served more than eight years to gain a good conduct medal, and a bar may be added each four years thereafter, provided his marks are such to warrant a medal. When three or more good conduct medals have been awarded the man is entitled to wear the gold service stripes and gold rating badge.

A HISTORY OF CONNECTICUT INDUSTRY

Released by Manufacturers Association of Connecticut

The Cutaway Harrow Company, Higganum

Thousands of motorists who drive to Connecticut beaches by way of Clinton and Saybrook are familiar with the modern brick office building and impressive plant of the Cutaway Harrow company which stands near the intersection of the two state roads in the center of Higganum.

This New England institution has been manufacturing agricultural implements for more than 60 years. Clark "Cutway" disk harrows and plows are used throughout the United States and in many foreign countries.

George M. Clark, who founded the Cutaway Harrow company in 1865, was the inventor of the cutout, or "cutaway" type of disk, also many new implements and improvements. He developed the process of heat-treating the disks and forging the edges, which has been largely responsible for the great efficiency and durability of Clark "cutaway" implements.

Mr. Clark was much in demand as a lecturer before granges and other agricultural societies. He was known as the "Grass King" because he raised a greater tonnage of hay per acre than had ever been produced and as far as is known his record has never been exceeded.

The present officers are: Elmer S. Hubbard, president; E. R. Austin, vice-president; A. H. Hubbard, secretary and treasurer. The factory management is ably handled by E. D. Eagan, superintendent.

A newspaper reporter was interviewing a newly elected politician. "What did you do before you got into politics?"

"I ran a hand laundry."

"What caused you to discontinue it?"

"That's simple: She divorced me."—Boston Transcript.

ANALYZE THE ALLOWANCE ON YOUR USED CAR

If a dealer pays you more than the true worth of the car he must make up the difference by extra charges on the new car or re-sell it to some one else at too high a price

PERMANENT value is always better than a temporary bargain in the purchase of an automobile. It pays to look ahead and consider reliability and ultimate up-keep costs, as well as comfort, safety, speed, and beauty of line and color.

Since most automobiles are bought for replacement, the value set on your used car is a factor in almost every purchase. Frequently it is given an importance beyond its true worth.

Used cars have a definite market value and you are justly entitled to an allowance based on that value. It is not fair that you receive less. It is not to your best interests to receive more.

IF a dealer pays you more than the true worth of the car he must either re-sell it to some one else at too high a price or make up the difference on the new car. This he cannot do unless he is allowed an excessive profit on the car or on financing, extra equipment and other charges. In either case, you pay the bill, for no way has yet been found to give something for nothing. The money must come from somewhere.

You may not get the largest used-car allowance from the Ford dealer, but that very fact should give you confidence that you are receiving full value in the new car. Ford charges are not marked up or increased to cover a high trade-in allowance on your old car.

Because there is no waste, extravagance or undue profit in manufacturing, distribution or selling, every dollar you pay for a Ford brings a full dollar in return. In lower first cost, in reliability and long life, in the low cost of operation, service and replacement parts, the Ford will save you much more than the seeming difference in trade allowance.

FURTHERMORE, at least $75 extra value is given to you in the new Ford in the Triplex shatter-proof glass windshield, the Rustless Steel, the five steel-spoke wheels, and the four Houdaille hydraulic double-acting shock absorbers. The unusually large number of ball and roller bearings, and the extensive use of fine steel forgings instead of castings or stampings, are other features that show the extra quality built into the Ford car.

PLAINFIELD TEAMS SPLIT EVEN, PROS LOSING, WHILE BUDDIES NOSE OUT RADIOS

(Special to The Bulletin)

PLAINFIELD, March 5. — The Plainfield teams split even here tonight in the basketball spectacle when the Plainfield Pros dropped a rough game to the Boston Whirlwinds, 37 to 32, and the Plainfield Buddies nosed out a 16 to 14 victory over the Radio Five of Danielson. By virtue of their win over the Radio Five the Buddies are claiming the junior championship of eastern Connecticut.

The Plainfield-Boston game was a close one from the start to finish with the lead changing several times. In the first half the clubs battled on even terms, the Whirlwinds having a one-point advantage, 19 to 18, at the end of the half. In the second half the game waxed furious and toward the latter part became decidedly rough. The long range shooting by Morey in the last part of the game was one of the features. Kiley also scored heavily on the long shots. Kasper was leading scorer for Plainfield while Dissinger played brilliant basketball and held Riordan to five points.

The Buddies-Radio Five game was a hummer with Lang proving himself the hero of the fray in the last 20 seconds. Lang got the ball with the score deadlocked at 14 all and dribbled his way through the entire Danielson team to shoot the basket just as the whistle blew. The summaries:

ST. GODARD LOSES OUT TO SMILING BRYDGES

THE PAS, Man., March 5—(AP)—The five year reign of Emil St. Godard of The Pas as the champion "musher" of the world was ended today by his closest friend, Smiling Emil Brydges of Cranberry Portage. St. Godard finished second to Brydges in the 200-mile non-stop dog derby from The Pas to Flin Flon Mine and return, the longest and hardest of all dog sled races and the one which decides who is to wear the title of "King of the Mushers."

After five successive victories, St. Godard fell behind in a stirring finish of the long grind today. Brydges, after trailing through most of the 200 miles, flashed over the line 12 1-2 minutes ahead of his friend and rival. Brydges gained his advantage in the last dash of 32 miles down the railroad from Wanless as St. Godard struggled in with three of his dogs on the sled.

The winner finished the 200-mile grind in 26 hours, nine minutes and one second, the fastest time since 1924 when Shorty Russick set the record for the course of 23 hours, 42 minutes. St. Godard's time was 26:21:32.

Hector Campbell, the Flin Flon miner-musher finished third, nearly two hours behind the winner after pressing the leaders for more than three-fourths of the route. He was timed in 28:09:57. San Franteau checked in just seven seconds behind Campbell in 28:20:04. Donald Flett, speedy Indian musher from the Split Lake country, dropped out of the race in the latter part of today's run.

For the last five years Brydges had run second to St. Godard and was expected to repeat this season. Through the current racing season, St. Godard has swept to triumph in various eastern races with Brydges usually second, but this time, St. Godard's dogs weakened under the strain of holding his slim margin over his four rivals while Brydges' team finished in good condition.

CHOCOLATE WINS EASILY FROM HALL AT TAMPA

TAMPA, Fla., March 5.—(AP)—Kid Chocolate, Cuba's dusky featherweight sensation, decisively outpointed Benny Hall, St. Louis Negro, in a ten round bout at Plant field here tonight. Chocolate gave hall a thorough boxing lesson from statr to finish but could not put over a knockout punch.

Chocolate weighed 123 3-4 pounds, Hall 124.

The fight was little more than a workout for the Cuban, who won every round in an easy fashion. He won by so wide a margin that Referee George Papra made a perfunctory gesture of raising Chocolate's hand in token of a victory about which there was no doubt.

Hall never was able to match the Kid's speend and seldom could lay a glove on him. At the end of the ten frames, Chocolate's sleek hair was hardly disturbed. During the early part of the fight, the Cuban contented himself with outboing the St. Louis Negro, but toward the end he let loose some harder wallops in hope of a knockout, but he could not land them quite effectively enough.

Expect in the fourth and ninth rounds, when he staggered Hall with a smashing two-fisted attack, Chocolate appeared to be working under wraps. He used his right hand sparingly, due to an injury sustained in training. Afterwards Pincho Guiterres, Chocolate's manager, said the Kid also had hurt his left hand, his most effective weapon.

As a result, Guiterrez said, Chocolate's scheduled bill in Toronto, March 10th, has ben called off. The Cuban expects to fill an engagement at Madison Square Garden, New York, March 21 against Al Ridgeway, of Jersey City.

Mastro And LaBarba Signed.

CHICAGO, March 5.—(AP)—Promoter Jack Dempsey tonight signed Earl Mastro, Chicago ranking featherweight for a ten round fight with Fidel LaBarba of Los Angeles, at the Coliseum, March 21. Dempsey has promised the winner a match with Kid Chocolate, sensataional Cuban Nego. He has Chocolate signed for an outdoor engagement. Mastro and LaBarba have fought twice before with each winning close decisions.

KOP CONFIDENT OF BEATING PRINCE

When Johnny Kop, local boxer, steps into the ring against Billy Prince of Waterbury tomorrow night in the semi-final to the Beauregard-Vacca final at Parish hall, Taftville, he will be making his local debut as a professional. Although Kop has fought frequently in other cities since turning pro he has never had an opportunity to display his wares before a home-town audience. The nearest he came to it was when he was signed to meet Alex Touraine but broke his hand a few days before the bout.

Kop wound up his training last night and right now he looks to be fast and in perfect condition. His hand which he injured just before the Touraine bout is fully recovered and he is hitting with plenty of power. Light work will constitute Kop's work for today and tomorrow.

His opponent, Billy Prince, is a good boy who has been boxing considerably in and around Waterbury and is considered a good boy. He is said to be a clever boxer but to be a trifle weak on the punching power, something that he should have if he would take Kop. Johnny is full of confidence for this bout and intends to give the fans something to talk about in the way of knockouts. The local boy hits as hard as any boxer of his weight in the state and unless something very wrong happens Kop should be returned a winner before the end of the sixth round.

The main bout is attracting wide attention throughout the state as Beauregard is out to wrest the New England bantamweight title from Johnny Vacca who has held it for a number of years. The Taftville battler is right at the height of the class today and while he will give away a couple of pounds to Vacca he feels that he can make up for it in aggressiveness and hard punching.

One of the bouts about which nothing has been said is the four round preliminary between Bobby Wells of Montville and Harry Ryder of Waterbury. This is Wells' first appearance in a local ring and little is known of his ability as a boxer. Ryder comes well recommended as a fighter and has been in a number of four rounders in Waterbury and Bridgeport.

The sale of tickets is reported good for the bout and another capacity house is expected.

Susie Says

How we like to recall the old days, especially when we meet some one from the old home town.

I was up in Willimantic the other afternoon and I met an old friend whom I had not seen in years. After asking about this one and that one he says "Do you remember when Bill ——— ran the livery stable?"

Now when anybody mentions the livery stable you know they are going back a few years. Of course, I remembered the old livery stable because many is the ride I've had behind some of the horses from that same stable.

"Well," says he, "There's one thing I'll never forget as long as I live.' And this is the story he recalled:

"You know, Bill did quite a lot of funeral work about town and us kids used to like to hang around the stable for very often we could pick up a few cents driving a hack in the funeral procession.

"I had hung around for a long time and Bill had never given me a chance to drive one of his hacks, the older boys getting the jobs. Gosh, didn't we feel grand sitting up on the box in a frock coat and stiff hat. We were the envy of the whole neighborhood.

"One day, Bill had a big funeral job on and he was short of drivers, so he came to me and said, 'Tommy, do you want to drive today?' Well, you can just bet I said 'yes.'

"Well, he gave me the little hack that was always reserved for the minister and told me I was to drive that and lead the procession. Boy, didn't I feel good, that was some honor to lead a procession.

"The services at the house were over and the minister got into the hack and we started. The horse I was driving had plenty of spirit but I managed to hold him in and everything was all right until we turned Washington square.

"There I cut the corner instead of going around the watering trough as I should have done. I heard a knock at the window and the minister sticks his head out when I opened it. 'Young man, did you ever drive in a funeral cortege before?' he asks. Of course I told him I had.

"'Well, you should have gone around that watering trough,' he informs me. I played innocent and says, That's right I didn't, did I? Well, about that time the horse began to show his spirit and I let him show it.

"Pretty soon we were bowling along at a nice clip and the rest of the procession was falling back. Another knock at the window and the minister tells me to slow down and again insists that he thinks I never drove in funeral procession before.

I cast a glance over my shoulder and the procession was catching up, so I didn't bother to slow down at all. Well, I'm willing to bet that no funeral procession ever made any better time to the cemetery than that one. When we arrived at the cemetery the horses were white with lather.

"Bill, who was a coupla hacks in back of me, comes up. 'Hey, kid,' says he, 'what do you mean by driving like h——? Think we was going to a fire?' Yeah, says I, that's what the minister wanted to know. 'Well, what business is it of his? asks Bill.

"I told Bill he didn't have to drive fast but that my horse was kind of green and wanted to run. Well, Bill didn't believe that but he says nothing only to take it easy going back.

"I'll never forget that funeral, but I never drove the leading hack again."

NORWICH GIRLS PLAY RETURN GAME TONIGHT AT Y. M. C. A.

The Norwich Girls will meet their second New London foe inside of a week when they square off with the Y. W. C. A. team from the Whaling City tonight at the Y gym. One of the banner games of the season is expected as the visitors hold one of the three decisions over the locals this year.

The Y. W.'s handed it to the Norwich outfit in New London early in the season by a small margin and that defeat has bothered Miss Streeter's girls ever since. They are determined to avenge it with a much worse defeat tonight. All of the Norwich regulars, including O'Hart, Manty, Ksiazek, Gadbois, are slated to be in the lineup.

A game for the Y Seniors was in the works late Wednesday night but had not materialized at press time. Coach Howie Demarest spent the day in search of a first-class opponent without avail but has hopes of scheduling one today. If not there will be a preliminary between junior teams starting around 8 o'clock.

SOCCER TITLE TO BE DECIDED ON SUNDAY

The title in the Eastern Connecticut Soccer league will be decided next Sunday afternoon at Putnam when the Plainfield team and the National Rhea Co. teams clash. At the present time the J. B. Martin team is leading by a single point, J. B. Martin having nine points and the Plainfield team eight. If Plainfield wins from Putnam they will have 10 points, as a win counts two points, but if they lose the Velvetmen will retain first place. Should the game result in a tie score, Plainfield and the Martin teams would be tied at 9 points each, as a tie counts one point in the scoring. This is one of the important games of the season and a large crowd will be on hand to see it.

H. D. H.'S DEFEAT ELITE IN SECOND ROUND

In the first game of the second round of the pocket billiard tournament last night at the Recreation the H. D. H.'s defeated the Elite club 100 to 84. It was a see-saw game and the lead changed frequently. Neither team had much of a lead until Frank Higgins stepped out with a run of 10 and put the winners 13 balls in front. With the score 99 to 84 Mike Butry attempted a combination. He missed the shot and left the winning ball hanging at the corner pocket. Francis Donovan then ran out for the winners. The features of the evening were the runs of Lamitie and Harris the rival captains. Each had high runs of 14 but Higgins and Donovan made more counters than D. Angelos and Butry.

JOCK COLLINS, LITTLE KNOWN PRO, TAKES FIRST MONEY AT ST. PETERSBURG

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., March 5—(AP)—Jock Collins, Daytona golfing professional stepped out in front of a strong field in the 18 hole final round of the $2,500 St. Petersburg open tournament over the Jungle Country club course here today to turn in a low 68 and capture the first prize money of $1,000.

Collins, unsung amid the golfers' winter army, tacked his 68 up beside a 73 turned in over the difficult Lakewood Estates course yesterday for a total of 141. It was the first winter tournament the Dayton sharpshooter has taken and his victory today came as a surprise to hundreds of spectators, who followed others around as Collins, alone and unhampered, methodically went about the business of playing exact golf.

Jock knocked one off par for the course today, getting in his stride near the end. He tabulated four birdies, eleven par holes and three in one over par for his round this afternoon.

Gene Sarazen, Fresh Meadow, L. I., however, turned in the stellar performance of the day, carding a 67, two under par, but his 77 of yesterday pushed him down into a three-way tie for sixth place, with Fairly Clark, Savannah, Ga., and Billy Burke, Greenwich, Conn.

Following behind Collins in the order of money winners came Horton Smith, Cragston, N. Y., and Frank Walsh, Chicago, who chalked up totals for the tournament of 142. They divided second and third money, getting $400 each.

Joe Turnesa, Elmsford, N. Y., and Tony Manero, unattached, New York, came next with 143's to split fourth and fifth place money, each receiving $150. Behind them were Sarazen, Clark and Burke, who divided sixth, seventh and eighth place money, each getting $58.33 for their scores of 144.

Louis Chiapetta, Clearwater, Fla., rang up a 145 to win the ninth place purse of $50 while Densmore Shute, Columbus, Ohio, came in with 146 to take tenth money of $25. Bill Thompson, Canton, Ohio, Henry Bontempo, Springfield, Mass., and Bobby Cruickshank, Purchase, N. Y., brought up the rear of the money winners with 147's to get $16.66 each.

Sarazen took an additional $50 for turning in the lowest score over the Jungle Country club course with his 67, while Smith, Turnesa and Walsh divided the purse for the lowest scores over the Lakewood Estates course, their 71's netting them $16.66 each.

SON TAKES ALLEY RECORD HELD BY HIS FATHER

For a number of years the alley record at the Taftville Bowling alleys has been held by the veteran Chip Dugas with a string of 179. The other night his son, Chip Junior, came through with a mighty effort and wrested the honor from his father by rolling 180. The boy is fast becoming one of the best bowlers in Taftville and bids fair to surpass his teacher.

HIGH SCHOOL SPORTS

Buck LaCroix and Jack Marks, former Academy athletes, are on the freshman wrestling and track teams, respectively, at William and Mary college. Jack is specializing in the 440-yard dash.

West Hartford high started baseball practice last Saturday. Their star pitcher of the last few seasons, Art Boisseau, has graduated.

The drum in the new Academy band will have painted a wildcat on one side and the name of the school on the other.

The Academy track team expects to get outdoors in a week or so. At the present time there is still a little frost in the ground at the campus but a few warm days will dispose of this. The squad, or rather, the relay team, has two more indoor meets, both next week, Monday they go to Hartford and Wednesday to the Kacey meet in New York.

The list of teams that are to compete in the basketball tournaments will be announced Saturday at a meeting in New Haven of the Connecticut Interscholastic association. Windham is the only Eastern Connecticut school that has a chance of being named for the Yale tourney and then that's only a slight one.

There is a strong possibility that within another year or so Connecticut will be divided into four strong interscholastic leagues and a champion of the state will have a real basis for its claim. First of all there are the two old loops, the Eastern and Central Connecticut, the third is that recently formed in Naugatuck Valley and which includes the Bridgeport and Waterbury schools in addition to Naugatuck, Torrington, Ansonia and Gilbert. The fourth, and one that should be just as strong, would include the New Haven and Hartford schools and New Britain. What a series of games the winners of the respective leagues should put up!

CHAMPIONSHIP BOUT HAS BEEN DECLARED OFF

NEW YORK, March 5.—(AP)—Negotiations were definitely abandoned today for a middleweight championship match here, March 24, between Mickey Walker, the titleholder and Rene DeVos, European champion, Jack Kearns, manager of the titleholder refused to accept the percentages offered.

An attempt will be made to match Johnny Risko, who once was ruled "too small" by the commission with Victorio Campolo, the Argentine giant, in a return engagement on the March 24 date. After the commission refused to sanction the bout here, Risko and Campolo fought a furious draw in the semi-final to the Sharkey-Scott fiasco at Miami, Florida.

Plympton Beats Baker.

In a special pocket billiard match at Hickey's billiard parlors last night, Harold Plympton, local cue wizard, defeated Baker, Jewett City champion, 100 to 68. Plympton had several high runs and Baker was unable to overcome the big lead piled up by Plympton early in the match. Hickey's Five are open to challenges for any teams of three or five men.

Bowling Challenge

The Rock Water Soda company bowling team challenges the Mulligans of Taftville for a bowling match to be rolled any time that the Mulligans can get together. The Rock Water team claims the championship of the hill in that class.

YESTERDAY IN THE TRAINING CAMPS

Reds.

ORLANDO, Fla., March 5.—(AP)—Dan Howley today sent his Cincinnati Reds through their first batting practice of the training season and smiled when Harry Heilmann and Bob Meusel, long distance sluggers, acquired from the American league, drove many pitches to the scoreboard.

Cuccinello, Stripp, Dressen and Riconda, third base candidates, all took turns at the hot corner during infield practice.

The pitchers were put through an hour's drill covering first base on infield hits.

Cards.

BRADENTON, Fla., March 5.—(AP)—Today was full of action at the St. Louis Cardinals' spring training camp. Manager Gabby Street sent his pitchers through an hour and a half of various forms of exercises during the morning and held fielding practice for the youngsters during which Eddie Delker shined at short. In the afternoon batting practice the regular infield with only Frisch missing, went through a snappy workout.

Pirates

PASO ROBLES, Cal., March 5—(AP)—The Pittsburgh Pirates got in a little practice today but a rain-soaked field precluded anything but the lightest form of exercises.

Determined to avert two straight days of indoor existence, Manager Jewel Ens sent his squad out for calisthenics and some catching and tossing.

Dodgers

CLEARWATER, Fla., March 5—(AP)—Four more pitchers joined the Brooklyn training squad today but they didn't do much to stop the hitting in the daily practice game. Ray Moss, Jim Faulkner, Adolfo Luque and Arthur McKay arrived. Moss still is a holdout but expects to settle his salary difference with the Robin management soon.

Despite the large number of pitchers, a total of 30 hits were garnered in the contest betwen the regulars and the irregulars. Young Mickey Finn led the irregulars to their second straight victory, by clouting a double and two singles to drive in five runs.

Yankees

ST. PETERSBURGH, Fla., March 5—(AP)—The New York Yankees went about their batting practice in a big way today, every one of the 16 pitchehs on the Yankee roster took his turn in flinging the ball across the plate for the batters to hit or miss. Herb Pennock led the hurling brigade, bearing down a trifle for the first time, and displayed good control among his other assets.

Today's results were so good that Manager Bob Shawkey added another contest to tomorrow's program as a sort of side show for the financial game in which Babe Ruth and Col. Jacob Ruppert expect to engage. The Yanks will hold their first intra-squad practice game.

Giants

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., March 5—(AP)—The New York Giants had their last day of "just practice' today before the start of the spring barnstorming campaign, a squad of 16 players, mainly the youngsters of the squad, will go to Austin tomorrow to open the exhibition series against the University of Texas.

Two more arrivals today left only five members of the Giant squad missing. Fred Leach and Johnny Mostil, former White Sox outfielder whom Manager McGraw rescued from Toledo joined the squad leading Lindstrom, Terry, Denton, Roush and O'Farrell the only absentees.

Browns

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla., March 5.—(AP)—The St. Louis Browns' training squad was augmented for practice today by the first field appearance of Melillo, Schulte and O'Rourke.

Manager Killefer took full advantage of a warm day to send the players through a stiff practice session. Seven players still were missing from camp, but only three of them, Kress, Manush and Blaeholder, are causing worry. None of them has yet signed a contract.

The work of Pitchers Johnny Ogden and Herman Holshouser, a recruit from Baltimore, pleased Boss Killefer.

Tigers

TAMPA, Fla., March 5.—(AP)—Manager Bucky Harris of the Detroit Tigers believes that George Rensa, who was with Toronto in 1929, and Bill Steinecke, who came up from Seattle, are the best two young catchers he ever has seen.

He said so today after revealing that he has given a considerable part of his attention to the activities of these two young men who have been in training here for ten days.

REGIONAL PLANS URGED TO DEVELOP CITY ROADS

DETROIT —(AP)— Regional master plans for cities are urged by Col. Sidney D. Waldon, president of the Detroit rapid transit commission, to keep step with increasing traffic needs

"We have built the world's greatest system of highways up to the gates of our great centers—and there they stop," he said.

"Our cities are destined to grow through generation after generation. Already the farmer has the edge over the city dweller and the farther from a city the greater the pleasure in a motor ride."

Recommended master plans would be superior to municipal and county boundaries and include super-highways of 204 and 120-foot right of ways, with double or single 40-foot roadways.

"Hallo, where have you been?"

"To the station to see my wife off for a month's holiday."

"But how black your hands are!"

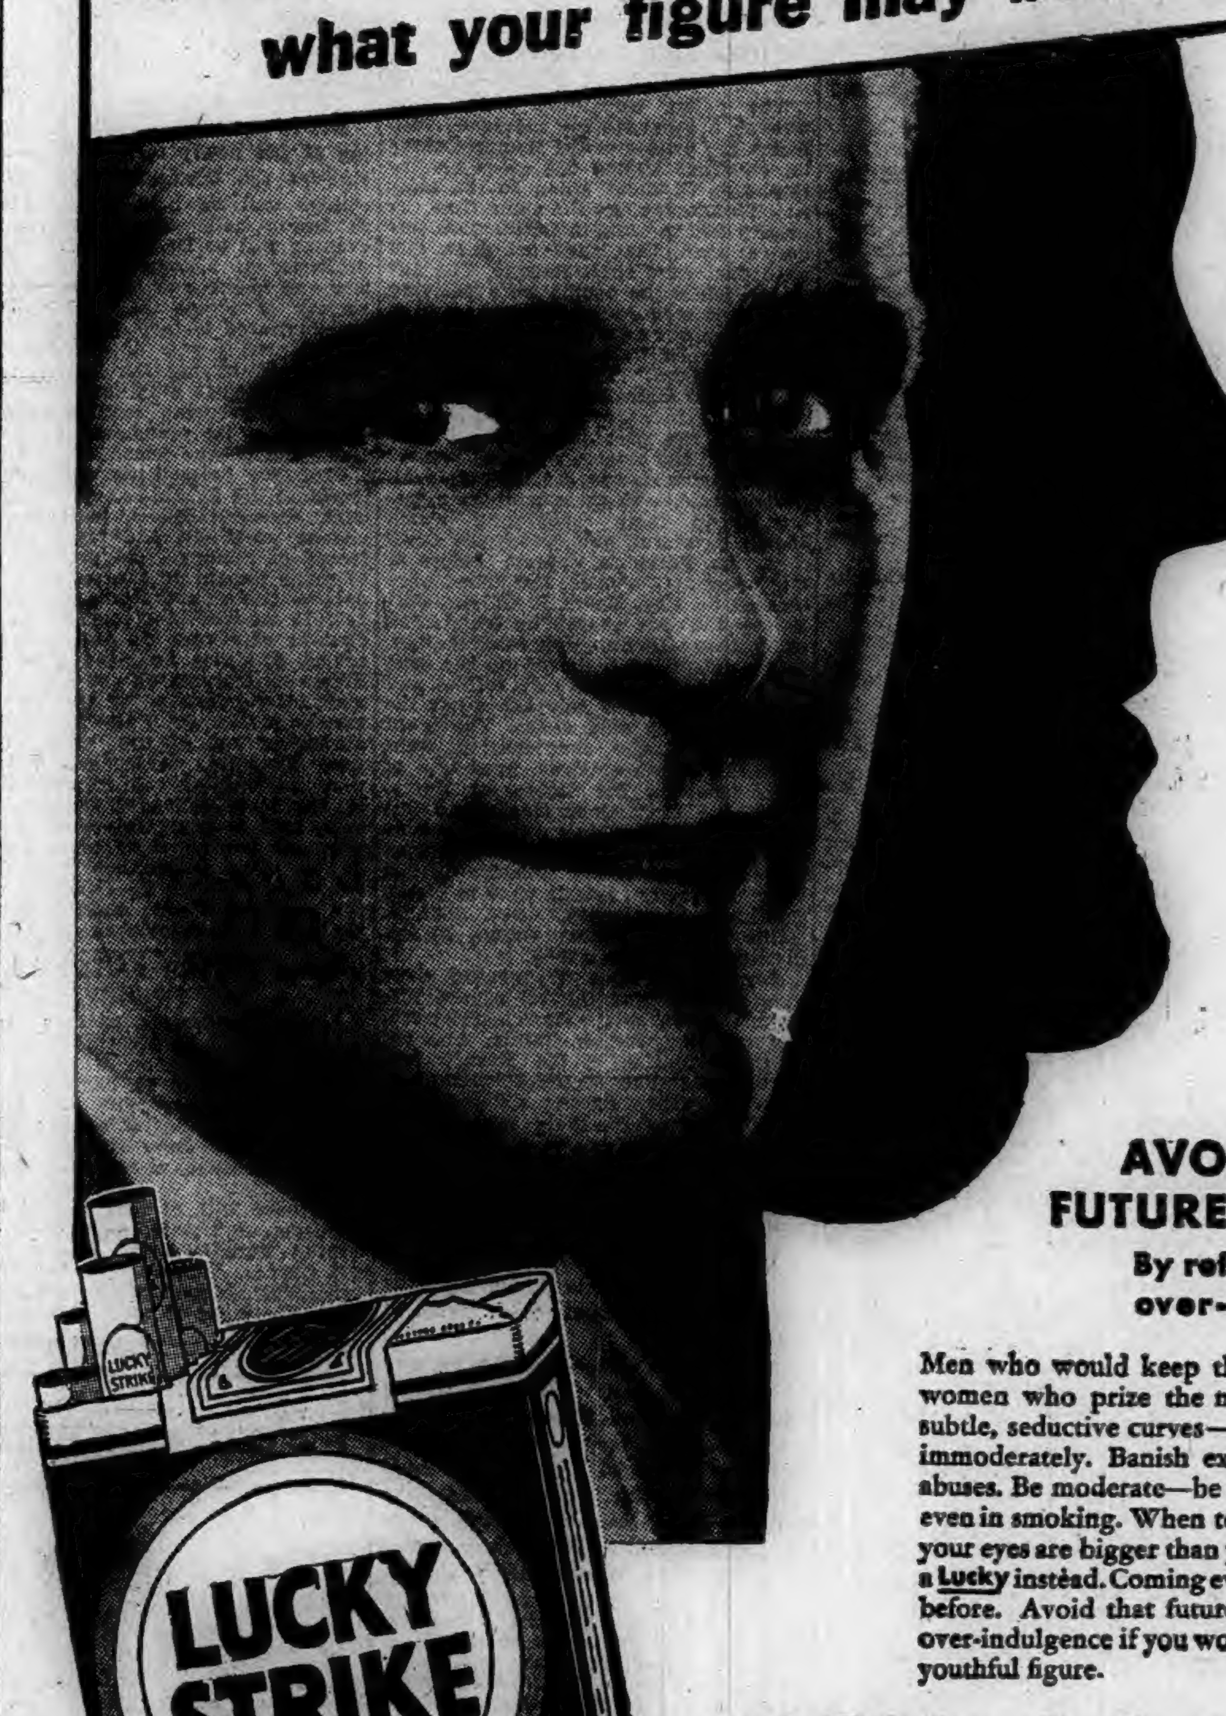
THE SHOCK OF FACING
what your figure may become

"Coming events cast their shadows before"



AVOID THAT FUTURE SHADOW*
By refraining from over-indulgence

Men who would keep that trim, proper form, women who prize the modern figure with its subtle, seductive curves—eat healthfully but not immoderately. Banish excessiveness—eliminate abuses. Be moderate—be moderate in all things, even in smoking. When tempted to excess, when your eyes are bigger than your stomach, reach for a Lucky instead. Coming events cast their shadows before. Avoid that future shadow by avoiding over-indulgence if you would maintain that lithe, youthful figure.

Lucky Strike, the finest Cigarette a man ever smoked, made of the finest tobacco—The Cream of the Crop—"IT'S TOASTED." Everyone knows that heat purifies and so "TOASTING" not only removes impurities but adds to the flavor and improves the taste.

"It's toasted"

Your Throat Protection—against irritation—against cough.

*Be Moderate! . . . Don't jeopardize the modern form by drastic diets, harmful reducing girdles, fake reducing tablets or other quack "anti-fat" remedies condemned by the Medical profession! Millions of dollars each year are wasted on these ridiculous and dangerous nostrums. Be Sensible! Be Moderate! We do not represent that smoking Lucky Strike Cigarettes will bring modern figures or cause the reduction of flesh. We do declare that when tempted to do yourself too well, if you will "Reach for a Lucky" instead, you will thus avoid over-indulgence in things that cause excess weight and, by avoiding over-indulgence, maintain a modern, graceful form.

FORMER NORWICH MAN DIED FROM EXPOSURE

James Coughlin, 48, of Worcester, Mass., died at a Keene, N. H., hospital, Tuesday morning, from the effects of exposure suffered a week ago. He was a former resident of Norwich, having removed to Worcester with his family several years ago.

Mr. Coughlin for the past two weeks had been employed in Swansey, N. H., and on Feb. 26 was returning to Keene, N. H., from his place of employment. While crossing a railroad bridge he thought he heard a train approaching and in looking around stumbled, fell off the bridge and landed on the embankment of a stream 20 feet below. He was rendered unconscious in the fall.

Several hours afterwards Mr. Coughlin regained consciousness, but was unable to move and remained there until the next day when he was discovered by a passerby. He was rushed to the hospital in Keene, where he lingered until his death.

The body was brought to this city Tuesday, and burial took place in Poquetanuck cemetery.

Mr. Coughlin is survived by his widow and a son, Earle Coughlin in Worcester, who was one of the original members of the Duwell Athletic association and two sisters living in Norwich. His many Norwich friends learned of his death with profound sorrow and their sympathy is extended to the family in their time of bereavement.

EDUCATIONAL MOVIES SHOWN AT ROTARY CLUB SESSION

Two films, The History of Transportation, and The Development of the Incandescent Lamp furnished through the courtesy of The General Electric Co., were shown at the meeting of the Norwich Rotary club Wednesday noon. The very pleasant educational program was in charge of Charles W. Taggart who was assisted by Earl Taggart.

The first film showed the progress of transportation from the days of the Indian on the log, through its various stages until the present day of the electric driven boat. The other film showed the development of the incandescent lamp from the first one developed by Edison until today when we have the high powered tubes and lamps.

Another pleasant feature of the program was the novelty concert given by A. C. Wright, of the gas and electric department, who played a number of selections on a small 15 cent whistle. Mr. Wright's program included both classical and popular numbers.

At the business session President Frank R. Murdy was in charge with F. Russell Smith and Frank G. Aubrey as song leaders. There was a duet number by C. A. Gager and Chris Gallup, Norwich's representatives in a recent bridge tournament. There were solos by President Murdy and Henry J. LaFontaine. Harold D. Larrabee made announcement of the 20th anniversary dinner at Washington of the Boy Scouts of America.

The meeting closed with the singing of The Star Spangled Banner.

DELVING INTO DISAPPEARANCE OF TURNER-STANTON BOOKS

A third hearing behind closed doors was conducted Wednesday at the court of common pleas room in the court house by State Police Commissioner Robert T. Hurley of Hartford in his investigation into the suspicious origin of the fire at the Turner-Stanton plant on the night of Jan. 25 and of the mysterious disappearance of the company's books. Among the witnesses to appear before the commissioner were William S. Huber, former bookkeeper at the plant, and his wife, and Hibberd N. Alexander, an accountant of New London, who checked over the books at the request of state police.

It has come to light that a federal man from Boston was at the plant a few days before the fire, checking up the company's books for government reports and found that many of them were put away in the attic, it is said. The federal man, it is said, made arrangements with Mr. Huber, head bookkeeper, to inspect the books on a later date, when they were put into shape for such an inspection.

To Preach at Grace Church

Rev. J. Romeyn Danforth of New London will be the special guest preacher at the Friday evening service at Grace Episcopal church, Yantic.

MERCHANTS MOVE TO PUT NORWICH ON AIR OVER STATION WTIC

The executive committee of the merchants bureau of the Norwich chamber of commerce met Wednesday afternoon at the chamber of commerce rooms for the purpose of considering a proposition of a radio broadcast of historic and industrial Norwich, over a period of 10 weeks from station WTIC, Hartford. The members present were James F. Fleming, president of the bureau; J. P. Savard, John P. Lyston, Frank Hempstead, Herbert B. Cary, John P. Morley, Charles Barker and Glen Merithew.

Secretary Richardson of the chamber reported to the meeting of his experience in the preparation and presentation of the Mohawk Valley historical travelogue broadcast from WGY and sponsored by a well known packing company.

Mr. Richardson read several of the manuscripts of that series and pointed out to the committee the value of such a programme to the city of Norwich and what it would mean in putting Norwich before an audience of 7,000,000 persons in the states of New Jersey, Pennsylvania, New York, the New England states and Canada.

It was Mr. Richardson's opinion that in no other way could the Norwich merchants and business interests reach out for a large tourist season than through such a programme as this project would embrace. The secretary also pointed out to the committee the wonderful historic background of Norwich, which of itself would attract a great army of the touring public. In addition, he said, Norwich has a scenic background of natural beauty that would add both color and interest to the programme, which, if known beyond the limits of the state, would further Norwich as a city that has much to offer to the sight seeing motorist.

The plan contemplates a half hour major programme broadcasting period with a background of 11 musicians and a leader. The programme would be further accentuated by the publicity of the Hartford station which sends its programme to 400 newspapers throughout the country. For all applause letters received a booklet of Norwich would be mailed. This method will enable Norwich to get before the people of other sections with its story of historic romance, Indian lure, scenic beauty and industrial importance.

In commenting on this undertaking President Fleming said he feels that no project would do more to advertise Norwich than the proposed radio programme. He also feels that to the mercantile interests this project would bring a large tourist business for the coming season and in addition would have a direct bearing on industrial development.

If the broadcast programme is put into effect there will be two characters in the weekly sketch, the schoolmaster and the old doctor who will reveal during the 10 weeks the programme is to run, the many incidents of historical importance that have occurred in the city and surrounding country, all told in a semi-humorous vein.

The committee decided that the radio broadcast should be carried out with the result that President Fleming, Mr. Savard, Mr. Morley and Mr. Richardson met in session Wednesday evening to formulate plans for raising the necessary funds to finance the broadcasting programme. The committee expressed the opinion that this is the biggest thing Norwich has ever attempted to put across. It will put Norwich on the map, said Mr. Fleming.

Due to the shortness of time, Secretary Richardson advised the committee of the necessity of immediate action as five manuscripts must be prepared before the programmes can be put on the air. The arrangements with station WTIC were negotiated last week through Eben Learned, Sr., Eben Learned, Jr., and Frank Fagan who accompanied Secretary Richardson to the Hartford broadcasting studio.

The committee concluded that this idea offers Norwich an opportunity for promotion that will appeal to every man, woman and child who has an appreciation of their city and that will be of special interest to the merchants of Norwich in making a bid to the great army of American tourists who might otherwise travel on but who, hearing the story of Norwich, would linger on.

PENITENTIAL SEASON BEGINS AT ST. PATRICK'S

The palms remaining from Palm Sunday are burned for the ashes with which the priests of the Roman Catholic churches signed the cross on the foreheads of those going to the altar Ash Wednesday. At the same time the priests said to each, in Latin, "Remember, O man, that thou art dust, and unto dust thou shalt return." The antiphon while the people were receiving the ashes was Joel 2, beginning, "Let us change our garments for ashes and sackcloth; let us fast and lament before the Lord." The various prayers all enjoined amendment, contrition and self-denial in atonement for the evil-doing of the past year. The epistle read in all the masses was Joel 2:12-19 and the gospel was Matthew 6:16-21, Christ's rebuke to those who are hypocritical in their repentance, which should be secret, and before the Lord.

At St. Patrick's church, before a low mass at 8 o'clock, the ashes were blessed by Rev. Myles P. Galvin. Following the last gospel, by instruction of Father Galvin, the congregation, in a solid phalanx, moved up the center aisle to the sanctuary railing and after receiving the holy ashes left the church by the side aisles. The adult members of the congregation went first, the parish children, in charge of their teachers, the Sisters of Mercy, remaining until their elders had left the church before they went to receive the penitential ashes. The organ was mute and the altars unadorned; the vestments of the priests were in violet, the hue of penitence. Rev. John J. Reilly assisted Father Galvin in the distribution of the ashes.

For the services Wednesday evening, Rev. James Barrett of the Immaculate Conception church, Hartford, assisted Rev. Father Galvin, who led in the recitation of the Rosary and gave Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament. Father Barrett aided in the distribution of the holy ashes. The service drew out the customary great congregation.

COMPLIMENTARY DINNER FOR L. M. CRANDALL

A group of Boston insurance agents on Monday gave a complimentary dinner at Boston to Louis M. Crandall of this city.

The dinner was sponsored by two of the oldest and largest agencies of the New England Mutual Life Insurance company in the United States, and was arranged especially to hear an address by Mr. Crandall. The plans for the dinner were under the direction of the Moore & Summers agency and the Curtis agency members, who attended the company's convention in Biloxi, Miss., in February, where Mr. Crandall was one of the speakers.

This is one of the many invitations that have come to Mr. Crandall as the result of his breaking the company's best one-day record since 1845, and as the result of his having won for the fourth time the company's coveted Tiffany medal for special merit and efficiency, and in addition to his holding the 18th position among the company's 100 leading agents in America up to date this year.

Mr. Crandall spoke for one hour, holding the attention of his listeners, who were greatly interested in his message. His subject was "Sales Practices, Prospecting and Controlling an Interview". At the conclusion of his talk he was given a tremendous ovation by the enthusiastic insurance men. After his lecture, Mr. Crandall stood for an hour, answering some of the hard questions which were perplexing to the insurance men in New England. This talk was the eighth Mr. Crandall has delivered in Boston.

Mr. Crandall says he learns much about business and trust insurance from his visits to these large agencies, as they are composed of the most efficient underwriters, many of whom are very large producers. He is still maintaining his application or more a week. This is his eighth year of producing one to 35 applications each week without missing a week. He has been assigned a million dollar quota for this year and has maintained his weekly allotment by writing more than $20,000 a week, up to date this year. Two weeks illness in January and a two weeks trip to New Orleans in February did not upset his application or more a week record.

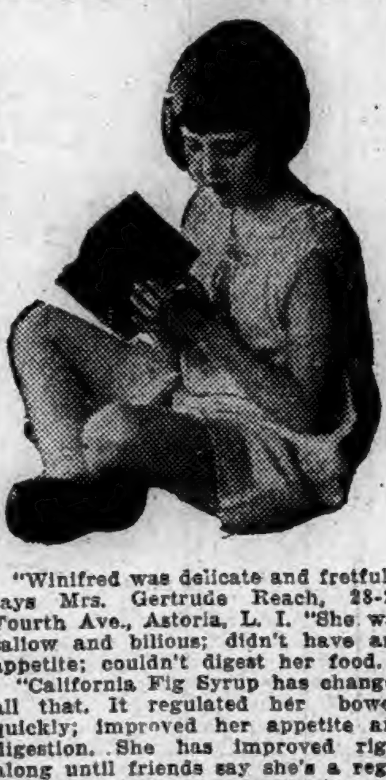
Prize Winner



"Winifred was delicate and fretful," says Mrs. Gertrude Reach, 28-24 Fourth Ave., Astoria, L. I. "She was sallow and bilious; didn't have any appetite; couldn't digest her food.

"California Fig Syrup has changed all that. It regulated her bowels quickly; improved her appetite and digestion. She has improved right along until friends say she's a regular prize-winner for health."

Mothers by thousands praise California Fig Syrup. Physicians endorse it. Its rich, fruity flavor appeals to children; its pure vegetable goodness is safe for any child. The prompt relief it brings bilious, headachy, constipated children lasts; because it helps tone and strengthen bowels and stomach. Next time bad breath, coated tongue or feverishness warn of constipation, try it with your child and see how it helps!

When buying, look for the name California! That marks the genuine, famous for 50 years.

RIOTOUS COMMUNISTS IN NEW YORK PUT TO FLIGHT

Disorder Was Incited By Fiery Orators — Demonstration Started In Orderly Fashion With Four Speakers Shouting At the Crowds At the Same Time—When the Communists Leaders Urged Their Followers to Defy the Police, Firemen and National Guardsmen, Unarmed, Aided the Police In Putting the "Reds" On the Run.

NEW YORK, March 6—(AP)—Incited by fiery orators several hundred communists turned a peaceful unemployment demonstration into a riot in Union square today when they attempted to storm through police lines in defiance of orders not to parade. They precipitated a riot in which Police Commissioner Grover Whalen took part, night-stick swinging.

More than 40,000 other persons, attracted to the square through curiosity, became innocent victims of the police rushes that followed and scores were injured. Almost a hundred persons, including three policemen were taken to hospitals.

Six of the communist leaders, including William Z. Foster, organizer of the unemployment demonstration, were arrested on charges of inciting riot.

The demonstration, which started in the square at noon, progressed for more than two hours in an orderly fashion while four and sometimes five speakers were shouting at the crowds at the same time. It was very much like a carnival.

Police Commissioner Whalen had set up temporary headquarters in the square within earshot of the speakers, and the surrounding streets were lined with mounted and foot police, armored motorcycles and emergency wagons.

Having been refused permission to march from the square to city hall to present a petition to Mayor Walker, the communists leaders leaped to the speaking platforms and urged their excited followers to defy the police.

A movement westward into Broadway from the square plaza by a squad of communists carrying placards [illegible] initially turned the peaceful gathering into turmoil, in which police emergency trucks, machine guns and tear gas bombs were swinging into the scene.

Police and detectives closed in but were met by resistance as the communists attempted to break through. Fighting occurred all over the square.

When the crowd broke to the sidewalk, mounted policemen and the motorcycles kept in pursuit and the square was quickly cleared, and the fighting soon ended.

Firemen and a squad of national guardsmen, unarmed, helped the police in dispersing the throng. Clubs, paving blocks and other weapons were used by the communists.

Commissioner Whalen placed the blame of the riot entirely upon Foster and the other communist leaders. He called Thomas C. T. Crain, district attorney, and requested that complaints of conspiracy and inciting to riot be drafted against the leaders.

"It is time that stop was put to these disgraceful displays of lawlessness and disorder," the commissioner said. "We will see that these reds get what is coming to them."

During the whole day guards were maintained at city hall, the rail terminals, churches, banks and the homes of officials.

TEAR BOMB DISPERSED DISORDERLY COMMUNISTS

WASHINGTON, March 6—(AP)—The gas from a tiny tear bomb ended the heralded communistic demonstration in front of the white house today after fists had begun to fly.

Eleven demonstrators were arrested. Four of them and two policemen were slightly bruised in a fight within hailing distance of the office where President Hoover was busy at work.

Some 5,000 persons, many of them government workers away from their desks for lunch, were watching the communists taking part in the international observance of "unemployment day." The president had ordered that they be not disturbed unless they trespassed on federal property.

The demonstrators formed a small knot at the center of the crowd of onlookers, after a short time spent in parading back and forth. Many of them were Negroes.

William Lawrence, of Baltimore, a leader of the communists, sought to address his followers from a vantage point on the high iron fence which surround the white house. A patrolman and a detective forced him down and then the melee began.

Some of the police were hit and they retaliated with fists and nightsticks. One of their number dropped the tear bomb, and the fumes immediately caused a dispersal of the half-blinded, half-angry crowd. While some eyes were blackened in scuffles between the police and demonstrators, others were reddened by the gas.

During some of the excitement, Mrs. Hoover was receiving a group of the Daughters of the American Revolution in the white house. Some members of the organization watched the scene from the pavement.

Two of those arrested were women. Some were charged with assault and all with disorderly conduct. Arrangements for their release from police cells today were carried ahead tonight by Charles E. Ford, attorney for the International Labor Defense association.
